GRAIN MARKET

Corn prices came tumbling down yesterday on the Chicago market, following a report, in part confirmed by a Government official, that restrictions on the importation of corn from Argentina were to be immediately removed. TORTURING, ITCHING ECZEMA

Mrs. J. B. Horth, Pamphlet, Bonaventure Co., Que., writes:—"Thanks to Dr Chase's Ointment I have been completely cured of that horrible disease eczema. I was held as if in prison from going among other people, for I was ashamed of the raw, flaming sores. Doctors could do nothing for me and I was almost desperate with suffering when I began to use Dr Chase's Ointment. In one month I was completely cured and think that this was little short of a miracle."

Gift giving at Christmas time is, or ought to be, nothing more than a manifestation of the Christmas spirit, which is unselfish, seeking only to make others happy. Every one who has been moved by this spirit has realized the truth of the saying, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Use a little judgment in buying Christmas presents. Don't give your girl a pair of No. 8 boots, or purchase a looking glass for a blind aunt.

Mother and Two Children Brave the Terrors of War

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Few women, even among those who have lived through the worst horror of the great war, have experienced so many startling adventures, have endured such hardships or braved danger so fearlessly as Mrs. Samuel Shteinberg, who has arrived in New York, after travelling more than half way around the world with her two small children.

To look at her—young, with sparkling eyes and an ever ready smile—one would never suspect the sorrow and yearning she is hiding behind that cheerful mien or dream that a few weeks ago she was serving the Allied soldiers on the battle field in Siberia, nursing and even rescuing the wounded. When asked if she was afraid of the machine gun bullets and bursting shells her answer was prefaced with a smile and a shrug of the shoulders. "Afraid when one is helping the wounded? Ah, at such times one does not think of personal danger. The noise of bursting shells is like music. It is only the wounded for whom you are afraid."

The adventures of Mrs. Shteinberg, who for the time being is being cared for by the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America, began with the overthrow of the Romanoffs by the Bolsheviki. Her husband was manager of the Petrograd Bank in Moscow. When the Bolsheviki took over the banks he was forced to flee. In an effort to make arrangements with the National City Bank of New York to get his family out of Russia Mr. Shteinberg took a train to a neighbouring city.

Bombed by Bolsheviki.

The train was bombed by the Bolsheviki, and since then Madame Shteinberg has had no word from him. Though many of the passenzers escaped death, she does not know the facts of her husband, although she hopes for the best, and in fact, has come to America in search of him, thinking that perhaps he was able to get through without sending word to her.

The large house of the Shteinbergs fell as a prize to the Bolsheviki, and some of the leaders, ordering the mother and the two children out, made it their headquarters. Madame Shteinberg begged to be allowed to remain, and was finally assigned to a small room in the servants' quarters, where she lived for a while, but the drunken orgies of the revolutionists soon made it impossible to stay there.

Food was scarce and she had very little money. In order even to go into the street she had to have a permit, and this often was denied her. Her pleas to the Bolsheviki leaders that they help her to find her husband were laughed at. Thus she existed for weeks and then her chance came.

A trainload of wounded arrived in the city. Mrs. Shteinberg, who is a physician, having been on the faculty of the University of Moscow, immediately offered her services, and her work was so successful that through the influence of a physician she obtained a passport to Kazan. Arriving there with her two children, Alexander, five years old, and Miriam, seven, she found herself in the midst of the "bitter warfare" between the Czecho-Slovaks and the Bolsheviki. She immediately offered her services to the Czech-Slovaks as a nurse, and was accepted.

Wounded by Shrapnel.

Not content, however, with nursing behind the lines, she went out upon the battlefields and herself rescued the wounded and took them in. It was at this time that the shells sounded to her like music. Once she was wounded by a piece of shrapnel in the arm and did not discover it until several hours later, when someone told her of the blood dripping from her sleeve.

That did not stop her, however. She bound up the wound and continued her work on the battlefield. For her bravery she was awarded the Cross of the Order of St. Anna by the Czecho-Slovak general.

From Kazan she made her way to Vladivostock as nurse to a trainload of wounded men. In Vladivostock she also helped to nurse American soldiers. After that she nursed in various places where help was needed. Finally through the aid of a high Japanese official she was able to get to Japan, and from there made her way to San Francisco. Even on the steamship to San Francisco she had opportunity to serve as a nurse.

In explaining how she managed to take her children through all the danger unharmed, she said:

"Oh, the soldiers —they are very kind. When I was busy I let the soldiers take care of the children, and they did well, as you can see for yourself."

The boy saluted and the little girl made a graceful little courtesy.

OLYMPIC SAILS AGAIN.

Most of Five Thousand Passengers Will be Soldiers.

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—The steamship Olympic, carrying about five thousand passengers, most of whom are Canadian soldiers, sailed to-day from England, according to advices received by the Militia Department. She will, it is expected, arrive in Halifax in about five days. Although her port of departure is not given, it is likely that she sails from Southampton.

The Militia Department is all ready to receive the liner, and the railways are prepared to handle the great body of troops which will arrive on her. The department has not yet received advice of those on board by military districts.

Most of the sin on exhibition is anything but original.

SOLDIERS SEIZE POWER.

Danger of Military Despotism in Ch

The real Go of China, says John C. Fer , the Atlantic Monthly, has grad , but surely drifted into the hands of the military governors of the provinces. In some instances these have been men who had previous administrative experience, but they either have been holdover from the military regime of the Manchus or are men who came into prominence as leaders of the victorious republican troops in the revolution of 1911-1912. Some of them have been men with good education and with sound military training; there are other conspicuous instances of men who have attained their responsible position without education, without administrative experience and without any sound military training.

Their control over large bodies of soldiers has enabled them to terrorize and dominate the provinces. The worst condemnation of their administration, as a whole, is found in two facts: First, there is almost no instance of any constructive work for the good of the people which has been undertaken and carried to completion by any one of these men; second, practically every one of them has succeeded in accumulating a large fortune. During a long residence in China of 30 years I have seen no administration so inefficient or corrupt as that supplied by these military governors. They have been allowed to continue in office and augment their powers on account of the failure of the Central Government in Pekin to provide a permanent constitution.

The permanence of a republican form of goverament in China must now be taken for granted, even though for the moment the dominance of military leadership must also be recognized. The disturbances in the provinces show that this military usurpation cannot be permanent, and that China cannot be governed, either by her own people or from without, by any form of military despotism. The consent of the governed is a principle thoroughly ingrained in the past history and present aspirations of the Chinese people. This is a fact to be reckoned with by the contending elements in China, as well as by all foreign nations which have dealings with her. There is but little danger of such mob rule as that of Bolshevism. The present danger is confined solely to a monopoly of power on the part of military leaders.

A Gold Piece.

The $20 gold piece has had an interesting career, according to an authority. Jewelers melted it for their fine gold work some forty years ago and were very successful until the Government experts discovered the practice and stopped it. Following this, unscrupulous persons attempted to gather scrap gold by "sweating," or placing a number of coins in a bag and then shaking them violently, thus obtaining tiny particles of gold by friction. After these coins had been put through the "sweating" process it was an easy matter to pass them on unsuspecting tradesmen and banks, provided, of course, that the victims did not weigh the coin. The amount of gold scrap obtained by the "sweating" process was so small that the bags had to be burned to recover it.

MEN FAILED TO SALUTE OFFICERS ON NORTHLAND

If Food Was Sold, Officer Says It Would be Stolen—Not Enough Baths.

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—Capt. Raymond D. Blanford, London, Ont., adjutant to the O.C. troops on the Northland, was the first witness at yesterday's sitting of the Royal Commission inquiry into soldiers' treatment on that ship. He is an adjutant on the permanent conducting staff and had served on ten ships.

"To some extent," said Mr. Orde "you and your staff are on trial. What have you to say about what you have heard here?"

Capt. Blandford said that he was taken away from his regular staff, No. 8, and sent on the staff with the Northland because of his experience. The rest of the conducting staff was new. "I inspected the ship with the O.C.," he said, "and found that it was suited as a transport."

Feeling Ran High.

Asked as to conditions during the voyage, Captain Blandford said there was more or less disorder. The men, as an instance, insisted on going on the promenade deck, and the provost sergeants had difficulty at first in handling them. "Sergt. Smith, one of the provost sergeants, told me the feeling of the troops was so strong that after going through the Somme he didn't propose to take a chance of being thrown overboard."

The witness said 534 out of 946 other ranks were Forestry Battalion men. The conducting staff had nothing to do with managing different sections.

Waited For Report

"If the men weren't acting properly was there no responsibility on the conducting officers?"— "Not until the officers directly in charge reported that there was trouble."

"Do you wait for complaints?" —"Yes. The conducting staff supervises things, and if they are not done properly they see that they are put right."

"Unless someone reports the matter, discomforts may go on?" said the judge. The witness said the ship sergeant-major was always going around. The trouble with the men was that they did not tell their grievances to their officers.

"Did you visit the men at their meals?"—"No."

Clean and Sanitary.

"Did you visit the galley?"—"Yes, I accompanied the O.C. troops there four times. My casual observation was that it was clean and sanitary. No troops were employed there as was the case on several ships I had served."

Capt. Blandford said a sample meal had been laid out. He tasted it and it was all right. Asked about men in the hospital, he said they seemed happy.

"Were orders given against buying food from the crew?" —"Yes, they were issuer and read on parade. Every man was told to report at once any violation. The chief steward previously had told me he had detected three stewards selling food and intended to hale them before the captain. The only authorized place to buy food was the canteen."

"Is selling food by stewards unusual?"—"Not at all. It crops up on nearly every transport, and, as a consequence, there is shortage of rations."

Would Have to Steal.

"Where would they get the food to sell?"—"They would have to steal it from the ship's stores."

"From your experience as a conducting officer, do you think the ship had sufficient deck accommodation on this trip?"—"I don't think so, but it was not a matter that could be remedied by the O.C. troops. I refer to the covered promenade deck space."

"Did you hear complaints about lack of drinking water?"—"Yes." Witness said he took it up with the officers and it was promised that it would be supplied.

"How long occurred between the time it was first reported and the time the water came on?" —"Possibly 48 hours, but I think not. It is in regulations that troops should have water only at certain hours of the day."

"What about fatigues?" —"They are to be supplied by the troops."

Saw Telegram Man.

"When did you first learn of complaints by the men?"—"At the clearing depot in Halifax I was told by Col. Cram."

"Did you follow it up by seeing anyone?" —"Yes, I saw Mr. Chambers, a Toronto Telegram reporter."

"You went to see him?"—"Yes."

"Did you tell him there was no cause for complaint?" —"I don't know. We discussed many things."

"Do you remember the discussion?" —"Not all the details."

"Did he ask you questions?"—"A very great many."

"Did you admit shortage of food?" —"I may have."

"Did you admit shortage of water?" —"I don't recall."

"Did you tell him stewards had sold food for outrageous prices?"—"No."

Justice Hodgins—"Now, what do you mean by that?"—"I meant that I said nothing about outrageous prices."

"Did you say the officers in charge of the parties omitted to perform their duties?"—"I discussed the matter in a general way."

"Did you find the officers slack?" —"I did discuss what I considered slackness."—"Because they didn't salute?"—"No, because they were not as smart nor their quarters as clean as they should have been."

"How did you find Major Westmore as an O.C. troops?"—"I could not answer that without criticizing a superior."

"Did you tell Mr. Chambers that Major Westmore was green, and that you had to help him a lot?"—"No. He is the last man I would have made such a statement to."

"Did you talk to him about your reports to the department?"

Justice Hodgins—"I don't see that that will help us."

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How to Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acids and there is no sourness; gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

- THE WIFE -

BY JANE PHELPS

Mrs. Clayborne Arrives. Ruth and Brian Meet Her.

CHAPTER LXXXIII

The next day Ruth was visibly happy and excited.

"Something's happened! that fool husband of hers has been promising something; or doing something to make her happy," Arthur Mandel said to himself.

He was soon to know.

"Mr. Mandel, I am going to ask a favor," Ruth said during a lull in the morning's business.

"It is granted," he smiled at her.

"Wait until you know what it is," she returned. Her voice carried a joyous lilt. "I want to remain at home all day Saturday, please, unless you need me for something important."

"No indeed! but may I ask what it is that is going to happen on Saturday? You look so happy. No one has left you a great fortune, have they, so making you leave me altogether?"

"Oh, no! my aunt, Mrs. Clayborne, who mothered me always, is coming."

Then, impelled by the interest in his eyes fixed upon her, she added: "You know, she wouldn't come because I displeased her by taking a position. She is a little old-fashioned in her ideas of what is proper for a woman to do! and while she has written me regularly, she has refused to visit me because of my work."

"No wonder you want Saturday. Don' you want Monday as well?"

"No thank you. She may as well get accustomed to the idea of having a working woman for a niece. But I thought it would be rather lonely if I left her to-morrow, as she does no get in until seven o'clock to-night."

"How would this do for a quickly conceived plan? You work only mornings while she is here. Then you can lunch and shop and matinee together."

"That would be lovely! but—do you think you can spare me? She said in her letter she would only remain a few days."

"Didn't I propose it?" He was pleased that he could give her so much pleasure as he evidently had by his thoughtful arrangement.

"I am going to ask something more."

"Very well. It is also granted."

"If Aunt Louisa will—she may refuse, may I bring her into the shop, some day and let her see that my work isn't—degrading?" she had paused for a word, and they both smiled when she found one.

"I shall be delighted! and if she doesn't quite disapprove of the place, and so be prejudiced against the proprietor, perhaps you will allow me the pleasure of showing my respect by taking you both to lunch."

"That is being altogether too kind," Ruth objected, but her eyes shone. It would be delightful for her aunt to be entertained even for one meal by a man who knew so well how to do things.

"It will be kind of me," he returned, "But we must not think too much about it! Your aunt may refuse to have anything to do with me or mine," he indicated the shop.

"She would not if she knew you." The words were spoken without though, and Ruth blushed violently as she realized that perhaps Mandel would think they meant more than she had intended But with his usual sang froid, he bowed and replied:

"I hope she will be persuaded."

Ruth was delighted with the plan he had outlined for her. Her aunt never had been an early riser. Rachel would take her breakfast to her room long before she and Brian had left the house. Then her aunt would slowly dress—as was her custom—and amuse herself by reading or taking a short walk until luncheon Rachel with her, and though Ruth knew the old negress would be questioned, she really had no fear she would tell anything that would hurt her.

Dinner was postponed that night until seven-thirty. Brian came home at the usual time and "tiltivated up" as he called it.

"When a man's wife's relatives visit him, it's up to him to put his best foot forward," he laughingly remarked as he commenced to shave.

"You're a dear to think of it!" Ruth replied.

Just then the bell rang and some flowers were delivered to Rachel.

"Oh, Brian! how beautiful!" Ruth exclaimed delighted, she had opened the box and then ran to kiss him.

"Be careful there!" he grumbled. "You'll make me cut myself."

The little apartment had quite a festive air as they left for the train. The very best linen and dishes had been used to make the table attractive; and the deep crimson dahlias gave just the touch the dining room always needed—always "responded to" as Ruth expressed it.

The train was on time, and Mrs. Clayborne was pleased to be very loving toward Ruth; very gracious to Brian. Ruth consequently bubbled over with enthusiasm.

"Here we are!" she said to her aunt as the cab stopped at their door. "I do hope you will love my home."

To-morrow—Mrs. Clayborne Graciously Accepts Mr. Mandel's Invitation.

STRASBOURG.

Capital of Alsace-Lorraine Liberated By the French.

"Strasbourg was a town of Germany, the capital of the imperial province of Alsace-Lorraine, and a fortress of the first rank." So the guidebooks used to describe it, and they would assuredly go on to tell that it is situated in a fertile plain at the junction of the Ill and the Breusch, some 370 miles southwest of Berlin, and thirty miles east of the French frontier. After all, such a description, for conciseness, at any rate, could not well be improved upon; but there is a wealth of story behind it all. The Ill and the Breusch, as they have flowed together at Strasbourg through all the centuries, have seen much history. They are undoubtedly the oldest fortures in the old town, although their actual waters may have been ever the most transient of visitors. They were there before Strasbourg. They were there when the Roman legions marched through the passes of the Vosges on to the "fertile plain," and captured the Celtic settlement which spread itself over the land where Strasbourg now stands, and they are there to-day, joining hands, and moving on together towards the Rhine.

The Romans, as was so generally their custom, replaced the Celtic settlement with a fortified station. They gave it the name of Argentoratum, and in after years it became an important military post, and the headquarters of the Eighth Legion. It was here that the Emperor Julian, for a time, in the Fourth century, stemmed the tide of the barbarian invasion by a decisive victory over the Alemanni; but, about fifty years afterwards, Argentoratum and the whole district now called Alsace fell into the hands of that people. Later on, towards the end of the fifth century, the town passed into the possession of the Franks, and it was the Franks who gave it its present name. Christianity, of course, came with Clovis, the Frank; and it was chiefly in consequence of its ecclesiastical difficulties that Strasbourg gained such prominence in medieval times. The Bishops of Strasbourg were princes of the church, not at all given to democratic views, and they early fell foul of the good citizens of the town. Strasbourg had prospered as the years had passed. Its citizens had grown wealthy, and the more the bishop tried to assert his authority the more firmly were the citizens convinced that such ecclesiastical rule was inconsistent with their full development. And so from protest added to protest they went to open warfare. The conflict was finally decided, by the battle of Oberhausbergen, in favor of the citizens, in 1262, and Strasbourg gained a full recognition of its position as a free imperial city, a status which had been conferred upon it by the German King, Henry of Swabia.

Once freed from the dominance of the church, Strasbourg set about organizing an internal revolution. Its citizens had always favored the democratic view of things, and the Government of the city was not democratic enough to satisfy them, so, towards the middle of the fourteenth century, they secured the admission of the guilds to the municipal councils. Thereafter, Strasbourg flourished more than ever, and when it had to make the choice between the old and the reformed religion, in the sixteenth century, it listened readily to the preaching of Martin Luther, accepted the teachings of the Reformation, and, through all the troubles which followed, was peculiarly immune from the miseries endured by so many of its neighbors, far and near. So its history comes down to the memorable day, in 1681, when Louis XIV. marched against the city, and not only seized it, but, in spite of all protests, kept possession of it, and had his title confirmed and recognized by the Peace of Ryswick, in 1697. The next great incident in the history of Strasbourg was its siege and capture by the Prussians, in the Franco-Prussian War of 1870-1. The siege lasted seven weeks, and the city, with its garrison of 17,000 men, finally surrendered, on Sept. 28, 1870. As to the rest of the story, the world is perhaps more generally familiar with it than with the story of most cities.

Woman In Medicine.

During the past year there were 130 women studying medicine, or thirty-nine less than last year, a decrease of forty below 1911 and a decrease of 207 below 1910. The percentage of women students to the total number of medical students was 3.8 as compared with 1.2 last year. There were 154 women graduates this year, or 3.8 per cent. of all graduates. There has been a very marked decrease in the number of women in medicine since 1910, when here were 907 women students and 157 graduates.

Too Trying For White Men.

While men as pearl divers off the coast of Australia have proved impossibilities after a lengthy experiment about two years ago a number of white divers were taken to the pearl coast, and it is now said they are all either dead or suffering from paralysis. Further, it is declared that as a result of a year's diving the best returns of the whites did not exceed 1 cwt., while the average yield of a native's work was between four and five tons.

SAYS HOT WATER WASHES POISONS FROM THE LIVER

To feel as fine as the proverbial fiddle, we must keep the liver washed clean, almost every morning, to prevent its sponge-like pores from clogging with indigestible material, sour bile and poisonous toxins, says a noted physician.

If you get headaches, it's your liver uncleanliness. Your liver is the sour liver. If you wake up with a bad taste, furred tongue, nasty breath or stomach becomes rancid, it's your liver. Sallow skin, muddy complexion, watery eyes all denote liver uncleanliness. Your liver is the most important, also the most abused and neglected organ of the body. Few know its function or how to release the dammed-up body waste, bile and toxins. Most folks resort to violent calomel, which is a dangerous salivating chemical which can only be used occasionally because it accumulates in the tissues, also attacks the bones.

Every man and woman, sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, to wash from the liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, the poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Limestone phosphate does not restrict the diet like calomel, because it can not salivate, for it is harmless and you can eat anything afterwards. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, and any pharmacist will sell you a quarter pound which is sufficient for a demonstration of how hot water and limestone phosphate cleans, stimulates and freshens the liver, keeping

BUILDING A NATION.

Documents That Deal With Constitution of Canada.

Because Canada's own scholars ought to be encouraged to work upon Canada's own subject matters and for the service of Canada's own people, we welcome the volume of "Documents of the Canadian Constitution, 1759-1915" selected and edited by Prof. W. P. M. Kennedy. The qualifications for selecting and editing—for the use of students—agreements, proclamations, treaties, instructions, ordinances, speeches, debates, letters, resolutions, reports and enactments that belong to the history of Canada's constitutional development in the last 150 years are not easily come by, and it is doubtful if there is any better way of acquiring them than employment in academic work such as Prof. Kennedy is engaged in in the Department of Modern History at our Provincial University. The sifting of the material is itself no easy task. The reader who has any knowledge of the mass of the matter that could be brought together under the title this book bears will be as thankful to Prof. Kennedy for his skill in excluding as for his judiciousness in admitting. The book is a work of discrimination.

For the versions of many of the state papers his book contains Prof. Kennedy has gone to that abounding source of authoritative texts, the three volumes of "Documents Relating to the Constitutional History of Canada," published by the Canadian Archives in the seven or eight years preceding the war. In these volumes, in the editing of which Dr. Doughty had a principal part, many documents are included that were never previously published. Of some of them indeed the existence had been generally forgotten. Even that large body of original documents by no means comprehended all in the possession of our Archives Branch relating to the constitutional history of Canada. It, too, therefore, was a work of selecting, taking in only the most important and representative of the materials. These Archives volumes are now out of print. Moreover, for the use of students a smaller collection would suffice. Prof. Kennedy's book of 707 pages covers the ground so as to leave nothing to be desired by the general inquirer. As he points out, he has omitted selections from Lord Durham's report, for the reason that that landmark in the field of colonial government ought to be studied as a whole. As for cases showing how the British North America Act has worked out in practice, it would take a separate volume to deal with them. With Prof. Kennedy it was a principle of selection to include no documents that have not proved of value in actual teaching.

Documents of constitutional history are not fascinating reading. It is the more important therefore that by means or articulating arrangements and notes upon the transitional stages the editor should take pains to make them at least enlightening. Prof. Kennedy has found is convenient to divide the history of the Canadian constitution into six periods, and to arrange in chronological order the documents pertaining to each period. Each period division of his book is preceded by notes, not copious, but sufficient to show the features that give distinctiveness to the period. Besides being brief, these notes have the further merit of not being tinged with opinions, construction or theories of the editor's. They are simply links between the periods. The inclusion of letters and speeches is serviceable to the student, inasmuch as, in several cases the writers and speakers being contemporary witnesses, their words help to make live again the controversies out of which constitutional changes issued. The words of eminent men who played a part on the political stage when changes were made in the constitution give something of dramatic interest to a subject for the study of which there is much need of adventitious aids. Biographic touches are more interesting than dry-as-dust resolutions.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro phosphate, which is inexpensive and sold by McDermid & Jury in Peterboro and most all druggists under a guarantee of entire satisfaction or your money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:— Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

Snobbishness.

A British officer said in an after dinner speech:

"The war has done one good thing for England. It has broken up our snobbishness.

"I heard a story about our snobbishness the other day. A duchess was talking of a self-made knight, just deceased, who had subscribed liberally to her charities.

"Poor dear Sir Thomas!" she said. 'So he is dead, is he? Poor Sir Thomas! I couldn't know him in London, but we shall meet in heaven."

"Cascarets for Mother's Pets"

Careful mothers know that Cascarets in the home mean less sickness, less trouble, less worry, less cost. When one of the kiddies has a white tongue, feverish breath, sour stomach or a cold, a Cascaret quickly and harmlessly "works" the poisons from the liver and bowels and all is well again—only 10 cents a box.

TO MOTHERS! While all children detest castor oil, calomel, pills and laxatives, they really love to take Cascarets because they taste like candy. Cascarets "work" the nasty bile, sour fermentations and constipation poison from the child's tender stomach, liver and bowels without pain or griping. Cascarets never disappoint the worried mother. Each ten cent box contains directions for children aged one year old and upwards.

FACTS ABOUT SIBERIA

POWERFUL NATION WILL GROW UP IN ASIA.

The Eastern Portion of Russia, Which Has Always Been Looked Upon as a Huge Impenetrable Prison, Will Become Very Wealthy When All Its National Resources Are Developed.

THE name of Siberia, until recently, has always presented, in Europe as well as in Canada, the picture of a huge impenetrable prison where all the unnecessary and criminal element of Russia was sent. On the contrary, Siberia is not a prison, but contains unlimited natural riches and resources — it is a country with the greatest possible future.

Because of its unfavorable geographical position, the enormity of its territory and its lack of population, it has remained not only a puzzle but an unknown thing, only slightly improved by agricultural development and explored very little. Only during recent years when human genius with the help of technic began to conquer distances, has Siberia, little by little begun to take part in the civilized life of mankind. The special efforts of Siberia to get out of the economic position of non-existence, brought forth the following results: (1) the construction of the Siberian railway, the largest railway on the globe; (2) the afflux of several millions of settlers (from 1906 to 1911, 2,834,000 people from Russia settled in Siberia) who began to cultivate the soil; (3) the enormous increase, from necessity, of raw materials, particularly pertaining to agriculture, and (4) the world war and the great Russian revolution; all these circumstances have caused foreign countries to take considerable interest in Siberia.

Without any doubt, Siberia will furnish more and more riches, in the future, not only to the world but also to her owners—the Russian people. All the pitiful history of Siberia seems to confirm the opinion prevailing in foreign countries of the days of the old Tzar of Russia who was able to conquer such vast territory but was not able to colonize it in a systematic and cultural manner. Old Russia is gone—from the heaps of ruins from the ashes, and the chaos is appearing a new country—a new democratic Russia. The day is not far distant when there will appear before the eyes of the world a new picture—a picture of creation and constructive work of great Russia and of her richest inseparable part—Siberia.

The natural frontier between European-Russia and Siberia extends a little to the east of the Ural Mountain chain; the Ural Mountains which bind Asia and Europe do not form, as it is generally supposed by the masses, a climatic nor an ethnographic barrier, and cannot serve as an obstacle for the political, cultural and economic unification of Russia and Siberia, and as soon as the railway system is developed they will be joined and made an undivided unit—the great Russian republic.

The famous Russian geographer, P. P. Semonoff, divides Siberia into the three following parts: (1) the two provinces lying on the River Ob, i.e., the provinces of Tobolsk and Tomsk, which generally form the original Siberia because they are situated in the huge plain which by its physical geographical character and its animal and vegetable growth varies from European Russia only slightly; (2) the two provinces on the River Yenisei—Irkutsk and Yeniseisk; (3) the two eastern districts —provinces of Amur and Yakutsk. They fill all the remaining part of Siberia. To Siberia also belongs the so-called "Stepnoje General Gubernatorstvo" (General Governmentship of the Steppes) consisting of the two provinces of Akmolinsk and Semipalatinsk. All these taken together form a great stretch of land, 13,500,000 square kilometres. Siberia is therefore 2½ times as large as European Russia and 1½ times as large as all of Europe—in other words, it is one-third as large as the whole of Asia, and two-thirds as large as the entire Russian territory.

By its physical peculiarities as well as by its population, this vast territory of Siberia is divided into two distinctly different parts, the dividing line being the Yenisei river. The prairie or lowland section, which is situated to the east of the Yenisei river, is generally called Eastern Siberia, and the mountainous section, situated on the western side of the Yenisei, bears the name of Western Siberia. That section of Eastern Siberia which is situated to the east of the Stanovoi and Yablonoi Mountains is usually called the Russian Far East. On the vast territory of Siberia a great variety of forms of surface and relief prevail. There are large stretches of lowlands, sometimes waterless, sometimes covered with marshes, sometimes covered with weeds. Above the virgin forests you see huge rocky mountains with towering peaks and deep crevices. In general, Siberia represents a large plain gradually elevating in the direction of the south and southeast, from the low shores of the Arctic Ocean until the highest mountains of middle Asia are reached.

The Siberian plateau includes the Eastern Siberian lowland, gradually rising until it reaches the level of the plateau of Western Siberia; the southern extremity of Siberia includes three mountain ranges: (1) The Altai Mountains from Irtish to the Yenisei river; (2) Siyansk, from the Yenisei river to the Angara river; (3) Daursk. The Altai Mountains are of the greatest interest because of their external appearance, formation, beauty and their majestic greatness and grandeur, which attracting the eyes of the traveller remind him of the European Alps. The snow-covered peaks of the mountains, the picturesque valleys, the numerous streams running down the mountain, the waterfalls, the exquisite azurian effects, the wonderful magnitude of the forests and the greenness of the leaves growing so plentifully on the slopes of the mountains, impress one with their beauty to such an extent that they can never be forgotten.

The Altai Mountains rival the European Alps. There is no doubt that in the near future when Siberia becomes more thickly populated and is covered with an extensive network of railways, this country, especially the Altai Mountains, will attract the travellers and tourists not less than they are now being attracted by the Alps and Japan.

In the northeastern part of Siberia the climate is very severe, the coldest winter on the face of the globe being found there. In Verkhoyansk the mean temperature in January is 50 degrees below zero Centigrade, but very often there are frosts of much greater severity. Because of the extremely cold climate in the greater part of Siberia, the development of human activity is greatly hindered. The climatic peculiarities of Siberia are closely connected with the development of its surface, and the rigorous and continental climate becomes more noticeable as you proceed from the south to the north as well as from the west to the east. The climate of Western Siberia is very much like the climate of European Russia, because the Ural Mountains do not form a climatic frontier.

Under such circumstances it is evident that only in the southern part of the provinces of Yeniseisk and Irkutsk could agriculture be carried on. It is essential to note that the temperature of Eastern Siberia is more favorable for the development of one-summer plants, such as cereals and vegetables.

Sat Up In Bed To Get Her Breath

Palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, inability to lie on the left side, feelings as if smothering, oppressed feeling in the chest, dizzy and faint spells, tired weak, worn out feeling, involuntary twitching of the muscles, sleeplessness, restless, etc., all point to the fact that either the heart or nerves, or both, are not what they should be. Any of these conditions should be remedied immediately so as to avoid a complete breakdown of the whole system.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will bring energy to the weakened constitution, strengthen and regulate the heart, and tone up the tired, overstrained nerves.

Mrs. William Steeves, Chemical Road, N.B., writes:— "I have been a great sufferer from nerve troubles and palpitation of the heart, which was so bad I had to sit up in bed to get my breath. I could not lie on my left side at all. I tried doctor after doctor, also several different remedies, but got no help from them. My mother insisted on me trying Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. By the time I had used one box, I was feeling very much better. I took in all three boxes, and now I am in perfect health and can enjoy a good sound sleep, and can lie on my left side without any trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Soldiers Home — THE SALVATION ARMY — Coming Campaign

A Mighty Task Ahead

APPROXIMATELY 300,000 Canadian soldiers will arrive home within the next twelve months. Home! To some that word means joyful compensation for all they have gone through. To others, home will mean simply hardships in a new form—struggles to keep a roof overhead; to find a job; leaving a sick wife in bed, children unattended, while the daily bread is earned!

The Government is putting in operation its plans for repatriation, with pensions and employment bureaus, but notwithstanding all this, and the work of other organizations, many practical problems remain to be coped with, calling for IMMEDIATE relief.

If YOU hear no cry for help, it is because help from the Salvation Army is never far away.

The Emergency Receiving Home

Here are a soldier's wife and three children passing through the city. The train is delayed. The connection is missed. Where shall they go, for it is after midnight and zero weather. Imagine those children!

The Salvation Army officer sees the distress, conducts them to the Emergency Receiving Home where a very small and plain but well-warmed suite of rooms with two beds is available for a few hours.

Soldiers' Families Home Visitation

Few people realize the distress that goes on in their own city. A soldier at the front received word from the Salvation Army that his wife had died, and that, as no one had appeared to take care of the six children, the Salvation Army would look after them until his return. A few days later the father was killed. The children are safe!—As far as it is humanly possible, the Salvation Army endeavors to keep the family unit intact.

plans for Moses to deliver Israel from Egypt?

13. Verse 11. Is it true or not, and why that the more fit a person is for a great work the less he thinks himself fitted?

14. Verses 12-15. Did God expect Moses to deliver his people, or simply want him to be the instrument, and why?

15. Verses 16-22. What is the evidence in this story, that organization is God's plan, for any important enteprise?

16. Chapter 4:1-9. Is Moses to be praised or blamed for his reluctance in undertaking the great work that God mapped out for him?

17. What is the nature and kind of evidence that a good man has to-day that he will succeed in the work to which God has appointed him?

18. Verses 10-17. What are the excuses that Moses made to God in order to escape his work?

19. Why is it unreasonable and wicked to think that God ever asks a man to do a work without giving him the ability and the opportunity to do it?

20. What honor did Moses lose and what does every man lose who refuses to do the work which God assigns him?

THE UNSPEAKABLE HUN.

Man From British Columbia Voices His Sentiments.

No one could call me blood thirsty. I am the most peaceable of men. I am not vindictive, and I think I may say that I seldom harbor ill-feeling in my heart.

Why? I will tell you.

Outside a pretty little bungalow in a tree-bordered street in Victoria, B.C., hangs a red flag. There is a sale on. That was my home. People are inside there bargaining for our little household treasures. Cautious housewives are fingering carpets and curtains and appraising their value. A fat old dealer is trying to convince his pal that my priceless Sheffield plate soup tureen is not genuine. There is a man carrying away my child's cot.

I've no home now. All the little store of books I treasured so is gone. My wife is living in a boarding house and the youngster has no nursery now.

We've sold up so that I may join the —th Battalion.

The Hun must pay me for that—must make what reparation can be made for breaking up my home; for all the heavy heartaches we had in parting from our treasures.

I am standing in the British military cemetery at Bailleul. It is June, 1917. I have found what I sought. A simple mound with a little plain wooden cross at the head of it. My younger brother lies there.

Five years ago he came out to British Columbia to me—as fine a lad as you could meet. He had just left school. A clean, wholesome product of an English public school. In 1914 he left his job—surveying—and enlisted. He served eight months as a private in France, got a commission, and, within four months, his company.

Two days before his 21st birthday—in June, 1916—he was going round the line at "stand-to." A sniper's bullet hit him square in the forehead—the next day they brought him here.

It was a Hun's hand that pulled that trigger. Do you suppose I'll meet a Hun again when peace comes with the haunting feeling that the hand I shook in greeting might be the hand that pulled that trigger?

They can't give back that young life — but they still have "eyes to weep with."

Make them weep!

An old man is walking slowly up and down the lawn in the garden of a beautiful old Kentish vicarage. It is a still summer night. Hardly a sound, you would say. But the old man stops and listens. He can just hear a distant rumble—far, far away to the south.

"The guns in France or Belgium," he would tell you. Day and night he is listening, listening for that distant rumble.

He is my father. Four years ago I did not consider him on the borders of old age. But these years of sorrow and ever-present anxiety, first for two sons and now for one only, have changed him. They have deepened the furrows in his cheeks, have turned his hair to silver, taken all the joy of life from his eyes.

He is only one of millions.

The Huns cannot make the old man young again, cannot restore the boy they stole from him. But even their brutal instincts can be made to realize how all decent people loathe a murder.

Wife Heavens! And what do we bake it in—a thimble?

War-time Legislation.

Validating legislation will be submitted next session, it is expected, in regard to prohibition. The orders-in-Council on which Dominion action was taken found its authority in the War Measures Act. The order itself remains in force during war-time and for a period of twelve months afterwards. The War Measures Act, however, expires on the proclamation of peace in the Canada Gazette.

The question how far the order-in-Council is valid after the War Measures Act has ceased to exist is now before the Justice Department. The same point has arisen in Great Britain in regard to orders-in-Council passed there under authority of the Defence of the Realm Act, or "Dora," as it is more commonly called. A special committee, which had the question under consideration, decided that war would cease to exist on the exchange of formal peace ratifications, and that orders-in-Council passed under the Defence of the Realm Act would not be valid after expiry of the act itself, unless validated by Parliament. It is probable that the Justice Department will reach a similar conclusion in respect to orders-in-Council passed under the War Measures Act.

To Relieve Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness And Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness, or who are growing hard of hearing and have head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can usually be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected complete relief after other treatments have failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear. Therefore, if you know of someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it ½ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

Parmint is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the results it gives are nearly always quick and effective.

Every person who has catarrh in any form, or distressing rumbling, hissing sounds in their ears, should give this recipe a trial.

THE LONG-RANGE GUN.

Airplanes Proved Its Most Deadly Enemy.

The big gun's greatest enemy is the airplane and though it lies 20 miles behind the lines the gun's existence from its birth is precarious.

The first workings and railway tracks necessary for the construction of a giant long-range gun are probably noticed by the keen eyes of some observer on a long reconnaissance flight. Progress is carefully watched and the exact position noted, so that when the time came the gun was bombed or shelled.

If the gun, owing to the caution of the enemy, had not been noticed its very first shot gave away its position. At once an airplane, with an observer and camera in the back seat, was sent over to find out its exact position. Series of photographs were taken of the territory in which it was known to lie, so that, even if the observer could not see it from above, the tell-tale photographs will give away its position.

The photographs were developed immediately. Then they were examined by experts, who detected amid a small copse the round outline of a concrete barbette, which had been cleverly painted in order to make it appear like a part of the wood. A railway line is observed running to it, and a small branch line to another part of the wood is apparently under construction, which shows that the enemy are intending to build a second emplacement. The wood is found on a map, and the exact position is marked and sent to the artillery.

It is decided to destroy the gun if possible. Again the airplane lends its assistance.

A wireless machine is sent up on a clear day and circles round and round, high in the deep blue of the sky above the little wood. Anti-aircraft shells fired by the defence batteries of the big gun burst with an unending crash about it.

The observer has his eyes on his watch. The hour arrives, and he looks far below him. Near the edge of the wood suddenly arises a great column of black smoke and flying earth. The first shell had burst. At once he presses the little brass key in front of him. The blue flame of the wireless spits and splutters. "Over 500 yards," it says. Again he sends a correction.

For some time this continues, and at last, he sees one or two bursts right on the gun emplacement, and very near it, while all round the wood lie the great craters of the shell holes.

All this time he has been subjected to the shelling of the anti-aircraft guns and the occasional attack of scouts. At last time is up and he returns home—his work is done. For several days the little town far behind the lines is shaken no more by the thunder of the great 15-in. shells.

The airplane had once more beaten the gun.

Big Name for Old Offence.

Five youthful farmers at Downeyville were haled before the police magistrate and charged with malicious damage in that they did unlawfully, wilfully and without legal justification, authority or excuse and without color of right, take, carry away and injure two certain fence gates, of the value of ten dollars. The fine was $5 and costs for each—$53.50 in all.

Goat Has Artist's Appetite.

Joe Petine, of Welland, has been ordered to pay $8 compensation to a neighbor, whose asters and chrysanthemums had furnished the principal items for Petine's goat. The Canadian goat apparently has tired of billboard and tin-can diet.

Was Troubled With BOILS FOR SIX MONTHS.

From the days of Job to the present time, boils have been one of the greatest afflictions of the human race. Very few people escape from having them at some time.

All the poulticing and lancing you may do won't cure them and stop more coming.

Boils are caused by bad blood bursting out, and the bad blood must be made pure before the boils will disappear.

Burdock Blood Bitters is the greatest blood purifier known. It cleanses the system, and purifies the blood by removing every particle of foul material from the system, and when this is done, never another boil comes and health and strength are permanently restored.

Mr. C. H. Bridges, 470 Barton St. E., Hamilton, Ont., writes:—"I was troubled with boils for about six months and tried several remedies without any relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters, and the effect has been wonderful. After using two bottles, I was rid of them all. I feel like a new man; my appetite is better, and I sleep better than I have for years. I can highly recommend B. B. B. to all who are troubled as I was."

"I am a farmer's wife, 75 years of age, and pneumonia left me in a weak, run-down condition, so I could hardly keep about and do my work. A neighbor brought me Vinol and it has built up my strength so fast that I think it is the best medicine I have ever taken."—Mrs. Jennie Chapman.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Colour and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small stand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Crisis

By EVELYN HOPE BARTON

"Look out for the man—I warn you! He is crafty, shrewd. Until you are back with your friends, beware of Pascal Trebo."

"That is his name, is it?" I asked.

"He is the man to adopt any name to hide his tracks," replied Albert Cone seriously. "It was an unfortunate hour when his eye fell upon Drusilla. Those eyes—they terrify her, they haunt her still!"

"Looking down, up, in, out or straight away, those brilliant jet black eyes of Trebo remind of sphero-cylindrical bifocal lenses. A burning pencil of flame darts forth. You will know him by his eyes."

"Why know him at all?" I questioned. "Wherefore should he cross my path?"

"Because he has sworn to do so. Trebo has made his boast that you, who have won my sister, will never marry her."

This was rather high-handed sentiment for me to accept unquestioningly. I secretly derided what I esteemed to be exaggerated fear. My friend, Cone, attached to the American consulate at Bolo, Ecuador, had been a year among these people and was schooled as to the various characteristics—an "olla podrida" of native and foreign elements, in greater part representing the offscourings of anarchistic and revolutionary groups.

To come to the point, I, from the North, employed to negotiate with envoys of the local government, was after some guano and potash concessions, and had come to Bolo to meet Cone, and later, his sister, Drusilla.

I loved Drusilla from the first moment my eyes rested upon her singularly lovable and expressive face. There had been a brief courtship, an engagement. Meanwhile I was called to Bogota to close up final negotiations. I was very busy my first week at Bogota. I heard nothing of this Trebo, and was preparing to return to Bolo when one day a man approached me at my hotel.

"You are Senor Francis Worden?" he asked in a smooth tone.

I nodded an assent. He was a noticeable individual. His face was a strong one and showed character and force. The most vacuous, lightest blue eyes I had ever seen, however, void of expression, blurred and covered with slightly darkened glasses, gave me an impression of weakness and indecision.

"They told me of you down at the exchange," he went on. "You are agent for Northern purchasers of guano and potash properties, I understand?"

"Why, yes," I acceded. "I have something in that line."

Thereupon my visitor became communicative. He proceeded to describe a potash holding which lack of operating capital prevented him from developing. A drive of 20 miles, he informed me, an hour's inspection, and I could gain a valuable concession at one-fourth its real value. I consented to go with him. It was to arrive at an isolated old plant abutting an abandoned digging.

My guide showed me over the prospect and then the plant. As we entered its cellar a blow drove me prostrate, insensible, and later I awoke to a consciousness of horror and suspense.

My hands and feet were tightly bound: I was helpless, except for the power to lift myself to a sitting position. Four feet beyond me was a keg of blasting powder. Leading from it was a long fuse. I traced its other end. Three yards behind me it was fiery and sputtering.

I recognized fully that the slowly creeping fire would reach the keg soon. A sudden thought inspired me. I flopped over sideways, my face landing directly across the fuse. My lips reached it. I knew that I was saved as, the fuse end still between my teeth. I came upright again. The reaction gave me new strength. I tugged at my bonds. At the end of 20 minutes I was free. I hastened outside. My fierce resentful impulse was to hasten to Bogota and set the police on the trail of my would-be assassin.

I was penetrating a little thicket when I dodged aside as I saw a man making for the plant, the very man who had lured me thither. I divined at once that, waiting for the explosion which did not eventuate, he had returned to learn the cause. I was full of anger and pounced upon him with fury. Once, twice, thrice I lunged out at him. The glasses he wore snapped to pieces.

And something else! My fist blows had not only broken the glasses, but a film of glass set in his eye sockets, and as these were displaced there was revealed a pair of black piercing eyes. The painted films gone that had so completely disguised the ruffian, he was revealed in his real identity—Pascal Trebo!

He had gone down under my blow. Now, his eyes bleeding, he slowly raised himself on one elbow. He glared and hissed at me, tugged at a weapon in his hip pocket. I dashed at him to outwit him, when there was an explosion. His hasty efforts had exploded the revolver and he sank back as the fatal bullet pierced his heart.

I did not delay at the spot, I did not even report the tragedy at Bogota. I left the soulless schemer where retribution had overtaken him.

The Tri-color.

When the French adopted their tri-colored flag they figured upon optical illusion. That is, they took into consideration how the colors, red, white and blue, would appear to the eye, rather than going according to lineal measurement. Thus we find 30 per cent. of the flag is blue, 33 per cent. white and 37 per cent. red.

If the three "colors" were of the same width, the white, which is in the middle, would appear narrower than the blue, which is next to the staff. And the red, out at the end, would appear still narrower than the white. So that with the present arrangement, the three stripes appear to be the same width, and not one person out of a thousand but would declare they are the same width as he sees the tri-color floating from its staff.

The French are an artistic people. They consider art always. Their coins are the most artistic in the world; their emblems are perfect. They blend colors to please the eye, and decorate and adorn all they touch. But their art has not interfered with their fighting qualities. They also gave the world something to think about in the matter of protecting their country from the ravages of a merciless enemy who knows not art.

A Woman's Way.

"Do you think women will vote?"

"They'll do more than that," replied Mr. Meekton. "Every one of them in addition to voting herself will tell some man how to vote."

A Disgusted Hobo.

"So you're goin' to work," said Meandering Mike.

"You bet I am," replied Plodding Pete. "The I.W.W. has took all the dignity out o' loafin'."

RECEIVING WAR CROSS

The patriotic spirit and devotion with which Canadian women have so far performed war-service work and made sacrifices has never been equalled in the history of any country. Mothers, wives and sisters support this burden with strength and fortitude. But those who are already miserable from the complaints and weaknesses which are so common to women, should take the right temperance tonic for the womanly system.

If a woman is borne down by pain and sufferings, by nervousness or dizzy spells, by headache or backache, "Favorite Prescription" should be taken. It can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid at most drug stores. Send to Dr. Pierce's Branch at Bridgeburg, Ont., for a 10c trial pkg. of tablets.

For fifty years Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets have been most satisfactory in liver and bowel troubles.

Windsor, Ont.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription made a new woman of me. For about six years I suffered with woman's trouble during which time I became run down, weak and nervous. I would have severe backaches and pains in my side. I doctored with the doctor but did not get cured of my ailment and was so bad that I could scarcely walk across the floor when I began taking the 'Prescription.' When I had taken two bottles I was much improved and four bottles completely cured me, and I have enjoyed better health than I ever did before taking this medicine. It is truly a wonderful medicine for women."—Mrs. Martha Mulcaster, 6 Albert St.

A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Miss Kelly Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Newark, N. J.—"For about three years I suffered from nervous breakdown and got so weak I could hardly stand, and had headaches every day. I tried everything I could think of and was under a physician's care for two years. A girl friend had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she told me about it. From the first day I took it I began to feel better and now I am well and able to do most any kind of work. I have been recommending the Compound ever since and give you my permission to publish this letter."—Miss FLO KELLY, 476 So. 14th St., Newark, N. J.

The reason this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, was so successful in Miss Kelly's case was because it went to the root of her trouble, restored her to a normal healthy condition and as a result her nervousness disappeared.

It is fitting that kindly thoughts flow out to all on this glad festal day; that it finds expression in gifts, good wishes and glad greetings. They are akin in heart who follow the leading of Bethlehem's Star. May the joy bells of Christmas, "peace and good will" ring in all your homes, and may the brightness of His presence illumin every heart.

The clock struck 12 on December 31st, and we are ushered into a New Year—with how many plans for the future—new resolves, many alas! that are made to be broken. But let us welcome the untrodden paths and grasp the new conditions with a firm hand, grateful for the blessings the old year has brought to us.

Keep your Christmas nerve and muscle and heart and hope and cheer first for your own home, your own fireside, your dearest, your closest, your sweetest, and then comes the homeless, the fireless, th unloved, the undeared and be true, true to the last "Merry Christmas" that crosses your lips.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT

Blotchy Skin.

The person with a muddy skin would be greatly benefited by taking three pints of hot water before breakfast. Fruit acids are almost unequalled in their effect upon the liver when taken properly. When the skin shows signs of a sallow thickness, or unsightly spots not coming from sunburn, but from some internal complaint, phosphate of soda, one teaspoonful in a glass of very hot water taken before breakfast will cure the condition. This to be taken until the skin clears.

He Will Train the German Athletes.

Although born in Germany, he has lived in this country since he was nine years old. His appointment has been approved in Berlin.

ABLE TO GO DOWN TOWN FIRST TIME IN MANY MONTHS

Mrs. Cox's Improvement Since Taking Tanlac Proved a Grand Surprise.

"It surely is a Tanlac neighbourhood out where I live, for most everybody I know is taking it with fine results, recently said Mrs. Flora Cox, of 1136 Vernon Ave. N.E., Portland, in telling of her interesting experience with the famous medicine.

"I was in such a bad state of health," continued Mrs. Cox, that for the last three years I was hardly able to go out anywhere at all. Soon after eating anything I would have a stuffy feeling like my stomach was filled with gas, and often during the night my heart would beat so hard and fast I would simply have to gasp for breath, and sometimes when going about the house, I would get so dizzy and feel so faint and weak that I wouldn't dare stoop over because I was afraid of falling. My nerves were so upset that I just couldn't stand any noise or excitement, and I would lie awake night after night listening to the ticking of the clock and feeling like I would go distracted if I didn't get some sleep or rest. My joints would swell and ache with rheumatism till I could hardly stand the agony and I would have such terrible nervous headaches that many a time I felt I would be better off dead than alive. Medicines did me no good and I felt so lifeless it was all I could do to drag myself around and I had almost given up hope of ever getting well.

"Well, now to show what Tanlac has done for me, my nerves are quieter, I have gotten entirely over those terrible headaches and I sleep all night like a baby. That rheumatism is almost gone and I am so much stronger now that I do a lot of work that I didn't dare attempt before. Why just last week I went up town to do some shopping and it was the first time in many months that I had been able to get that far from the house and I was mighty glad to be able to walk around town again. I expected to get back home tired to death and ready to drop; but the way I kept up was a grand surprise not only to me but to my friends as well, for I hardly felt the exertion at all, I have gotten all this wonderful improvement from only four bottles of Tanlac, and I am going to keep on taking it as long as it continues to help me like it has and is still doing, for I can't afford to miss a single dose."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

CASTOR OIL WON THE WAR.

It Was Found to Be Best Lubricant for Airplane Propellers.

Some of the enthusiasts are claiming that castor oil has practically won the war for the Allies. While this, like that report of Mark Twain's death, is a gross exaggeration, there can be no doubt that castor oil has contributed notably to Germany's downfall. The reason is that it has proved to be an ideal lubricant for airplanes. The propellers of these craft are turned at a far greater number of revolutions a minute than the engine of an automobile, and at every impulse stroke there is developed within the cylinder of the engine inflamed gas of very high temperature. This intense heat will attack and consume most mineral oil lubricants, thus seriously impairing the engine. If the high temperature of combustion burns up the lubricating oil or thins it out so that it no longer furnishes the required anti-frictional film between contiguous metal surfaces, the pistons become too hot, expand, jam, and the machine is stalled. That is what happens when we hear of engines getting stalled and the flyers having to descend — perhaps in hostile territory.

Now castor oil will not be burned up or thinned out by any heat that an airplane engine will develop. It will maintain its body at all times and flow freely through the distributing system whatever is the temperature of the enveloping atmosphere. Many other lubricants are affected by the cold, and it often happens that while the ground temperature may be 80 degrees or more, the air will be below freezing point at an altitude reached in a few minutes by an airman. Castor oil is a perfect lubricant in these circumstances, and wide differences in temperature appear to make little or no impression upon it. Owing to these properties, the price of castor beans has risen from $1.25 to $3.50 a bushel, and hundreds of thousands of additional acres are being planted with castor beans in India, Siam, China, Central and South America, and the West Indies.

Cost of Our War.

The cost of the war to Canada in money is expected to be at least eleven hundred million dollars. Up to the end of October war accounts which had actually passed through the Finance Department totalled approximately $1,046,844,000. This does not include deferred pay for soldiers in France and some large outstanding accounts. Some months will probably elapse before the actual cost of the war to the Dominion will be known after the actual declaration of peace.

Estimates now given are merely conjectural.

Considerable expenditure arising from the war will continue after the conclusion of peace. For the present fiscal year expenditure of the pensions branch was estimated at approximately fifteen millions; that of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment at twelve millions. With the cessation of hostilities expenditure under these boards will be reduced to its minimum, but will continue to be heavy for years to come.

Electricity Domesticated.

Since men first trod this world they have rejoiced in light to guide their hands and feet, to reveal form and color, and, infinitely beyond the swing of hand or arm, to display the stars of heaven. The electrician takes the twin of light, every whit as rapid, and happily absolved from its rule of running only in straight lines. He commits electricity to a wire, of as many zigzags as he pleases, and, paying little toll for a jaunt of two hundred miles, he bids it shine in our lamps, glow in our ovens, and in chemistry serve us either as a trowel or a sword. Electricity carries our burdens indoors and out. It impels as readily the monster loom of a cotton-mill as the sewing-machines of a lady at home. More audacious still, the electrician throws pulses into free space, and forthwith this globe becomes his whispering gallery. Other pulses, urged by another chord, pierce the flesh and blood of this man himself, and portray his very bones. Electricity to-day does all that fire ever did, does it better, and then accomplishes tasks infinitely beyond the scope of fire, however skillfully applied.

And now, one may add, electricity is bending itself to the soft, lending it a new, quickening impulse, and promising to do as much for the farmer as it has already done for the mechanic, the chemist and the engineer.

MILK SOLD AT THE COST OF PRODUCTION

Statement at Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Convention Based on Survey—Urges Co-operation.

BEST CHEESE EXHIBIT

BELLEVILLE, Jan. 10.—A survey of 430 dairy farms in Oxford county shows that the average cost of producing milk on these farms in the year entding March 1 was $2.17 per 100 pounds. The average price received at the farm for this milk was $2.19½. In making this calculation $500 per year was allowed per man of labour employed. Thirty per cent. of the milk from these farms went to cheese factories, 40 per cent. to condensers and the balance to ice cream factories or for sale as whole milk. These figures from farms representing 10 per cent. of the farms of Oxford, show that even in this good county, and with a very moderate allowance for wages for the owner of the herds, milk was sold at just about the cost of production. The above statement was made by Prof. Leitch at the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Convention being held in this city.

The statement was based on an actual survey made by Professor Leitch during the past year. In many cases, if fair allowance was made for wages, milk was produced at a loss, the speaker said. On farms of 50 acres and less the average cost of producing, allowing for wages and 7 per cent. on investment, was $2.70 per 100 pounds, where Oxford dairymen made only 50 to 60 per cent. of their income from milk alone and the balance from side lines, such as hogs or hens. The cost of producing was $2.08 per 100 pounds where the one sources of income was milk. The average cost of production was $2.30 per 100 pounds.

Larger Return on Larger Farms.

Generally speaking, the larger the farms in Oxford, Prof. Leitch said, the greater the labour income. Labour income was what the farmer received for his own labour, that of his wife and daughters, and of his boys under fourteen, after allowing 5 per cent. on capital invested.

On farms of 30 to 50 acres covered by the survey, the labour income, on his basis, was $524. That, said Prof. Leitch, was less than $1.50 per day for days of 13 hours each, 7 days a week, in summer, and 11 hours a day in winter.

On farms of 60 acres the average labour income was $719; an farms of 61 to 75 acres, it was $763; on 76 to 98 acres it was $1,223; on 100 acres it was $1,261 on 101 to 136 acres it was $1,533; on 136 to 160 acres it was $1,873; on 161 to 184 acres it was $2,016; on farms of more than 185 acres the average labour income was $2,282.

The best individual return on an Oxford dairy farm, so far as the survey shows, was $4,000, and this was from 300 acres.

$6.00 or $7.00 a Day the Maximum.

The largest return of all in labour income was $6,000, and this was on a farm of 350 acres, with pure-bred Shorthorns as the main source of income. The $4,000 income from dairying was exceptional, Prof. Leitch said, even in Oxford, where dairying is better organized than anywhere else. It seemed almost impossible to get above $5.00 or $7.00 per day on the labour income for a dairyman and his wife, daughters and young boys. At the same time single mechanics were getting $7.00 to $14.00 for a day of ten hours.

Will Still Pay to Buy Feeds.

While feed prices are high now, it will nevertheless pay to buy feeds, because the prices of finished products made from these are also high, said Deputy Minister of Agriculture Grisdale. Moreover, with a decrease of 150,000,000 in the number of live stock in Europe, prices of grain will decrease before the prices of animals to which it is fed. If feed cannot be had locally, the Department of Agriculture can, Mr. Grisdale said, supply it. Part of the feed available is in the form of recleaned screenings from Western grain, which costs around $37 per ton; part in oil cake that costs about $60.

Milking Machine a Necessity.

Mr. Grisdale strongly approved the use of the milking machine, going so far as to say this has become an imperative necessity. One farmer paid for one of these machines in a single season by the savings in labour cost.

Factory Consolidation Advocated.

H. B. Cowan brought before the convention a proposal to consolidate a number of cheese factories or creameries under one management. In Saskatchewan two-thirds of the creameries had, he said, been consolidated in this way, and as a result $5,000 was saved in the purchase of two lines of dairy supplies in the first year only. In management, economy in buying supplies and an improvement in quality of output could, he believed, be effected by consolidation here.

THE BRITISH AUTHORITIES FORMULATE PLANS FOR LEAGUE OF NATIONS

(Special to The Examiner.)

(By Robert J. Bender—United Press Service.)

PARIS, January 10.—The Britsih may have the honour of fathering a definite plan for the application of President Wilson's plan for a league of nations.

The impression was growing here to-day that plans formulated by members of the British War Cabinet may finally be adopted by the peace conference. It is known that American delegates are sympathetically studying the ideas advanced by British officials, and it is believed the President, who has formed his own plan, is receptively inclined toward British progress.

Added strength has been given to this view by the fact that Lord Cecil, assistant Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, who long ago took an advanced attitude on this subject, is engaging in constantly lengthening conferences with American representatives. Other influential members of the British Cabinet have also submitted data regarding a league of nations, which the Americans are studying thoroughly, and with growing approval.

Cecil's plans it is known, contemplate far more power for the league than has been suggested from other Allied sources. It is believed also that he is inclined toward Wilson's attitude, that Germany should be admitted to probationary membership. Cecil has often expressed the view that the formation of a league is most important, and should be the first work of the peace conference.

Government Troops Rushed to Berlin Have Quelled the Spartacan Revolution

Civilian Population Suffered Heavily During Rioting—Outbreaks Reported in Other Places—Reports Are Conflicting—Liebknecht's Men Ejected From Most of the Public Buildings.

LOSS OF LIFE WILL BE HEAVY

(United Press.)

LONDON, Jan. 10. — While the Spartacan revolt in Berlin appears to have been quelled by the arrival of the loyal troops, rushed to the city by Chancellor Ebert, despatches received to-day showed the rebels still on the aggressive in other German cities. Reports were conflicting.

The Spartacans, after seizing the Reichstag building and other public edifices, failed to take the Chancellor's palace, in which the Ebert government has its offices, despatches said. Later the Ebert forces ejected Liebknecht's men from most of the buildings they had captured, according to these advices. Fighting was especially severe around the Silesian railway station.

Spartacus riots were reported dwindling in violence, after a bitter machine gun struggle, in which the civilian population suffered heavily.

Outbreaks were noted in Essen, Dresden and other centres. A Copenhagen despatch said there was rioting in Munich.

EBERT GOVERNMENT CONCEDED VICTORY OVER SPARTACANS

PARIS, Jan. 10.— Latest news received from Germany, although fragmentary and sometimes contradictory, indicates that the Ebert Government has won a victory over the Spartacans, owing to the sudden impetus given the government's case by the support of loyal elements, whose numbers increased with the prospects of the Government's success in the sanguinary fighting of the last five days. The Spartacans are reported to have suffered very heavy losses.

POLICE HAVE GONE OVER TO THE GOVERNMENT

Special to The Examiner:

BASLE, Jan. 10.— Three thousand members of Police President Eichorn's Republican Guards have placed themselves at the disposal of the Ebert-Scheidemann government, according to the Frankfort Gasette. (Eichorn has been aiding the Spartacans, and his surrender was one of the terms of the truce proposed by the government.)

Th Berlin garrison, which hitherto has been neutral, is now for the government, the newspaper said. Government aviators are flying low over the Vorwaerts building, where the Spartacans are still entrenched.

A despatch filed in Berlin on Wednesday, and received here to-day, stated that the Spartacans have seized the prinsipal wireless stations in the capital.

MOVEMENT IS SPREADING TO INDUSTRIAL REGIONS

Special to The Examiner:

THE HAGUE, Jan. 10.—The Spartacan movement is spreading through the industrial region in Rheinish Westphalia, a despatch from Dusseldorf reported to-day. According to a despatch from Weimar, a meeting of all Thuringian trade, handicraft and agricultural unions on January 5th decided to create a Federal Republic from all the Turingian States, with Erfurt as the capital.

PRUSSIAN GUARDS ARE MASSED AT ALL THE GATES.

(Special to Examiner.)

PARIS, Jan. 10. — Chancellor Ebert is master of the situation in Berlin, a Zurich despateh to L'Information declared to-day.

Field Marshall Von Hindenburg is in Potsdam, where he arrived two days ago. He does not propose to allow any election until order is fully restored. Von Hindenburg's presence together with the government's decision to use arms in suppressing the insurgents, has completely changed the situation.

The "Red Flag," the Spartacan organ, is no longer being published. Students occupy the plant. Great numbers of volunteers are enrolling in the government forces. Cavalry and Prussian Guards are massed at all the gates of the capital. Gustav Noske, the military governor, is working energetically to bring about a complete restoration of order. It is understood that it was he who reconciled Ebert and Von Hindenburg.

The soldiers' council at Leipzig has demanded the removal of the Ebert ministry, a despatch from that city reported to-day.

TROOPS HAVE ORDERS TO SHOOT TO KILL IN BERLIN

(Associated Press.)

BERLIN, Jan. 10.—Government forces are in complete control of that section of the inner city between the Brandenburg Gate and Friederichstrasse. It has issued an order prohibiting all processions. The government has scored a decided victory in the capture of police headquarters, which has been one of the Spartacan strongholds. The building was taken by Fusilier Guards after a short fight. The government forces took the building with few casualties. Eichhorn, the Spartacan police chief, escaped, but many of his supporters were made prisoners.

In issuing its order against processions, the government gave warning that is troops have orders to fire without waiting for the Spartacans to dig in, and to shoot to kill. The Spartacans apparently are losing hope. They failed to summon a mass meeting of their supporters to-day and the streets are almost deserted.

SIXTY-FIVE PERSONS WERE KILLED AT RAILWAY STATION

Canadian Press:

BERLIN, Jan. 10.—It is estimated that more than two hundred persons have been killed in the fighting in Berlin since Monday. The "Charite" and other outlying hospitals cared for three hundred wounded.

The fighting in Berlin, which the Berlin correspondent of the "Berlinske Tibende" described as a victory for the government, began Wednesday afternoon, when the Spartacans were defeated in the attack against the Foreign Office. At midnight the battle was raging in South-western and Central Berlin. The government troops attacked the Spartacans at the Silesian railway station with bombs and sixty-five persons were killed.

Government forces were aided by aviators. Later Government troops attacked Lehrter railway station on the north bank of the Spree, opposite the Tieragrten.

LIEBKNECHT NARROWLY ESCAPED LYNCHING

(United Press.)

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 10. — Karl Liebknecht, leader of the Spartacans, narrowly escaped lynching on Wednesday evening, a despatch to a Berlin paper reported to-day.

A mob dragged Liebknecht from a taxicab in the Unter Den Linden, according to the despatch, but he was recovered by the Spartacans before he had suffered any serious injuries. Addressing a crowd later, Liebknecht said: "Government supporters have just attempted to lynch me, but we have routed them. We have formed a revolutionary committee, therefore we will arm and remain in the streets."

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 10. — Berlin has at last experienced the horror of a night bombing attack. A despatch from Berlin to-day reported that Government aviators attacked the main railway station with bombs Wednesday night, killing sixty-five prisoners.

The most intense fighting occurred that night in the central and south-western portions of the city, the despatch says. Casualties reported to be heavy.

Desperate fighting continued in Berlin to-day, a despatch reported to-day. The Spartacans fought from windows with machine guns and bombs and a great number were killed on both sides.

INFLUENZA ON BOARD

Four Passengers on Transport Died at Sea—An Eventful Voyage.

ROUGH WEATHER

ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan. 10. — The transport "Scandinavian" docked this morning with returning soldiers, including several hundred from Ontario points. Trains are in waiting, and they will leave for their destinations immediately.

The vessel arrived in port this morning from Liverpool, after one of the most eventful voyages of the last few years. She brought 123 officers, 165 other ranks and 546 civilians, the latter chiefly women and children. During the voyage exceptionally rough weather was experienced, and many were sick. Spanish influenza broke out, and four passengers fell victims and were buried at sea. A child was buried at sea.

Hospital Ship.

HALIFAX, Jan. 10.—The hospital ship "Araguay," with seven hundred wounded Canadians, arrived and docked this morning after a rough but uneventful voyage from Liverpool. The patients include 102 mental cases, 15 cot cases and 65 amputated cases. Trains for Ontario are expected to leave about 3 p.m. Major R. Q. M. Shillington was in charge of the patients.

NORTHLAND ENQUIRY

Ship's Officers Deny Charges of Returned Soldiers.

Canadian Press:

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—At the Northland inquiry to-day the purser, chief steward and other officers of the ship denied that conditions aboard ship were below standard, as sworn to by returning soldiers, who have given evidence. If the stewards were selling food, they said they must have stolen it from the galleys and officers knew nothing about it. The chief engineer explained that water was scarce on a few days of the trip because for fear of freezing he had to turn it off at the tanks. When the ship was loaded fresh water was taken in for every man on ship.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE

It Will be Several Weeks Before Final Results Are Reached.

DELEGATES MEET

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Messages from Paris indicate that Premiers Clemenceau and Lloyd George have scored great successes on the question of freedom of the seas and that very little is likely to be said thereon when the actual peace conference assembles. The Spanish Moroco question has also been settled to the satisfaction of England and France.

PARIS, after nearly months of waiting and preparation conversations which will lay the foundation of actual Peace Congress, are about to start. American delegates feel that a great deal of progress might have been made before now if full representation of nations allied against Germany had arrived promptly. Suggestions have been made that French and American delegations go ahead while awaiting the arrival of British plenipotentiaries, who are now expected on Saturday. President Wilson, however, vetoed that plan, holding that inasmuch as there had already been so long a delay it would be best to wait a little longer to secure participation of the British delegates.

Americans Agreed.

Some trained diplomats among the Americans here are agreed that the most Mr. Wilson can hope to report on will probably be a general undertaking of the widest sort upon set of principles which must be left to be applied by the Peace Congress.

President Wilson's feeling on coming to Europe as early as he did, was that all the Entente governments made preparations to get down to talking peace. It is not an over estimation of the case to say that Mr. Wilson and his commissioners have been disappointed in meeting with delay. The American delegates are said to feel very strongly that unless plans are made to permit activities of peace to be resumed in warring countries, the demobilization of their armies may bring unwelcome problems. The opinion most generally described is that if conferences during next six weeks establish unanimity of purpose as to freedom of the seas, reduction of armaments and actual terms of peace to be imposed upon the Central Powers, a great deal will have been accomplished.

THE WEATHER

There is something unusual in the weather conditions prevailing at the present time. Last night was ushered in by high winds, drifting and a rapidly falling temperature. During the evening it was from 6 to 10 below zero, with a wind that made it feel much colder. The lowest during the night was 15 below zero—the lowest temperature this winter with the exception of last Sunday morning, when it was 1 degree lower. To-day at noon, the mercury stood at 2 degrees, thus having risen 40 degrees inside of 12 hours. This is a big change and does not occur frequently. Quite mild weather prevails all through the west. This late cold dip came direct from the north.—W.P.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, JANUARY 10TH, 1919.

THE ARMY'S CAMPAIGN.

The preliminary details of the Salvation Army's campaign in Peterboro are being arranged, and the names of those connected with the local drive indicate the widespread interest that is being taken in the appeal. This is not to be wondered at, because the Salvation Army, by its work at home in peace time has effectively demonstrated its ability to secure maximum results for a minimum of expenditure, while its efforts among the soldiers overseas have won the affection and regard of the Canadian Tommy in a remarkable fashion. The cessation of hostilities does not lessen the need for financial assistance nor does it put a stop to the Army's work on behalf of our fighting men. There is still much to be done over there as well as a great work to be carried on among returned soldiers. The Salvation Army appeal should be enthusiastically endorsed.

THE NEW CHAIRMAN.

Citizens generally will unite in congratulating Mr. Roland Denne upon his selection as chairman of the Board of Education. Mr. Denne is among the city's successful young business men, and has proved himself a most useful and reliable citizen, whose business ability and training have been employed in the interests of the public in several capacities. Mr. Denne is a real Peterboro product, inasmuch as he was born in this city and received his education and training here. He has evidently inherited his interest in educational matters from his respected father, Senator Henry Denne, who for twenty-two years served his fellow-citizens as a member of the School Board, of which organization he was for some time chairman.

The new chairman of the Board of Education has qualified for his responsible position by faithful and intelligent service as a member of the Board, and has further demonstrated his fitness by the manner in which he has conducted himself as presiding officer over other bodies. For three years Mr. Denne was chairman of the Advisory Committee of the Peterboro branch of the Canadian Red Cross—a position which he admirably filled, as he displayed an an energetic interest that made the work of the committee a thorough success. But perhaps Mr. Denne's greatest service has been rendered as president of the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition. Th remarkable progress that has been made by the Exhibition since Mr. Denne became its chief executive officer, is concrete proof of the qualities of leadership that he possesses. He has not only given largely of his time, experience and money to the task of developing the Exhibition, but has been able to inspire the directors with his own spirit, so that there is no more smoothly working or enthusiastic executive organization in the city than the directorate of the Peterboro Industrial. And the members do not hesitate in ascribing much of the credit for the zeal and harmony that exists to the leadership of Mr. Denne.

As chairman of the Board of Education, Mr. Denne is given further opportunities for service and those who have watched his career have no doubt of his ability to arise to the occasion.

THE SIBERIAN EXPEDITION

The Government might do well to use a little of its advertising space to give to Canadian people some information in regard to the Canadian forces at Archangel and in Siberia There is much dissatisfaction through-out the country over the sending of the Canadian troops to Russia and this feeling indicated by the resolutions passed by labour organizations and other bodies has been intensified by the action of Japan in recalling her troops from Russia and by the report that Great Britain is about to remove the Imperial forces. The Dominion Government has so far failed to enlighten the public as to the necessity of sending Canadian troops to Siberia and the situation there is so involved that it is difficult to see what it is hoped to accomplish with 4,000 or 5,000 Canadian soldiers in the face of the constant political unheavals. People in Canada have but the haziest idea of the purpose of the Government in landing Canadian soldiers in the midst of the turmoil of cure strike raging in Russia. It seems to be the general impression that it was a mistake in the first place to send troops at all and a bigger mistake to leave them there in the face of what is going on. An announcement that the Canadian Siberian force are on the way home should be an early feature of the new Government advertising campaign.

USING THE NEWSPAPERS

The Canadian Government, convinced by the success of its newspaper advertising campaign in the interests of the Victory Loan, the natural registration of last year and other Government undertakings, of the efficiency of this method of reaching the Canadian people has embarked on a new advertising enterprise by which it purposes to explain its plans of demobilizing and repatriating the Canadian army. The first of these advertisements appeared yesterday and the announcement was made that the Government would use a similar space from day to day to tell the Canadian people what is being done to bring back soldiers to see that opportunities for employment are found for them and to insure that those who are unable by reason of their disability to resume their former occupation are looked after. The adoption of this method of imparting information to the public is a striking endorsation of the value of newspaper advertising. The authorities have learned through their experience during the years of war that in no other way can the great mass of the people be reached so thoroughly or so quickly as through the columns of the press. The use of this medium is likely to be a feature of all national efforts henceforth, because there is no other means by which results can be obtained so effectually. And this applies to private as well as to Government activity.

CANADA CAN!

If anyone is pessimistic about Canada's future, let him put the following in his pipe and smoke it.

When the war broke out Canada had a mighty new transcontinental railway practically completed. Don't let us argue about who built it, or why. That is past and done with.

Let us keep in mind the fact that we've got it, and that it could not have been built any time within the next decade for anything like the amount that it has actually cost.

War found us with an important link still to add.

We had to join the two ends together by bridge over that great ocean highway, the St. Lawrence River, the most gigantic cantilever bridge that has ever been conceived.

That bridge, in spite of two great catastrophes, that might well have daunted the hearts of many men, has been carried to a triumphant completion.

During the greatest war in history—a war in which we have taken a relatively stupendous part—we have contributed a new wonder to the world in peaceful achievement.

Now let us turn from that to shell-making.

When the war broke out, there was not a man in Canada who knew how to make a big-gun shell. About all that the best of us could do was to distinguish one end of a shell from another.

Yet we started the making of shells.

We founded new factories and reorganized old ones to such good purpose that within three short years we have made shells to the value of $900,000,000—high explosive shells, shrapnel shells, and all the other kinds of shells.

In making that nine hundred million dollars' worth of shells we have used enough steel to build nineteen Quebec bridges or sixty-six eighteen-thousand-ton dreadnoughts.

Never once has Canada failed to meet a demand.

At times, says Sir Alexander, the British War Office would cable asking if certain explosives "or other things" could be made in Canada.

(The men on the Imperial Munitions Board would often have to consult a dictionary to find out what was meant.)

But Canada's answer always was, "Canada Can."

And Canada Did!

That is the spirit which made Canada what it was before the war and it is the spirit which has made Canada the great world force which it has become during the war.

The spirit of our soldiers is the spirit of our business men.

Can you put that in your pipe and smoke it, and still entertain any doubts as to Canada's destiny?—The Marshall Post.

Richard Thornton, Irene Goodhall and Tishia the Vampire, in "The Wanderers," at the Grand next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, with a Special Matinee, Wednesday, at 2.30. THIS IS NOT A MOVING PICTURE. The Box Office Seat Sale opened this morning.

No mention of the cast of "The Wanderers," the great Biblical drama, which will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House three night commencing Monday evening, Jan. 13th, with a matinee on Wednesday, would not be complete without reference to Miss Francesca Karmonova, the premier ballerina of the play, who dances in a ballet of 60 dancers in the second act, showing the revel in the palace of Nadina. Miss Karmenova is from Russia, Petrograd being her home, an came to America two years ago with the Diaghiloff Ballet Russe. At that time she could not talk English but her sparkling toes had a language all their own. Miss Karmonova liked America so much she remained here, and under the management of Morris Cost she has developed into one of the greatest dancing stars of to-day.

EDITORIAL NOTES

National prohibition seems certain for the United States. Old John Barleycorn is being handed a terrible beating by the legislatures of the different states.

The firm of Trotsky and Lenine, dealers in rapine, murder and anarchy has been dissolved. Henceforth the name of Leon Trotsky will appear alone on the firm's stationery.

Canadian ordnance stores on the otherside of the water have been sold to the Imperial authorities. Surely Sam Hughes' famous shovels were not included.

Peterboro City and County are asked to provide $30,000 for the Red Shield drive of the Salvation army. The campaign should go away over the top.

LIVED LIKE CROESUS.

Youth Charged With Theft of Liberty Bonds.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—A theft of $360,000 worth of liberty and industrial bonds came to light here when Lester Cregan and James Tunney, 20 years old, were arrested, charged with being accomplices of Cornelius Cregan, 19, in the crime. With the proceeds of a sale of some of the securities, the police say, the younger Cregan, who has not been found, lived like a Croesus in a Broadway hotel. He disappeared with the bonds while taking them to a bank as a broker's messenger.

HEARTS OF THE WORLD A WONDERFUL PICTURE

Wonderful in its acting and photography, remarkable for the vividness and clearness of its battle scenes, impressive in its realism and thoroughly characteristic of the unusual methods of the wizard of the screen is D. W. Griffith's astonishing film story of the great war, "Hearts of the World" is more thrilling than at the Grand Opera House, commencing yesterday and continuing for the balance of the week. "Hearts of the World" is more thriling than Mr. Griffith's first big success "The Birth of a Nation," and more interesting than "Intolerance." The awfulness of modern warfare, the terrible suffering of the people of France, the ruthless manner in which Germany made war are all convincingly set forth. For the purpose of making this film Mr. Griffith spent many months in France and he has incorporated into the action of this great picture the most impressive portions of the scenes photographed over there. The result is an astonishing picture—one that every one should see. To miss "Hearts of the World" is to miss one of the greatest film creations ever made. Running through it is a pretty love story that makes an agreeable contrast to the sombre sections of the picture, and there is the rapid shifting from a bayonet charge to a pleasing little love scene that is so characteristic of Griffith's productions.

Great as the "Hearts of the World" may be, it is made greater and brought to the point of a finished production by the magnificent musical score rendered by the Symphony Orchestra conducted by Mr. Jules Brazil. Like other Griffith productions each character has its musical theme. For instance when the little boy appears he is accompanied by the old song "Peek aboo" and whatever mood the little man is in so the different instruments croon the loving melody. Dorothy Gish as the little disturbing street singer is admirably fitted with "It's Delightful to Be Married," sung by the late Anna Held. Peterborough loves Sullivan's "H.M.S. Pinafore," and a splendid excerpt is adapted to the scene of Sir Edward Grey, it being 'He Is An Englishman." Then we have "Cirihiribin" to Monsieur Cuckoo, and "Knowest Thou the Land," from Mignon for Dorothy Gish and Robert Harron in their love scenes, in fact the whole score bristles with bits by Beethoven, Wagner, Gounod, Victor Herbert, Chopin, etc. The harp solos are beautiful especially the Chopin Nocturne with violin obligato by Adolp Koller. Mr. Brazil is an ideal conductor and one must remarw on his quickness in catching the cues, especially the winks of Dorothy Gish. The orchestra is perfect, and should be, for its personnel is made up of soloists who were here before with "Birth of a Nation," and are, of course, highly experienced in symphonic orchestral music.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide

New Year greetings are greetings of good will. How they soften hard hearts, purify base desires, sweeten bitter thought, and make every deed purer and holier; every wish kinder and tenderer. Let hearts expand, sympathies enlarge, and good will reign. Let benediction drop from lips, and substantial gifts fall from overflowing hands. Make cheerless homes radiant, and hopeless hearts to thrill with unspeakable gladness. Forgive your enemies. Bury the past. Rise above the mean and petty resentments which you may have harbored against those who have not used you well. Be generous.

Teach the children to work and to save; to save things as well as money. Some day they will bless you for it.

A good resolution for the hard-worked housewife to make for the New Year is that she will find time each day for a nap, or a rest at least of fifteen minutes; that she will take every other evening at least for reading or playing games with her children, and at least one afternoon in the week for a social visit, a ride, a walk. These would not be impossible for the busiest woman, who will look carefully into her methods and see if there are not superfluities she can cut off; trimmed underclothing that can be made plain and thus save sewing and ironing; cake and pies and preserves, for which plainer wholesome food can be substituted.

Good-by, old year. After all, we are loath to part. Many precious memories as well as many sad things to remember will be forever linked with thee. But time tells us part and however severely thou hast chastened us, yet we feel our hardened feelings relenting and a spirit of charity pervades our being. We forgive as we hope to be forgiven. In humility and love we bow our adieu and welcome the New Year with naught but good resolves and high aspirations that each coming day will see our lives better, purer and nobler in every act and purpose.

As you turn the corner in to the new year, look back a minute over the road you have been travelling the past year. It seemed a long way when you started out, but it has been traversed at last. Have you been true to yourself? If not, once more before you step out into the pure New Year, renew your promises to your better natures. Don't stray, but linger near the pleasant outlooks, keep near the bits of high ground where you breathe purer air and can see off Heaven's high hills of blue, make the motive pure, work for the object.

The new Christmas game will be very fashionable. The players hunt through their pocketbooks to see how much money they have left. The one who has the most has to buy a present for New Year's.

No matter how your mothers may speak, their hearts are in the right place; if their attire is oldfashioned and the manners not up to the frills of the twentieth century standard, they have had experience of more value than all the schooling and extra accomplishments that you may think of shining excellence. Heed your mother—you will never regret it.

It is more blessed to give than to receive. It is likewise more expensive.

Our resolutions for the new year should be definite and specific. Do not say simply that you will be more liberal, but say just how liberal you will be, not say that you will be more faithful, but say just what duties neglected in the past, you will engage to perform for the future.

The noblest resolution that any citizen could make for the new year would be the resolution to live more faithfully by the golden rule, that sublime principle of conduct for this world and for all worlds. Failure to live by this law causes the chief sorrows and collisions among men.

There is no better test of purity and true goodness than reluctance to think evil of one's neighbors and absolute incapacity to believe an evil report about good men, except the most trustworthy evidence.

Give girls an object in life—let them fit themselves thoroughly to pursue that object, and there will be fewer unhappy marriages and less work for the divorce courts.

The store clerk who gets seven dollars a week and spends twenty dollars for a Christmas present for his girl should be classed among "Christmas greens."

Never mind, ladies. The Christmas shopping doesn't come out of your pockets. It is our annual opportunity to get more than even with the men folks.

Regrets for the past will not strengthen the future. "Forgetting the past, press on," is the better way.

Know all men by the presents (Christmas presents) that the milk if human kindness is still sweet.

To make your New Year a happy one be sure to make some one else have a happy New Year.

Bolsheviks Adding Medieval Tortures to Modern Tactics

WARSAW, Jan. 4.— The names of Vilna, Lemberg and Kiev are being written in blood red letters along the western frontier of Russia and scores of smaller cities, towns and estates lying between the cities also are being destroyed by the Bolsheviki. According to trustworthy reports reaching Warsaw, the Bolshevik are adding tortures of the Dark Ages to the customary horrors of guerilla warfare.

The Poles are making a gallant defence of Lemberg with limited means, but the Bolshevik Ukranians, aided by German gunners slowly are destroying the city. The besiegers are estimated in number 50,000, commanded by former Premier Holubowicz of the Ukraine, who also was chairman of the Ukrainian peace delegation at Brest-Litovsk. The Ukrainians threaten the water supply of the city, while food is becoming scarce! Only a few civil population has been able to escape from the city.

The Polish troops are being aided in the defence of the city by many citizens of Lemberg, including girls and boys. In November the citizens aided the Poles in saving the city from the Ukrainians.

The archbishop of Lemberg is authority for the statement that girls taken prisoners by the besiegers are outraged and tortured. The archbishop says that the cruelties of the Bolshevik have no parallel in modern history. Kiev, the Ukrainian capital which has been relatively quiet for the past month, is rapidly getting into the hands of the Bolshevik. The separatist leader, Petlira, is declared to have reached an agreement with Trotsky and Lenine and Russian Bolshevik troops are spreading southward. The terms of the alliance between Petlura and the Moscow Government are said to provide that the two states shall retain their mutual independence and that no obstacle shall be permitted to prevent the teaching of Bolshevik doctrines.

The German troops in the Ukraine appear to have been unable to remove their munitions. Stores valued at 18,000,000 rubles are said to have fallen into the hands of the Bolshevik at Kiev. On the northern end of the line the Poles are striving to protect Vilna from the Bolshevik flood.

Only 17 Men for Two Platoons in Guelph

With the adoption of the two-platoon system, which is expected to become effective on January 16th, Guelph's fire department will increase its strength to seventeen men with the chief. This would provide eight men on each shift, in addition to the chief who remains at the hall.

Voice of The People

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—Please permit me to correct the misstatements contained in the letter written by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., which appeared in last evening's issue of your paper, respecting the dredging that was done by the Government above and below Hunter street bridge.

I would not take this trouble only for the fact that the interests of this city may seriously suffer if I do not do so.

All the facts may be found in the files of the Department of Public Works at Ottawa.

There will be found Mr. J. G. Sing's report showing why the river above and below the bridge should be dredged. It will show that the Quaker Oats Co. propose to put on the Trent Canal a large fleet of boats and barges to carry grain from Midland to Peterborough. Those who know this Company know that they carry out their arrangements to the letter and that they look with scorn on a breach of good faith. This dredging that was done was simply a part of Trent Canal work.

Mr. Sing's report will further show that he made an estimate of the cost of the work. His report was approved of by the Government. The work was done under Mr. Sing's own direction by day labour and completed within his estimate.

Mr. Burnham will also find from the files in the Department that the work Mr. Sing planned to do was fully completed and was never at any time stopped or interfered with by any one.

The Quaker Oats Co. never at any time suggested that the Government dredge their tail race, nor did it do so. The Laurier Government never stopped the work, but completed it. The work will be used when the canal is completed and a swing in the present bridge will be a necessity.

I shall not answer the insinuations contained in Mr. Burnham's letter because they are as unfounded as his knowledge of the real facts connected with this dredging work is wanting.

I trust that this explanation will secure for the Mayor and City Council Mr. Burnham's hearty co-operation and support to have the Government carry out the arrangement that it entered into in good faith to pay its full share toward the cost of the construction of Hunter street bridge.

Yours, etc.,
R. R. HALL.

Jan. 10th, 1919.

Peterborough, January 10th, 1919.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—There is no need of Mr. Burnham flying off the handle and getting up in the air, because Mr. R. R. Hall was willing to suggest that it might help the City in its 'efforts to induce The Honourable Mr. Carvell to recommend to the Government to pay a part of the cost of the high-level bridge.

Of course, we know Mr. Burnham desires to take all the credit for himself, but the fact is, Mayor Duncan arranged for Mr. Carvell to come here, and Mr. Burnham, in his usual, tactless way, tries to appropriate Mr. Carvell's visit to himself and make it a political scheme, and when others are trying to assist the ratepayers of the City to have the Dominion Government pay part of the cost of the bridge, Mr. Burnham flies into a tantrum and tries to spoil the whole thing.

He did the same thing when ex-Mayor Bradburn was fighting the C.P.R. to get a swing put in the railway bridge over the Otonabee River. Mr. Burnham telephoned that he washed his hands clean of the whole thing and left the City in the lurch. However, Mr. Bradburn pulled the whole thing out of the hole and straightened it out and succeeded in doing what Mr. Burnham could not do.

Most of us are getting sick and tired of seeing this stuff Mr. Burnham is throwing into the newspapers day after day. We will be greatly relieved when the next general election takes place and Mr Burnham is relegated to private life and to the practice of law.

Since Mr. Burnham has entered public life it has been one succession of quarrels, bickerings and attacks on men who have been trying to do their duty and who do not simply sit down and talk or waste their time writing columns of junk for the newspaper.

I would suggest that Mayor Duncan, if he wants to make Mr. Carvell's meeting a success, that he keeps Mr. Burnham on the back bench.

If the Mayor lets Mr. Burnham butt in the meeting will probably end up the way the Honourable Frederick Nicholls' meeting on the Market Square blew up, when Mr. Burnham drew up the resolution to be presented to the audience. There has probably been never as much vitrol and sulphur let loose as when Mr. Nicholls told Mr. Burnham what he thought of him.

When Mr. Carvell comes I would suggest that Mr. Burnham be allowed to speak on the subject of "The Abolition of Titles," which he so successfully prevented being granted to the war profiteers.

Yours truly,
CONSERVATIVE.

Peterborough,
6th January, 1919.

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

Sir,—The point of public interest in the case of the dressmaker and her customer in the Division Court reported in your Saturday's issue was not brought out in the report. This is the point:

The defendant Miss A. Law has on the door of her place of business on George street "Miss Law, Dress and Coat Maker." The public will watch for the result of this case to know whether when a person puts upa sign or shingle announcing to the world that he or she is prepared to undertake work of some particular kind requiring skill, the public are entitled to assume that the person so advertising is bound to live up to such shingle.

Yours etc.,
Jas. G. Gulse-Bagley.

The Board of Education Grants a Bonus of Ten Per Cent. to Teaching Staff

This Will Mean An Increase in Expenditure of Between Eight and Nine Thousand Dollars a Year—Mr. R. Denne Elected Chairman of the Board for the Current Year—Committees Appointed.

A bonus of ten per cent to all employees of the Board of Education outside of the janitors, was granted by the Board at the inaugural meeting last night.

The bonus will go into effect on February 1st and 50 per cent. will be paid on February 1st, the balance on October 1st. This will benefit the entire teaching staff of the city.

In seconding the motion, which was moved by Mr. J. W. Worth, Mr. J. M. Greene said that considering the responsibility of the position a teacher holds, the salaries are at present inadequate.

Mr. J. A. McKone suggested that a 10 per cent. increase was not in keeping with the increased cost of living, which has doubled in the past few years.

Dr. F. C. Neal said that professional people had not generally had their incomes increased in proportion to the high cost of living.

The Discussion.

The motion was carried after considerable deliberation and protest on the part of some of the members.

Mr. Patterson contended that the increase should be graduated as he considered it unfair that a teacher on a $2,000 salary should get $200 extra, while one at $600 should get $60.

The increase in teachers' salaries is estimated to mean a total increase of $8,000 to $9,000 a year.

Present Scale.

The janitors will continue on their present scale of wages.

Chairman Mr. Denne.

Mr. Roland Denne, a member of the Board for four years, was elected chairman for 1919 to succeed Mr. Vincent Eastwood, who resigned after 16 years membership. In assuming the position Mr. Denne said he appreciated the honour, especially as his father, Mr. Henry Denne, had been a member of the Board for twenty-two years. He said he would do his best, with the co-operation of the rest of the Board, to transact business in the able manner in which it had been transacted in the past.

The Committees

The committees appointed for 1919 were:

Finance committee—E. G. Patterson, chairman, T. B. McGrath, G. N. Gordon and J. W. Worth.

Property committee—A. A. Fowler, chairman, J. A. McKone; J. M. Greene and G. O. Cameron.

Supervision — Dr. Neal, chairman, A. A. Fowler, E. G. Patterson and J. M. Greene.

Committee of Appointments— G. O. Cameron and the whole Board.

Advisory Industrial Committee.

V. Eastwood, G. K. Munro, Wm. Sangsters, T. H. G. Denne, J. W. Corkery, W. R. Breyfogle, R. Denne, T. B. McGrath, Dr. F. C. Neal, E. G. Patterson, J. W. Worth.

Advisory Commercial Committee.

W. R. Morris, W. H. Pretty, A. W. Cressman, E. F. Mason, J. A. McKone, G. O. Cameron, J. M. Greene, T. B. McGrath.

SATISFYING HIS CONSCIENCE.

A hungry Irishman went into a restaurant during Lent, and said to the waiter—
"Have yez any whale?"
"No."
"Have yez any shark?"
"No."
"Have yez any swordfish?"
"No."
"Have yez any jellyfish?"
"No."
"All right," said Pat. "Then bring me ham and eggs and a beefsteak smothered wid onions. The Lord knows I asked for fish."

Prayer Service This Evening

Services Have Been Well Attended.

The closing meeting of the week of prayer will be held to-night in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church and the speaker will be Rev. A. Thomas of George Street Methodist Church. These meetings have been largely attended and it is hoped that the closing session will fill St. Paul's. Surely those who have not yet been able to attend will not allow the "week of prayer to end without participating.

This year, the coming of peace and the re-uniting of families and the special responsibility to make the gospel a reality to those whom the church is endeavouring to reach makes it imperative that Christian people should not be indifferent when such services are in progress.

Last night's meeting was the largest attendance of the week. It was held in Trinity Church and the discourse by Mr. Pogue on "Our Responsibility to the Returned Soldier" was a splendid handling of a difficult subject.

An offering will be made to-night to defray the necessary expenses of the week.

This Sale

Cressman's SEMI-ANNUAL LONELY SALE FOR MEN needs no introduction to the general public. Twice a year, for many years, we have given our patrons this opportunity to buy goods at remarkably low prices. Towards the end of the season we sacrifice our broken lines —hence the name "Lonely." At the original prices these goods were the full limit of intrinsic value. At these reductions they represent offerings which are more than exceptional because of the scarcity of materials.

Norwood Couple Celebrate Sixtieth Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burgess Have Spent Over Fifty Years of Married Life on the One Farm.

An unbroken period of fifty years of married life is, comparatively speaking, a rare occurrence, but when ten more years is added to this, the occurrence is much more unusual. This, however, has been the good fortune of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burgess of Norwood.

On Saturday evening last, January 4th, 1919, surrounded by the members of their family and grandchildren, this venerable couple celebrated the 60th anniversary of their wedding. It was just a simple, quiet family gathering, the aged host and hostess having stipulated that there was to be no fuss or feathers and no presents, a feature which those intimately acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Burgess will at once realize has been characteristic of them at all times. Their hospitality has always been of the genuine stamp, behind which was the warm heart.

Over fifty years of their married life was spent on the farm about four miles east of Norwood, now occupied by their son, Williamson Burgess. They retired to the village about nine years ago.

Mr. Burgess, who will be 90 years of age in September next, is of Irish descent, having been born in the Emerald Isle in 1829, while Mrs. Burgess, whose maiden name was Mary Ann Kemp, is a Canadian by birth, of Scottish lineage. She is a native of this community and will be 83 in July next.

Notwithstanding the earlier stipulation the assembled relatives took occasion, during the evening, to present Mr. and Mrs. Burgess each with a handsome bouquet of flowers, while as a souvenir of the event each of those in attendance carried away a piece of china belonging to a set presented to the bride on the occasion of her marriage sixty years ago.

RETURNED OFFICERS ADDRESSED ENGINEERS' CLUB ON THEIR WORK

Major Frank Bradburn, M.C., and Capt. Claude Rogers, M.C., addressed the Engineers' Club last night at a luncheon at Hooper's. They related some of the most interesting feats and features of engineering work which they had witnessed and shared in at the front. Both speakers covered incidents from all branches of the service and pictured the work in an entertaining and instructive manner. Several musical numbers were provided by Mr. John Allan and Mr. Herb. Rush. The next meeting of the Club will be held on Thursday, February 13th and will be addressed by Mr. E. V. Moore on the subject of "Peat."

The will, it became known to-day, bequeaths the entire residue of the estate in trust to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Col. Roosevelt also left a trust fund of $60,000, inherited from his father, to his five children, in equal portions. He also left to his children in equal parts all of his plate and silver.

Fire Destroys Norwood Home

OCCUPANTS WERE RESCUED IN THE NICK OF TIME.

NORWOOD, Jan. 10.—The double house on the south side of Belmont Street, occupied by Mr. Joseph Dickens and Mr. John Rogers, was destroyed by fire on Tuesday. The fire started in the part of the house occupied by Mr. John Rogers' family, but just how it originated is unknown. Mrs. Rogers had left the room for a few minutes and when she returned the place was in flames. She was just in time to get the youngest child, who was lying on the couch, out. The neighbours hurried to the assistance of the families and managed to save most of the contents of Mr. Dickens' house from the flames, but were able only to rescue a small part of Mr. Rogers' effects and some of the articles were scorched by the flames.

Mr. Rogers had no insurance. The house belonged to Mr. Dickens, who had $900 insurance covering both building and contents.

The stable at the rear of the dwelling was also burned.

The two families have secured temporary quarters in the house on Cedar Street, south of Finlay's factory, formerly occupied by Mr. John A. Patterson.

Oshawa Secures Norwood Minister

A CALL FOR THE REV. A. MANSELL IRWIN.

Rev. A. Mansell Irwin, B. A., B.D., pastor of the Methodist church in Norwood, has received an unanimous invitation from the official board of the King street Methodist church, at Oshawa, to become their pastor at the close of the present year, which he has accepted subject to the approval of the Stationing Committee. Rev. Mr. Irwin is on his fifth year in Norwood, a somewhat unusual itineracy in Methodism. Since, however, Toronto has followed the example of Norwood in extending the "Church" term to five years our Oshawa friends may find it a desirable procedure four years hence.

PETERBORO COUNTY LAD SHOT HIMSELF

Notified His Mother and Sisters of His Intention to Take His Own Life.

NORWOOD, Jan. 10. — A very sad shooting affair occurred at the home of Mr. Robert Tedford, on the Hastings Road, about a mile south of Norwood, when his son, Richard Arnold Tedford, a lad of 17 years of age, ended his own life by shooting himself through the head with a rifle. It appears that Mr. Tedford had reproved the boy for neglecting some duty about the home and it so preyed upon his mind that he determined to take his own life. Later in the day during his father's absence, he informed his mother of his intention and she and his sisters spent most of the afternoon trying to persuade him from his intentions. They thought that they had succeeded, but when Mr. Tedford drove into the yard on his return, the mother left him for a minute to speak to him; immediately the boy rushed to the garret and seizing the gun carried out his awful purpose by placing the muzzle under his chin and discharging it.

Doctors were hastily summoned but death was almost instantaneous.

The boy had recently had an attack of influenza, and it is the opinion of the doctors that his mind had been affected by the illness.

The coroner was notified but after visiting the scene he decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

FARMERS WANT FREE TRADE FOR CATTLE

BRANDON, Man., Jan. 9.—The farmers' platform, drawn up several weeks ago by the Canadian Council of Agriculture, was accepted in toto to-day at the annual convention of the Manitoba Grain Growers' Association. Every plank was carried practically without discussion, with the exception of the clauses dealing with taxation. There was no mistaking the sentiment of to-day's sessions. Unrestricted reciprocity with the United States was freely advocated, and met little opposition. President Henders' remark that this would eventually come was greeted with enthusiasm. He wanted to see the day when boots and shoes and clothing would come into Canada duty free.

J. R. Murray of the United Grain Growers' Company said the Canadian manufacturers should and would go into competition and hold their own with any manufacturers in the world.

Pneumonia Kills Norwood Man

GUELPH, Jan. 10.—The dreaded influenza epidemic is responsible for the death of another member of the staff of the O.A.C., Mr. Walter H. Scott, lecturer on drainage, having succumbed to pneumonia following an attack of influenza. He was in his 28th year and was the son of Mr. Robert A. Scott, of Norwood, Peterborough County, where he was born. He became connected with the Department of Physics at the O.A.C. during his second year, and on his receiving his degree of B.S.A. in 1916, received the appointment as lecturer in drainage. His work took him to all parts of the province, and he was looked upon as a valuable man to the farming community. He was married in July, 1917, to Miss Lila Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Scott, Cork Street, and she, with her little daughter Margaret, survive.

World's Happenings

(Canadian Press.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10. — President Wilson was called on to-day by government officials to aid in the settlement of the strike of New York harbour workers. Two reports on the situation were sent to the president by cable. One was from the white house and the other from the Secretary of Labor, who explained the situation after conference with W. J. Lauck, the secretary of the War Labor Board. The opinion was expressed that the President would take some action during the day.

STRUCK A MINE.

( Canadian Press.)

LONDON, Jan. 10. — The British steamer "Northumbria," four thousand tons, struck a mine off Middlesbrough on Thursday, and it is believed that most of the crew were drowned. A boat with two survivors and eight dead men has been washed ashore at Newton Abbot. Four boats which left the ship with survivors are missing.

AUSTRIAN DEFEAT.

(Special to Examiner.)

ROME, Jan. 10. — There were 19 Italian, two British and one French division pitted against twenty-three Austrian divisions at the battle of Vittorio Veneto, when the Austrian retreat began, according to an official report issued here to-day.

FAST ICE ENSURES GREAT GAME TO-NIGHT

Both Lindsay and Peterboro Teams Delighted With Cold Snap, Because It Gives Them a Chance to Show Their Best Wares—Opening Junior Game of the Season Will Draw a Big Crowd at Brock Street Rink.

The weather man is evidently a friend of junior hockey, for he has come through with a cold snap just in time to ensure a lightning fast sheet of ice for to-night's O.H.A. battle at Brock street rink between the well-known Lindsay Midgets and the Peterborough youngsters. Both teams are happy at the change in the weather, for they both depend on speed and stick-handling and the fast ice is just what they wanted. The game promises to be a grand exhibition and sure to be hard fought for junior teams always give every ounce they have—which accounts for the ever increasing popularity of junior O.H.A. hockey.

Lindsay, with the advantage of a game under their belts and the prestige of a victory over the Port Hope Ontarios to their credit are decidedly cocky over their chances in to-night's game. They figure on cinching first place in the group race by beating the young Petes at home. They will have their strongest line-up in action and the home talent will have to be at their best to secure a victory.

The Petes, with Cherrett, Park and Hagerman on the forward line, will trot out what should prove about the fastest attacking division that has performed for the local juniors in a number of years. All three are fast and good stick-handlers, and the trio should keep the visiting rear guard busy. On the defence Flowers, a brother of the old junior goaler, who is overseas, will be in the nets, with Frost and Campbell in front of him. Campbell is a Peterborough youngsters who is just home from overseas service, and his two casualty braids show that he has been twice wounded. With Girard and the little hornet, Williams, as substitutes, the team is apparently well fortified in all departments.

The game is called at 8.15 o'clock and will get away sharp on time. The Petes will wear their new uniforms of maroon and white. Here is the Peterborough line-up. The numbers that the players will wear are given for the benefit of the fans:

Goal—Flowers (8).
R. Defence—Campbell (9).
L. Defence—Frost (4.)
Centre—Cherrett (1).
R. Wing—Park (2.)
L. Wing—Hagerman (3).
Substitutes— Williams (5), Girard (6.)

Notes on the Peterboro Game

(By Lou Marsh).

Something unique in the hockey world has been introduced by Whitby Military Hospital team. They have a blind trainer. He is an expert masseur. He is Sergeant Graham, R.G.A., and he enjoyed himself immensely at Peterborough Wednesday night as long as his pets were on the ice. When they lost out in the overtime finish he out-smiled Gunner Joe Dufton, the manager of the team and joined in his chorus of "Never mind boys we'll get 'em again."

An example of real sporting spirit occurred during the Peterborough-Whitby Hospital team game at Peterborough. When Rose slipped in the winning goal and took away a game which Whitby looked to have packed away on ice, C. H. L. Macdonald, one of the veteran soldier players skated over and shook hands with him. The novelty of being congratulated by an opponent, especially after the way the game had been snatched out of the fire, had Rose dizzy with surprise. A little more of that brand of sportsmanship will be welcome. Macdonald had his education in sportsmanship completed in Switzerland, where he played while on parole as a prisoner of war.

The Houdini of O.H.A. hockey is H. Morris, the goalkeeper of the Whitby Hospital team. Wednesday night in the game at Peterborough he made the puck disappear three times. First it went up under his body and they had to stand him on his head to get it out, and the other times it stuck in the top of his knee pads. On the last occasion the puck was lost completely for two minutes. The goal umpire claimed a goal, but a close search of the nets did not locate the missing disc. The entire end of the rink was searched and everybody was standing around goggle-eyed when suddenly Meyers exclaimed, "Here it is," and produced it from his knee pads. The Petes claim that Meyers is an adept at hiding the puck, while he claims that the disappearing puck is just a freak of circumstances. However, that Peterborough puck has to go some before it equals the record of a Welland puck which wound up in a defence player's hip pocket after a shot by a Port Colborne player.

The Neill Cup Games.

The curlers of the local club and of the district are reminded of the Neill cup games that will be played here on Tuesday, January 21st. The trophy is a beautiful sample of the art of some silversmith, and is on exhibition in the first floor assembly room at the rink, commonly known as "Ice No. 8." It has been presented by Mr. Robert Neill to the clubs of this district, including Keene, Campbellford, Norwood, Lakefield and Millbrook. The competing rinks must be the regular groups that are playing together throughout the season, and must not be "packed" for this competition. In fact the secretary of each club is required to forward a statement to that effect.

The committee has also purchased four splendid casseroles for the first and only prize, and these are now on exhibition at the rink. It is particularly hoped that the outside clubs will be largely represented, for it was Mr. Neill's hope that through this competition the curlers of the Peterborough district might be brought more closely together than ever. The local scheduled games rinks are evincing an interest in the contest and those who are able to get away during the afternoon will likely enter their rinks.

Alex Kay skipped an eight end over on Dick Davidson last night in the very first of their scheduled game Davidson was lying second shot behind a fair safe port, but Kay picked it out and hung up what is believed to be a record in the local rink.

There were several rinks unoccupied on Wednesday night which has been left open for informal games that the players, new and old, may have a certain variety that is absent when every night is devoted to the scheduled series.

De Laval Employees Have Formed a Bowling League

Opening Game Will Be Played on Saturday.

A bowling league has been formed by the De Laval Co., comprised of three teams, The Creamery Factory, The Separator Factory and the Office.

Saturday, January 11th, Separator vs. Creamery.
Saturday, January 18th, Office vs. Creamery.
Saturday, January 25th, Office vs. Separator.
Saturday, eFbruary 1st, Separator vs. Creamery.
Saturday, February 8th, Office vs. Creamery.
Saturday, February 15th, Office vs. Separator.

A shield has been donated by Mr. W. R. Breyfogle to be competed for by the different teams, and which must be won three leagues in succession before winning permanently.

Mr. Ruiter of the Creamery Factory, with his usual foresight, has a space in his office already allotted for this shield, but Mr. French of the Separator Factory claims that he will be the one that will separate Mr. Ruiter from winning this shield. In the meantime the office have compounded figures that cannot be disputed, showing that neither Mr. Ruiter nor Mr. French have been calculating correctly. In fact Mr. Robinson has already drawn up a list of the names he wishes to be inserted on this shield, which of course, are all office players.

The employees are very enthusiastic over the formation of this league and the games promise to be very keenly contested.

INVADING THE U. S. MARKET.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10. — Japan is pressing forward in the cotton industry and her recent activities in the local futures market attracted considerable attention. That Japan means to increase her cotton industry is indicated by plans which have been adopted by the Japan Trading Co., which has its headquarters at Fort Worth, Texas, for the erection of a large cotton compress and warehouses there.

The compress and warehouses will cost about $4000,000, and it is anticipated that thereby Japan will increase exports through Galveston.

Joe Dwyer Still In the Ring

First Hockey Match of the Season at the Arena.

NIAGARA FALLS, Jan. 10.— The hockey team had its first work-out of the season at the Arena. Coach Dave Belland of the Quebec pro's put the boys through a stiff practice.

Joe Dwyer, the Peterborough boy and former Sarnia star, was in goal. Dwyer is one of the best goal tenders in this part of the country. With Gus Eugene Fraser and Jack Murray of Sarnia in front of him, the Falls looks to have one of the best defences in the league, today.

George Penney, Montreal City leaguer, is a good stick handler, and has a lot of speed and ought to be a valuable man to the Falls this winter. With Earl Bawtenheimer, Robins, Kalceflesch McDonald, Isenges and Farrell, the Falls has a good team to pick from.

Outdoor Skating An Enjoyable Pastime

Mark Street Rink in East City a Well-Conducted Place of Amusement.

There appears to be a tendency this year on the part of a number of people to take outdoor exercise. Possibly on account of considerable sickness during the fall people are giving more attention to their health than formerly.

One of the greatest forms of health giving amusement is skating and outdoor skating is better still. The East City Rink on Mark street offers excellent opportunity to those who enjoy outdoor exercise and possibly accounts for the large attendance.

LABOR TO FIGHT

Samuel Gompers Says Victory Over Menace is Assured.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, declared last night that American organized Labor will fight the spread of Bolshevism with every energy at its command. Mr. Gompers made the statement on the eve of his departure for Paris to attend the International Labor Conference to be held during the sessions of the peace envoys.

"Bolshevism," Mr. Gompers said, "is as great an attempt to disrupt the trade unions as it is to overturn the Government of the United States." He added that victory over the menace was assured, however, because of the sane Americanism of the American Federation of Labor.

Windsor Doctor Had Busy Season

222 CUSTOMERS ONE DAY

WINDSOR, Ont. Jan. 10.—Dr. G. N. Gardiner, residing on Gladstone Avenue, this city, against whom a complaint was made a few days ago that he had issued prescriptions for liquor without first having patients submit to proper medical examination, appeared before Magistrate Miers in the Police Court yesterday. After a hearing lasting practically the entire day, the doctor was declared guilty on a charge of "issuing unnecessary liquor prescriptions." A fine of $200, with $43.50 costs, was imposed. R. L. Brackin, K. C. who appeared for Dr. Gardiner, announced that the case will be appealed.

In the course of the examination of witnesses, it was brought out that the accused had issued 1,244 prescriptions for liquor in the month of December. The usual charge is $1 for each order issued. In one day the physician had handed out as many as 222 prescriptions for liquor.

As an indication of the business being done daily in Windsor's single liquor shop, which is operated by Donald Fraser and where liquor is sold only on a doctor's order, it was shown that 1,095 liquor prescriptions were honored at this store in September, 3,259 in October, 6,287 in November and 8,512 in December, 1918. In passing sentence Magistrate Miers sharply criticized the indiscriminate way in which Dr. Gardiner has "abused his privileges" and declared it his opinion that the doctor had opened an office here for the sole purpose practically of issuing prescriptions for liquor." No reputable physician would conduct business as you have done," said the court.

REAL JANUARY THAW PREVAILS IN THE WEST

WINNIPEG, Jan. 8.—Western Canada is revelling in a spell of mild weather such as it rarely enjoys at this time of the year. The temperature stands about freezing at nearly every point on the prairies, and at some points the game of curling has been interrupted for lack of ice.

In Winnipeg to-day only a cool winds prevents a decided thaw, and practically the whole of Saskatchewan is blessed with a temperature of above about 42 degrees Fahrenheit. The forecast is for continued mild weather in the next day or so with a keen westerly wind.

Farmers Now Apply to Mr. Wearing For Coal

At the meeting of the Fuel committee on Wednesday night it was decided that applications from farmers shall henceforth be referred directly to the chairman, Mr. Joseph Wearing, instead of being held for the consideration of the committee as a whole. This will enable farmers to get their supplies immediately, and it is expected that they will be more liberally dealt with than in the past.

The demand for the city's reserve coal continues steady, and most of the purchasers have stated that they were unable to get coal from the dealers. It is now assured that the danger of extreme scarcity is past, and as a result there is a tendency gradually to lighten and remove or revoke the regulations.

TIM IN THE GERMAN OFFENSIVE

(By Lieut. J. B. Morton).

An old regular soldier sat on a low wall, dangling his legs, with a clay pipe in his mouth. By his side sat a younger man, who had come into the army from a barber's shop in Putney three and a half years before.

"How's it all going to end, Curly?" said the young man.

"How's all what going to end?"

"This show."

"What show?"

"This offensive of theirs, man."

"Oh, that! Well, when they're tired of bein' killed I suppose they'll pull up short, 'oist flags an' ring bells an' shake 'ands with theirselves."

"They're getting ground anyway."

Curly looked annoyed.

"They're not after ground. It's us they're after. You and me and the rest of us. While we're still goin' strong nothing's much good to 'em."

"That's rather how I felt about it."

"Then what the hell are you makin' me up and talk for? Ruddy pipe's out now."

The battalion had been out of the trenches a few hours, and the men were resting in a village some miles behind the line. They had been in tough fighting and were very tired.

"Think I'll get in and have a sleep," said Tim, the younger man.

"Me too."

They got off the wall and walked into their barn, where it was already dark enough to light candles. They began to unwind their puttees, talking quietly, as there were men sleeping all round them, some of them curled up just where they had dropped their packs.

"Must say," said Curly, "I like a 'baccy with a tang to it, something that kind o' bites. Not exactly a burning feeling. Just a nip now an' then."

"I always stick to fags; less trouble to light," said Tim.

"Yes, there is that, a pipe's a hell of a trouble in a way."

They had just got their puttees off when the Orderly Sergeant appeared in the doorway with orders to parade at once in marching order. There was a sound of movement in the next barn, and men whistling. Curly was in the act of re-lighting his pipe.

"They are a trouble," he said, poking the tobacco down.

Tim began to put on his puttees.

"Lucky we hadn't just started to sleep. Being woken suddenly spoils you a bit for marching."

"You're right, mate. Better wake some of 'em."

The other men woke and stretched, and then began to put their boots on.

"Wonder what it is."

"Goin' up in support, I expect."

"Forced march, probably."

"Where did you shove those fags o' mine?"

"Under your pack. Just there."

"Oh, I've got 'em."

Nobody showed any surprise at the sudden orders, just after coming out of the line. They were used to the unexpected happening, and took it for granted.

"How long have we got?"

"Twenty minutes more."

Later on, by the time it was quite dark, they paraded outside billets, were inspected, and marched off. The officers had some trouble at first over the singing. They had to explain that there must be no singing after a certain point The men had to content themselves with talking in low voices. Ahead of them flares were going up, and there was a terrific roaring of guns.

Curly and Tim were still deep in their argument over the respective merits of pipes and cigarettes when the platoon came to the long communication trench. It was being shelled heavily, but that did not interrupt them.

"Yes—that's all very well," came Curly's voice round a traverse, but with a pipe——."

Wintering in Palestine

Everything concerning the Holy Land seems doubly interesting these times. Palestine is said to be the paradise of the ornithologist.

Swarms of European birds visit Palestine in winter, and many breed there. The cranes, as in Dante's fine line, still pass in winter "trailing their long-drawn line across the sky," and in the spring the voice of the turtle is heard in the land.

The Holy land is appropriately a stronghold of the pigeon family, turtle-doves are found, the wood-pigeon comes in myriads in winter, and the common pigeon, the true dove of Scripture, is still abundant, both wild and tame, throughout the country. As a contrast to these, "every raven after his kind," the crow tribe of several species is in abundance, and birds of prey, from the great griffon vulture, the "eagle" of Scripture, to the sparrow-hawk, are a feature of the country.

In the deep tropical Jordan valley we find a sort of aviary of real tropical birds, which found there a refuge from the last glacial epoch—the lovely little sunbird, or "Jericho humming bird," the land-feeding, white-breasted kingfisher, and a species of gregarious thrush.

Here, too, is found the great Indian fishing owl, and among the rocks of Marsabaa th emonks have half-tamed the orange-winged blackbird, which is really a starling of African type, as much out of his latitude as the hyrax. One of the birds peculiar to Palestine, the pretty little horned viper lies in wait, as in olden times, to bite the heels of the rarest birds in the world.

Reptiles abound, and even the Nile crocodile, the leviathan of the Bible, lingfiered long enough to give Tristram the chance of obtaining a specimen nearly twelve feet long, while, in addition to the African cobra, we find the grass-snake among the harmless species, and the wicked little horned viper lies in wait, as in olden times, to bite the heels of the horses.

As for the fish, they are as abundant and varied as ever, and it is interesting to note that the Sea of Galilee is still packed with them, and that the commonest kinds are of an African family and interesting illustration of the scientific interest which unites with the religious to make Palestine among the most interesting of all countries.

We expect to be at our main destination in four days time. I don't want you to send me any more parcels as I might not get them, as I don't think that we will be very long over here. "'Nothing,' replied the young man. 'I've said too much already.'"—Washington Star.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST FORMER GERMAN EMPEROR

LONDON, Jan. 10 — Proceedings against the former German Emperor are advised in a special report by a sub-committee of the Commission charged with inquiring into violation of laws of war, appointed two months ago. One most difficult part of the work has been the inquiry into the ill-treatment of prisoners, their employment behind the lines, illegal methods of warfare, misuse of the Red Cross flag, bombardment of hospitals and the execution of Miss Edith Cavell and Capt. Fryatt.

'About three years ago," says Mr. Meehan, "I had the Grippe which left me in a very run-down condition that finally developed into Dyspepsia. I was unable to eat but a few things and had a craving for acid. I gave up treating with the doctors because they did not help me and on the advice of a friend used Ferrozone. It not only cured me of Dyspepsia and Biliousness, but has built up my strength to what it was before I had the Grippe. I can recommend Ferrozone as an ideal restorative."

Ferrozone gives you force, energy, vim.

Thousands use Ferrozone—they all feel better; try it yourself — sold in 50c. boxes, six for $2.50, at all dealers or direct from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

United States Experiences Difficulty With Homecoming Due to Lax in Discipline

General Shanks, Commander at Hoboken, Asks Public Aid in Supporting Morale—Spirit of the Army is Changed—Best Troopships in the World.

NEW YORK. — Major General David C. Shanks, U.S.A., in charge of the Port of Embarkation at New York City, with headquarters at Hoboken, N.J., issued the following statement following the discipline among returning troops:

"With considerable reluctance I desire to invite public attention to what is, to me at least, a distressing and worrisome fact, viz.; the deterioration and general let down in discipline on the part of our officers and men returning from abroad. This is a sad fact, and the evidence of it can be readily obtained by any one who has opportunity to gain first hand information.

"For considerably more than a year, including the period of heaviest troop shipments, I had command of the Port of Embarkation at New York City. I had daily opportunity to see the various organizations as they poured through this port in response to their country's call.

"Not always were the discipline and the general showing as we could wish, but, with few exceptions, the officers put forth their best efforts. They gave to the government the best that was in them. The spirit of both officers and men was fine. They were all going to war and bore minor discomforts and hardships with the spirit of the true soldier. The record of America in getting together such an army and placing it in active service on such short notice is one that we may well be proud of.

Spirit of Army is Changed.

"But with the close of the war the spirit of many of our officers and men has sadly changed. Perhaps this is inevitable and unavoidable, for this same change has affected all other armies as well as our own. It corresponds to the change in a football team when the season is over and the team breaks training.

"It is not my purpose, Mr. Editor, to attempt an essay upon discipline. The object I have in view is a practical one, an appeal to the public in the effort to prevent our returning officers and men from forgetting that as long as they wear the Government uniform and draw the Government pay they still owe a duty to the United States.

"Since December 6, 1918, I have been in charge of the port of debarkation at New York. The great change that has come over the spirit of many of our returning officers is borne upon me with peculiar force. Some of our officers, on returning, seem to forget all obligations of duty or discipline.

"Of course it is only natural that officers and men who have been long abroad should be eager to greet relatives or friends, but many of them chafe at any kind of duty or restriction. Some of them go absent from the gangplank. I now have to deal with the cases of some officers who absented themselves before Christmas and who are still absent without leave.

"Another tendency on the part of officers is to get their names in print through the medium of complaints of one kind or another. Not infrequently those who complain most loudly have rendered the least service abroad. One complaint that has been received is from an officer who refused to go to camp and went absent from the ship's side.

Say Many Officers Shirk Duty.

"I was in command of the port of embarkation for more than a year at a time when the heaviest troop shipments were being rushed abroad, but the duties connected with debarking the troops and sending them to their home stations are immeasurably more difficult, because of the tendency of many officers to shirk any duty that may be placed upon them and their desire to go from the ship's side to the gay lights of Broadway.

"I have conferred in regard to this matter with General Goethals and General March, and they have advised that discipline must be maintained even at the expense of bringing to trial some of those who are soon to leave the military service.

"It is a sad thing for an officer at the close of his career to find himself before a court martial, but something must be done or it is certain that conditions will grow steadily worse.

"Mr. Editor, my reason for submitting this statement is because I believe that the public press of New York can render to our Government a great service in this matter. During the progress of the war the loyalty of the press of the country was one of the very greatest assets of our Government. The press can still perform a great duty and render valuable aid to our country in matters connected with the return of our troops.

Welcomes Just Criticism.

"Under existing arrangements every newspaper has a right to have its representative on the piers. All matters of debarkation are conducted under the fierce glare of publicity. Every criticism that has for its object improvement or betterment of the service is welcomed.

"But I should like to suggest that the representatives of the papers should be sure of their facts before going to publication.

"For instance, in the case of the La France, one of our leading and most reliable papers, stated, 'the first of the lighters to take off the men did not reach the France till several hours after she had docked.' And this in the face of the fact that five small vessels with a total capacity of 2,000 men, were waiting for the La France when she docked and that 1,500 men were taken from her within two hours after her arrival.

"Some of the ill and wounded officers on the France, impatient of delay, made complaint which was taken up by newspaper correspondents, but no word of mention was made of the faithful officers and men and Red Cross nurses who spent their Christmas eve in the slow process of removing from the France 200 stretcher cases and 221 insane men who had to be led off individually.

"Not long ago a well-known newspaper of wide circulation published an article containing the statement, 'no civilized country in these days would permit its ships to transport immigrants in the way United States ships pack its war heroes. They are herded below decks like cattle, but one never hears a whimper from them.'

Best Troopships in World.

"Any one who knows the fact, knows that American troops are transported in the best vessels afloat. That the Government has spent millions upon millions in fitting these ships for the comfort of officers and men, and that no other Government in the world supplies for its army food of the excellence, abundance and variety enjoyed by the army of the United States.

"I have been obliged to place some officers in arrest and to order their trial by court martial. This course is a sad one for the officer and I greatly regret the necessity that compels its adoption.

"The thought has occurred to me that the public press of New York, which has already rendered such valuable aid to the Government, would be capable of rendering still further aid by placing this important matter before the public in its proper light."

Ford Cars None Too Plentiful; Present Stocks Running Short; The Demand is Increasing

"It seems practically certain now that the demand for Ford cars this year will far exceed the output."

With these words Mr. J. L. Duffus of the Duffus Garage, replied to an enquiry as to the prospects of the motor cars business for 1919. He also added:— "That it is equally obvious tha unless the prospective buyer acts reasonably soon, he may find it a difficult matter to obtain the car he wants."

Every passing year has seen Canadian made Ford cars increase in demand by the thousands, because under almost every conceivable condition this car has proved itself a splendid all-round utility. It has sold on its record for dependable and economical performance, not on the rosy promises of salesmen or its makers With the great Ford factory at Ford Ontario, as its base, there has been a Ford Service Station everywhere the roads will carry you from coast to coast.

The difficulties involved in obtaining the large amount of material required by the Ford Motor Co., of Canada, and to transport this material to its factories, cannot be told in this article. It is a well known fact, too, that many of the Ford dealers, of which Mr. J. J. Duffus is a notable example, have sold from 25% to 50% more cars than called for by their contracts, over-selling their estimates almost year after year. So that when one begins to estimate for the new contract season, the volume of the domestic demand and supply alone becomes difficult to handle.

Should the present schedule of curtailment of Ford car production go through a very considerable re-arrangement of busines methods by the dealers may be found imperative. There is no indication how long this rate of curtailment will prevail, the official understanding being that it will be subject to future conditions in the steel industry.

To make up for the possible shortage in Ford cars, Mr. Duffus has secured the sales agency for both the Gray-Dort and Dodge Brothers cars. These cars are favorite marchines, being included in the medium priced cars, and are sure to be good running mates for the Ford. Supplies of both these care are not likely to be so difficult to procure, so that buyers can have the choice of three different medium priced automobiles in the standard class of motors. The Gray Dort "has the real stuff in it"—a tribute paid to this popular car by some of its users. The Dodge is known to be a car of external beauty, real value, strength, comfort and energy.

Mr. Duffus also intends to do a good deal of "speeding up" with trucks. The Ford One-Ton Truck and the Smith Farm-a-Truck are both going to "go strong", because people are beginning to realize how much golden time is wasted by the old fashioned methods of getting products to the markets, commercial hauling, etc.

A strong feature in the new garage will be the well-equipped facilities for carrying large stocks of motor car accessories and supplies, to be handled wholesale and retail.

Mr. Duffus stated that he is now in a position to meet the all-round diversified requirements of motorists.

Although this mamoth new garage is still undergoing some of its finishing touches for the perfecting of its up to date labor-saving features, this will not be allowed to interfere with "business as usual" at the Duffus

LONDON, Jan 9.—That the Canadian Government is to bear the cost of taking wives and families of Canadian soldiers in England out to Canada is rumored. The scheme would probably involve reimbursing those who in the past paid out of their own pocket for the bringing out of their wives and children. This question has been agitating thousands of overseas men.

THEIR EXCUSES

CONNELSVILLE NEWS:—Two men, who are quite well off, but very miserly in their expenditures, met recently in the gallery of a theatre.

Each was annoyed to be seen by the other in the cheapest place of the house.

"What brings you here?" each asked the other.

'To tell the truth," said the first, "I've got a fearful cold in my head, and as the heat ascends I came up here where it was warm. Besides I'm a terrible sufferer from rheumatism. But what brings you here?"

"My opera glasses!"

"Your opera glasses?"

"Yes; they enlarge too much. I can't see from the boxes what is going on on the stage. I have to come up here in the gallery to be able to see with them on at all!"

GRAIN MARKET

There was some reaction in the corn market yesterday, following the sharp declines Thursday. At the same time there is generally a weaker feeling as to the future of corn, in view of the official announcement, following the rumour of Thursday that the embargo is lifted from the importation of Argentine corn. At the price at which the Argentine crop can be laid down at Chicago, it is apparent that there must be a further lowering of present prices.

CATTLE MARKET

The total receipts of cattle in the local markets this week have not been heavy and have included a fair proportion of fine quality for butcher purposes. The tendency of the market has been generally to harden prices for the best butcher steers and heifers advancing in Monday's market from 25c. to 40c. over the previous week. In the midweek market a further advance of 15c. to 25c. for best butcher, took place over Monday's prices. In the closing markets these advances held good and firm, in a steady but strong market for anything of quality or weight in the butcher class.

Among the butcher cows there was a rather slow market early in the week, and prices failed to advance with the rest of the market. Later in the week the demand for fat cows was more active, and prices stiffened for good heavy cows. Bulls of good weight were also in a firm and strong market.

A good active market continues for canners and cutters, the former selling strong around $6.25 to $6.50

Choice veal calves in strong active market.

The strong demand for butcher cattle, made inroads into the feeder class as anything with a little weight on was quickly taken to fill up in the butcher demand. The result was that good bunches of feeders were hard to get hold of and these generally at very high prices, in some cases 75c. to $1 higher than they would have cost several week back. Good loads of feeders of fair weight have sold this week up to $11 and $11.50.

The sheep and lamb market has held good and strong all week, prices steadily advancing to $16 and $16.75 for choice lambs. Light sheep firm and strong.

The hog market has proved a hard problem for the packers, who tried hard to bring prices down to the previous week's level, but finally were forced to pay up to the tune of $18.75 on the fed and watered basis. In the closing market there was a feeling that the top had been reached, and that next week will see a substantial decline in hog prices.

Compare the tone and value

The only way to get a true idea of the exceptional values of our "Phonolas" is to compare them with other cabinets selling at about the same prices.

We venture to state that you cannot get another phonograph at $25 equal to the cabinet at that price. Certainly Model B at $55 is unexcelled value. It is 17¼ inches wide, 18¾ inches deep, and 12⅞ inches high—a good-sized instrument, with a double-spring, easy-winding, quiet motor and a surprisingly large volume of tone.

It would be hard to compare our magnificent "Organola" model with any other, because this is the only phonograph in the world with tone control pipes which include every note in the scale and give wonderful clearness and volume to the music.

We are able to give these exceptional values because we make our "Phonolas" complete in our two large plants in Canada at Kitchener and Elmira.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Mrs. Clayborne Graciously Accepts Mr. Mandel's Invitation.

CHAPTER LXXXIV

Ruth hovered over her aunt solicitiously as she removed her wraps; then proudly led the way to the dining room. Mrs. Clayborne did not restrain an exclamation of pleased surprise and delight as she saw the artistic room with the hangings of stuff given Ruth by her employer; the dainty table appointments, and all, came in for their share of admiration.

Ruth was in the "seventh heaven."

"Don't praise her too much, Mrs Clayborne. You'll make her impossible to live with, if you do," Brian remarked facetiously, rather pleased at the way he had been greeted by this wealthy aunt of Ruth's.

He always had felt a smoldering sort of anger at Mrs. Clayborne, not only because of her objection to him, but because she had done so little for Ruth, who was the only relative she had, and so, at least he figured it that way, entitled to be given a part of what she would ultimately have.

Had he known that when Ruth married him. But had he known that, when Mrs. Clayborne found out he was not earning enough to support Ruth without her working, she had changed her will which had left everything unreservedly to Ruth, and had put the money in trust for Ruth for the length of time they lived together, he might not have felt so elated by her suavity. Mrs. Clayborne had a fixed impression that Ruth would not long be contented as the wife of a poor man, so had arranged her matters with that in view.

The dinner was one of Rachel's masterpieces in the culinery line.

"I show ole missis dat we uns kin cook in New York!" she had said to Ruth when told to get the very best dinner she possibly could.

"I see Rachel still knows how to cook," Mrs. Clayborne said, passing her plate for an extra helping.

"Indeed she does! I think she cooks better every day," Ruth replied. "I don't know how I ever lived without her, the dear old soul. Although we had a very good woman before she came, Brian was afraid I would be sorry. I let Crawford go. He thought perhaps Rachel would be lonely here all alone. But she hasn't complained at all.

"She loves you very dearly, Ruth. I hope you will always take care of her. I should, had she remained on the plantation.

"Of course we will! you need never worry about her as long as we have a roof over our heads." Then blushed as she thought perhaps her aunt might think the roof a dubious prospect for always.

All the next day Ruth and her aunt visited. They did not go out at all. Ruth told of her work her employer, his kindness; and Mrs. Clayborne listened without remark. Then Ruth told of Brian. His ambition to learn typing so that he could save time, was enlarged upon. His thoughtfulness. She quoted his sending the flowers. The day was all too short for their confidences.

After dinner they went to the theatre. The seats were in the fifth row. Just the right distance from the stage for aunt," Ruth though complacently.

Then, Sunday, they had another happy day. They attended church in the morning, and in the afternoon went for a walk. After dinner Mr. and Mrs. Roberts came in to pay their respects to Mrs. Clayborne; and she seemed to approve of them, which delighted Ruth.

"A very refined pleasant couple," Mrs. Clayborne had remarked. Ruth was about to tell her aunt that Clara Roberts did all her own work so Kenyon could get along, but caught herself in time. Why bring up a subject that would cause her aunt to say that she, too, might have remained at home, and so have helped Brian?

Monady Ruth went to work in the morning as planned. Her aunt had said nothing when she explained. In the afternoon they did some shopping. Brian came up for dinner, but excused himself immediately afterward because of his lesson. If Ruth had hoped he would remain at home for that one evening, she did not let it be seen; and when he returned before ten o'clock she reproached herself for having the thought.

The next day her aunt promised to meet Ruth near the shop. Ruth had said nothing of Mr. Mandel's invitation. If it came about unexpectedly her aunt would be more likely to accept. Ruth joined her at the appointed place, then, her errand accomplished she said:

"Will you go to the shop with me, Aunt Louisa? I should love to have you see the place."

"I'll go!" the answer was grim.

Ruth introduced her to Arthur Mandel, who was most deferential. He showed them over the shop, taking special pains to point out the most expensive and exquisite objects as being of Ruth's selection. He then proffered his reques that they lunch with him. Mrs. Clayborne at once accepted most graciously.

"He's in love with Ruth! I'll put nothing in the way of their being together. He's the sort of man she should have married, not an impecunious man like Brian aHckett," she said to herself as they waited for a cab to take them to Delmonico's. "Perhaps I will stay longer than I intended to."

Hens are supplied by nature with 1,200 to 4,000 rudimentary yolks. But a yolk is only half an egg, and a hen won't lay half an egg—it's the whole egg or nothing with her. To lay a whole egg, the hen must have a "white" for a "yolk." If she is to lay 1,000 eggs, her food must supply 1,000 whites as well as 1,000 yolks—she must get "whites" just as she gets meat, bones and feathers—from her feed. Ordinary grain feeds and "mill-mixtures," will fatten a hen and produce yolks, but do not produce enough "whites" to make her lay any more eggs than usual. Only the feeding of Purina Scratch Feed and Purina Chicken Chowder will supply enough elements to make "a white for every yolk," and make a hen LAY MORE EGGS—winter and summer—we guarantee it. The price of Purina Scratch Feed and Purina Chicken Chowder is very little more than ordinary feed, but they make a hen lay so many more eggs that there is no comparison of values. ## The War and Literature

"HAVE you found any indication in literature during the war that seems to foreshadow a new literary period, and in what direction do you consider that the new literature after the war will develop?" is the question that a Swedish magazine, "Literature," has been asking authors. H. G. Wells replied:

"I believe that the war will have its chief significance for literature through interest shifting from the poetry of personal experience to the poetry that is contained in humanity's common destiny. In the time to come we shall probably be less inclined to busy ourselves with individuality and in a higher degree think of how individuals are affected by the mighty currents of thought and feeling that will flow through the races."

From Denmark, which not long ago produced the curiously bitter declaration from the late Peter Nansen, the main feature of which was a stubborn balking at discriminating between the rights and wrong of Prussian ideals versus American ideals comes a rather similar "neutral" outburst from the veteran, Dr. George Brandes, who says:

"Most of the literature that has come to my notice during the war has been propaganda literature, which goes out to place the enemy in the most shameful light and itself in the most flattering aspects. The significance of these works, if they have any, is practical, not artistic or literary. In my own view, the war has dragged back humanity a century or more. It has exterminated young vigor by the 100,000, the young men from whom a renewal of spiritual life perhaps might otherwise have been expected. It has dried up Europe's economic resources and plunged nations in bottomless debt. By its systematic slander by a partly bought, partly fanatic press it has stultified Europe. By its hate, produced by outrages and slander, it has poisoned the soul life of the masses. By its fearful hypocrisy in the name of self-righteousness it has lessened the general stock of love of truth that has been laboriously acquired by the human race. By daily mass murder and mad waste of money on unprofitable and unproductive enterprises it has impoverished, stupefied, poisoned. I, for my part, expect extremely little of the literature that will arise on a soil which is nourished by youth's blood, politicians' lies and newspaper gas."

One expected better things of Brandes. He has not a word for the purifying influences of noble comradeship and self-sacrifice. He sees the poison of hatred for the enemy, but is blind to the tremendous potentialities of a sharply accentuated awakening to the call of justice and altruistic insistence on better world conditions. He would rather see democracy place its neck beneath the Prussian heel than "waste" its resources in showing the world that a single armed nation's might is no longer to consider itself the master or rather the tyrant of a world's laboriously acquired love of right.

Ellen Key, the grand old woman of Swedish letters—a literary figure, by the way, who has not balked at mediation on the rights and wrongs of the war and who is strongly ententeophile, says:

"In the present thunderstorm I think it useless to ponder over when and where the lightning will strike. My hope is that the new literature will become a flaming ball that helps to devour all the ideas and interests from which the world war arose."

Says Henry Nathanson: "I believe that literature will follow life, because it is only a conversation of the worth of life. And though one should take care to guard against prophecies, I have no doubt that life after the war will shape itself on other lines than formerly. Individuality and separatism will be replaced by solidarity and altruism. This great and edifying work will be the bugle that calls to men. And as always literary men will be among the leaders in the eternal strife for the eternal purpose."

"I have not succeeded in detecting any change in the belles-lettres attributable to the war," says Carl Laurin, "but I suppose that art and literature will develop much as before. Some people think that the cubists will screw the angles of their worst quadrilaterals under pressure of the calamities of the times; others that one will not sup so much with ladies as one did in the spring of 1914. I find it very hard to see any direct influence on literature even in the French revolution. The same interest in the drama with a theme from ancient Rome that one had in Louis XVI. times in the Little Trianson prevailed certainly throughout the revolution and during Napoleon's time. But, most typical for the bloodthirsty phase of the revolution, was the interest in the sentimental and the jejune."

Herald Kidde says: "Prophesy is known to be synonomous with pious desires. Victor Hugo said in '1793': To attribute the revolution to man's instrumentality is like giving the waves the honor of causing ebb and flow tides. Desmoulins, Danton, Marat, Gregoire and Robespierre were only writers, the tremendous and rigorous authors of those great pages in history. What will be comes to pass; the wind that will blow blows. The eternal purpose suffers no injury from these storms. Above the revolutions soar truth and righteousness—sublime as the star strewn heavens over the storm." The God seen in these events by Victor Hugo is He whom our age has forgotten and who will be rediscovered by neutral as well as belligerent lands."

Versailles In History.

Versailles, or rather the palace there, has played an important part in the histories of France, Germany, Great Britain and the United States. In 1783 the armistice preliminary to the treaty of peace between Great Britain and the United States was signed at Versailles. Six years later the palace was the scene of important events in the French Revolution. The German Army besieging Paris had its headquarters in the town in 1870-71, and there the negotiations between France and Germany were discussed. After the peace Versailles was the seat of the French National Assembly, and for a few years thereafter was the official capital of France.

The town of Versailles, which is 12 miles west-southwest of Paris, is not attractive in itself, but the presence there of the palace built by Louis XIV. and its proximity to the capital attract many visitors. The palace at Versailles was begun in 1661, and the gardens which, with the fountains and waterworks, are one of the glories of the place, were planned by Le Notre. All estimates of the money expended on the buildings and gardens are vague, but some experts estimate that more than $100,000,000 were spent by Louis XIV., who destroyed the accounts.

In the French Revolution Louis XIV. and Marie Antoinette were forcibly removed to Paris, after which the furniture was destroyed. Napoleon and the kings during the restoration barely kept the place in repair, but Louis Philippe restored the palace and made it a museum of works of art illustrative of the history of France, at a cost of nearly $5,000,000.

KEEP LITTLE ONES WELL IN WINTER

Winter is a dangerous season for the little ones. The days are so changeable—one bright, the next cold and stormy, that the mother is afraid to take the children out for the fresh aid and exercise that they need so much. In consequence they are often cooped up in overheated, badly ventilated rooms and are soon seized with colds or grippe. What is needed to keep the little ones well is Baby's Own Tablets. They will regulate the stomach and bowels and drive out colds and by their use the baby will be able to get over the winter season in perfect safety. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

297 CHANNEL FLIGHTS.

British Airmen Carried 1843 Passengers in Four Months.

LONDON, Jan. 9. — Some of the wonders achieved in aerial navigation and other wonders contemplated were spoken of to-day by Major Gen. Sir F. H. Sykes, Chief of the Air Staff, in an address before the Chamber of Commerce.

General Sykes told how Paul D. Cravath and Oscar T. Crosby, American members of the Interallied Council, had been carried from England to Paris and back on the same day in four hours and twenty minutes. He said that in the four months between July and October, 207 trips were made across the English Channel. The mileage traversed was 8,085 and 1,843 passengers were carried, although flying was possible only on 71 days.

The difficulties of a transatlantic flight, according to General Sykes, were not so much endurance of the machine and personnel, but of navigation, meteorology and wireless and such a task should not be undertaken lightly. As for the future, the government was looking forward to a weekly mail service to India.

General Sykes said a German Zeppelin flew from Bulgaria to German East Africa, carrying twelve tons of ammunition. When the Zeppelin reached Africa and the commander heard that the force for which it was taking the ammunition had surrendered, the dirigible made the return journey, reaching home safely after having been in the air without landing for four days

Winning His Way

By CECILE LANGDON

"Yes, Mr. Burton, Saturday is my first pay day, so you can count on twenty dollars, two weeks' salary," announced Archie Rand.

His bright, grateful face told how glad and willing he was to show his recognition of the goodness of the man who had found him ill, ragged, homeless and half starved on the public streets. He had taken him to his room, shared it with him and had, indeed, proven a little brother of the poor.

Burton had made Archie take a good rest. When rehabilitated in health, he had secured him a place as messenger in the bank where he himself worked on the books.

"You needn't start in paying, Archie," said Burton, "until you get on your feet. You will feel better to have a little money in your pocket. Let it go over until the first of the month."

"Not while you need—" began Archie, and paused abruptly.

"Not while I need what?" questioned Burton.

"Well, I'll out with it, and I hope you won't be offended. I overheard you talking with a friend, Mr. Wade, and you said that you couldn't go to a party both of you had been invited to, because you wasn't togged up right. And you felt pretty bad. I saw that, for there was a young lady you liked to meet—don't get mad at me now."

"I'm not, Archie," spoke Burton, a slight flush upon his face. "On the contrary I appreciate your kindly thoughtfulness."

"Then take the twenty and get a new suit," broke in Archie impetuously.

"Not this time," dissented Burton. He did not tell Archie that he was in debt, that such apparel as he required would not come in a cheap category. Abruptly he caught Archie by the arm, for, as the latter turned, sticking out of a pocket Burton observed the butt end of a revolver.

"Why, how is this, Archie?" he inquired seriously.

"Oh, the automatic," said Archie, and actually with a smile of pride. "That's all right, Mr. Burton. You know when the bank sends currency to another bank its placed in a stout valise, chained to my wrist. The bank policeman goes with me. Of course he's armed and a thief couldn't grab the valise without pulling me along with it, but if some of those gun men should put the officer out of commission where would I be? So I got one of the bank clerks to loan me the revolver, only thinking of protecting the money. Why, only yesterday there was over fifty thousand dollars in one package I carried in that satchel."

Archie went to the bank and later old Tim, the bank policeman, called him to the currency vault. He locked a canvas metal-bound satchel, to Archie's wrist.

"It's a half-million, sonny," he said, "for the Central National. Come on."

They reached the street. Usually on like occasions they walked to the Central, for it was only five squares distant. Just as they reached the street, however, Tim made out the wagon that transferred gold and silver coin, starting away empty.

"For the sub treasury."

"All right, drop us at the Central."

"Sure, that."

Haskell on the driver's seat, Tim helped Archie into the covered wagon, closed the rear wire screened door and took a standing position on the rear step. The wagon started. Two men, unobserved by Tim, followed in its wake. The streets were congested with traffic, and Haskell took a short cut down the half alley to get away from a street car blockade. Suddenly the wagon halted. There was a cry—a second.

"Now then, speed her up for all you're worth," sounded a gruff, unfamiliar voice, and rising to his feet and peering through the screened rear window of the vehicle, Archie made an amazing discovery. Back in the alley, prostrate lay Haskell. Just arising from the ground was Tim. A new driver was in his place and on the back step was a stranger.

"They've got us this time," muttered Archie. The wagon covered about a quarter of a mile, turned into a blind court, halted, and Archie heard the driver jump down. The door was pulled open. Two ruffianly figures shadowed the aperture. It was to draw back dismayed for, facing them, revolver in hand, was the doughty messenger lad.

"Back out from here, hands up, or I'll pepper you," declaimed Archie. Then, as the men retreated, crestfallen, Archie fired in the air—once, twice, thrice. The men vanished.

"And the president of the bank gave me a five hundred dollar bill," narrated Archie to Barton, later, "and you take it and pay yourself the hundred I owe you, and say, Mr. Burton, get that dress suit and go to the party, won't you?"

Which Burton did, and seemed unusually happy after that, and a month later said to Archie one day:

"I'm going to start housekeeping soon, Archie, and I wanted to know if we shall arrange to have a room for you."

"We," shot out Archie, and then the shrewd little fellow nodded and grinned appreciatingly. "Oh, I see," he added, with an expansive smile, "there's going to be a wedding."

BUILT OVER A FLOOD.

Philadelphia Some Day May Tumble Into an Underground Lake.

Engineers in charge of the excavations for the foundations of the addition to the Ritz-Carlton hotel, at Broad and Walnut streets, asserted that central Philadelphia, with its skyscrapers, is resting on a floating island and may at any moment be engulfed in quicksand.

Forty-five feet below the street level workmen poked their picks through the shell-like covering of an underground lake, the waters of which rise and fall with the movements of the tide. The engineers assert that far underground this "lost water" is ebbing and flowing, just as at the open seashore.

How high the water rises or how low it falls is difficult to figure, they say, for this subterranean flood which is surging backward and forward beneath Philadelphia is not "free" water.—Philadelphia Cor. New York Sun.

Queer Sequence of Coincidences.

Strange coincidences associated with a popular superstition were mentioned at a recent meeting of the municipal council of Milton Regis, Kent, England, in relation to the death of Frederick Littlewood, J. P., aged seventy-three, an ex-chairman of the urban council, which took place last week as the result of an apoplectic seizure.

Four years ago, when Mr. Littlewood had a first stroke, his portrait in the council chamber was found to have fallen. At the time of his second seizure another picture in the same room fell. The day after Mr. Littlewood's death an official on entering the council room observed that another picture had fallen, the glass being smashed.

A Frozen Well.

Scientists for years have been perplexed over the wonderful frozen well at Yakutsk, Siberia. As long ago as 1822 it was announced that the ground was frozen to an abnormal depth at the place referred to. In the summer of 1829 a Russian merchant set a gang of men to the task of ascertaining the depth of the frozen stratum. They gave up the job after digging some thirty feet in solidly frozen ground. The Russian Academy of Sciences took the matter in hand and between 1838 and 1844 dug to a depth of 382 feet and then abandoned the shaft because the earth was still frozen as hard as a rock.

Keep the Bowels Regular and You Won't Be Sick

If the bowels do not move regularly they will sooner or later become constipated, and constipation is productive of more ill-health than almost any other trouble.

The sole cause of constipation is an inactive liver, and unless the liver is kept active, you may be sure that headaches, piles, heartburn, biliousness, jaundice, floating specks before the eyes, and many other troubles will follow the wrong action of this, one of the most important organs of the body.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will regulate the bowels so that you will have a free and easy motion every day, and one pill a night for thirty days will cure the worst cases of constipation.

They do this by acting directly on the liver and making the bile pass through the bowels instead of allowing it to get into the blood, thus causing many stomach and bowel troubles.

Mrs. Jos. Labrec, Louise Apts., Calgary, Alta., writes:—"I have been troubled with constipation for the last two years. I have tried numerous treatments, but have never been relieved by anything until I used Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills which are helping me wonderfully."

We do not claim that Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are a "cure-all," but we do claim that there is nothing better for a sluggish liver.

Price 25 cents a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Women to Blame, of Course.

John T. Russell, president of the Master Butchers' Association of America, blames the housewives of the country for the high cost of living. "A fourth part of all the meat killed for the table is wasted," he says. "Poor families refuse to be content with chuck and round steak, despite the fact that those cuts can be made delicious by correct cooking, and the great American family of meat eaters fails to practice proper economy in its meat diet."

FARMING AMONG INDIANS.

Agricultural Campaign Has Met With Success.

A greater production campaign among the Indians of Canada was launched last spring by Hon. Arthur Meighen, who, as Minister of Interior, has the Redmen under his particular care. Reports received by the Minister show that the campaign has been an established success. The Indians made special efforts to increase production, and their crops are the best in the history of the redskins.

In 1917 the Indians had under crop 70,688 acres, and this year there was cultivated 82,421 acres, a noteworthy increase. The total yield of grain was 1,350,324 bushels as against 1,273,659 bushels in 1917, an increase of 76,659 bushels. There was an increase in the root crop of the Indians by nearly half a million dollars. The total value of the crops is estimated at $2,834,149, as against $2,351,807 in 1917.

The increases in Ontario are particularly noteworthy and give evidence of rapid progress among the Indians of the province. The Ontario campaign among the Indians was well organized. A series of meetings on greater production was held on all the reserves. These meetings were well attended and arrangements were made for the Indians to farm more land to take over vacant lands. In consequence practically evry acre of cultivable land on Indian reserves in Ontario was utilized either in the raising of crops or pasturing of cattle. Competitions were organized with prizes for the best crops, and this did much to stimulate interest. During the winter of 1917-18 short courses in agriculture were given in Mount Elgin Institute, Muncey, the Mohawk Institute, Brantford and the Shingwauk House, Sault Ste. Marie. These courses consisted of lectures on cultivation, noxious weeds, drainage, fertilization, etc. Lectures on live stock with demonstrations were also given. At the close of each course examinations were held and prizes given to those obtaining the highest standing. The reports show that the Indians at Deseronto, Muncey and Sarnia had particularly fine crops — as good as any in the province.

A new farm was started at Fort William reserve and at the request of the band the Department authorized an expenditure of $27,000 from band funds in connection therewith. The Indians this year cleared and ploughed sixty acres and have erected first-class buildings, the lumber being manufactured on the ground from a portable sawmill. The farm will be largely for stock to be raised for individual Indian farmers.

Special efforts were made this year to place under cultivation much of the splendid land on the western Indian reserves. In order to expedite work and utilize the services of the Department's staff to the best advantage, Mr. Meighen appointed Mr. W. M. Graham, Inspector of Indian Agencies for the Southern Saskatchewan Inspectorate, as Commissioner for the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Mr. Graham, who was given sole charge, has succeeded in placing large new areas under cultivation. The real fruits of his campaign will not be noticeable until next season.

In addition to the large areas placed under cultivation by the Redskins large tracts have been leased to whites for wheat farming or grazing. For instance, on the Blackfoot Reserve in Alberta two large farms with an acreage of from two to three thousand acres have been started. A greater production farm has been started by the Department on the Blood Reserve, and there have been purchased seven large Rumeley oil-pull engines, capable of ploughing from 22 to 28 acres a day.

On the Saskatchewan reserves the same progress has been made. A Greater Production Farm of two thousand acres has been started on the Assiniboine Agency, south of Sintaluta. Sixty brood sows have been secured for this agency and the Indians are planning to go into hog production on a large scale. A five-thousand-acre farm has been started on the Crooked Lakes Agency, north of Broadview. Temporary bunkhouses, cook-houses, blacksmith shops and stables have been erected and big results are looked for next year. A similar five-thousand-acre farm has been started on the Muscowpetung Reserve. On the Touchwood Reserve six thousand acres have been leased for grazing.

Through the efforts of Mr. Graham the shortage of feed was partially alleviated in Alberta. Mr. Graham located thirty thousand tons of hay on the reserves in Northern Alberta, which previously had never been cut. It is estimated that this saved fifteen thousand head of cattle.

Marked progress is reported as being made by the Indians of British Columbia. According to the reports received at Ottawa, there is every prospect that the Indians of British Columbia will become expert practical fruit growers and farmers, the efforts of the Shuswaps, Kamloops, Lyttons and Kootenay Agencies being particularly noticeable. The Carrier Indians of the Stuart Lake Agency in the northern part of the province in a new agricultural country are making remarkable progress in farming. On the coast the Indians are rapidly realising the necessity of cultivating the soil, in view of the constant depletion from year to year in the supply of game and fish foods. Every effort is being made by the Department's officers in British Columbia to further the campaign for increased production.

YOUR SICK CHILD IS CONSTIPATED! LOOK AT TONGUE

Hurry Mother! Remove Poisons From Little Stomach, Liver, and Bowels.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" if Cross, Bilious or Feverish.

If your little one is out of sorts, half sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if the tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad, or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels, and sweeten the stomach, and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Cambrai.

Cambrai's fate in war has not always been so hard as that which the retreat of the German armies visited upon her. Marlborough waived all considerations of military advantage and spared the town. The famous Fenelon was Archbishop of Cambrai at the time, and in such high regard was he held by the British general that not only did Marlborough protect Cambrai from pillage, but all the archepiscopal lands as well.

The Archbishop of Cambrai, the present-day successor of Fenelon, made himself very unpopular with the Kaiser. It appears that, revolted by the exactions imposed by the Germans, he addressed a letter of complaint to the emperor. In reply his imperial majesty sent two troopers with the verbal message that the emperor had been unable to read the archbishop's letter, as it was too long. "Tell the emperor," replied the Archbishop of Cambrai, "that my predecessor Fenelon wrote a letter to Louis XIV which was no more pleasing and a good deal longer than mine, and Louis XIV was quite a different personage from your master." The archbishop was carried away from Cambrai with the retreating and beaten German armies.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

SAY BACKACHE IS A SIGN YOU HAVE BEEN EATING TOO MUCH MEAT, WHICH FORMS URIC ACID

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a wellknown authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Doctors say if people kept their bowels in proper order there would be no such disease on record as appendicitis. It is due solely to neglect, and is therefore preventable.

If you have constipation, bad breath or headache you need medicine right away.

The moment you suspect your bowels are clogged you should take Dr. Hamilton's Pills, the smoothest regulator of them all. They move the bowels and cleanse the liver so smoothly you scarcely notice the effect. But you can get the action just the same. Taken at night you wake up next morning, clear-headed, hungry, rested, energetic, feeling like a different man.

Why don't you spend a quarter today and try Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They work so easy, just as nature would order, never gripe or cause headache. Finest thing for folks that are out of sort, depressed, lacking in colour and spirits.

ATTACKING ENGLAND.

German Activities In the Air During the War.

"The German seldom displayed anything approaching genius in his methods of carrying on war in the air, but his display of sound common sense has been truly remarkable," observes C. G. Gray, editor of 'The Aeroplane," writing in the Illustrated London News. "One may fairly say that, lacking originality of any kind, the German has a genius for the obvious." And he continues:—

"When Zeppelins raided England early in the war there were no anti-aircraft defences of any kind, and the Germans knew it perfectly well. There were no guns, no night-flying airplanes and no ammunition suitable for use against airships. Therefore the German did the obvious thing, and raided London at will. The really surprising thing is that he was so long thinking about it before he started. And it is still more surprising to find how little damage he did.

"Then, when the London anti-aircraft defences began to develop and he began to lose a few airships, he gave London up as a bad job and took to wandering about the country seeking for any big town on which to drop bombs.

"Then, when the anti-aircraft defences became well developed all over the country, the German left England alone for a period. The airships which he then possessed could not rise above 10,000 to 12,000 feet, where they were easily reached by airplanes and comparatively easily reached by airplanes and comparatively easily seen by gunners on the ground. Therefore, the German did the obvious thing and used his Zeppelins for scouting at sea and for raiding undefended places in the eastern war area, such as Bucharest and places with impossible names in Russia.

"Meantime he turned his genius for the obvious on to the task of building new types of Zeppelin which would fly faster and rise higher.

"When the German had produced half a dozen or so of such machines he waited for a suitable night, so misty that it was impossible to use searchlights, and he sent them over to bomb London. Unfortunately for the German, the mist was particularly thick in the vicinity of London and he failed to find his objective. The general officer commanding London aircraft defence area, having a genius for the unobvious, instead of turning on vain searchlights and illuminating the fog for the benefit of the German, or letting his guns fire at the sound of engines and thus disclose the position of London, acted like the gentleman in Mr. Kipling's story and 'lay powerful doggo,' so that the German failed to find London at all—all except one of him who drifted across by sheer luck and dropped three fairly innocuous bombs.

"Meantime all the airships cruised about and burned much petrol. As they returned they were chased up high by gunfire and airplanes near the coast, where the air was clearer. There the ships ran into a strong wind from the north, which drove them down to the centre of France. For various good reasons their directional wireless apparatus failed there, so most of them kept on steering east and drifting south till at daybreak they had used all their fuel and found themselves still over France. Whereupon the lost ships landed and all except one were destroyed by their crews. Two or three of the whole fleet only escaped with difficulty back to Germany.

"This was another lesson to the German, who is always anxious to learn. So he worked out a new plan of campaign. It seems that his idea was to cruise over the North Sea at night—a dark night for preference — and make little dashes at coast towns which he believed to be only lightly defended, or which had been left in peace so long that their defenders had gone to sleep. Having dropped a few bombs, and thus having lightened himself considerably, so that he could go up high, he proceeded to wander about the country at a considerable altitude, where he could be heard and not seen, hoping to terrorize munition centres.

"From the German's point of view the scheme was obviously sensible, and he kept it up till he lost a few of his nice new 'high level' airships through their meeting airplanes which could fly higher still. That completed the activities of Germany in the air during the war."

The Bulgars.

The first barbarians to settle permanently in the Balkan peninsula were the Bulgars, a Finnish people, whose home was the middle Volga districts. The Slavs are said to have begun to pour into this region as early as the third century, but they were not established until some time after the Bulgarian invasion.

Had Hacking Cough
Couldn't Sleep Nights.

Hacking coughs are very wearing on the system. The constant coughing disturbs the rest, and keeps the lungs and bronchial tubes in an irritated and inflamed condition.

Don't neglect the hacking cough. You can get rid of it with a few doses of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup; the most prompt, pleasant and perfect cough remedy known.

Miss Catherine M. McLean, Crail, Sask., writes:—"Last winter I caught a heavy cold and was laid up for some time. I had such a hacking cough I couldn't sleep at night. I didn't think I would get over it. One day a friend dropped in to see me and was surprised to see how bad my cough was. She advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. The next day I sent for a bottle, and I soon got relief, and by the time I had taken two bottles, my cough was all gone, and now I am able to do my work again. I don't think there is anything to equal it."

There are plenty of "pine" preparations on the market trying to live on the reputation of "Dr. Wood's." The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c. and 50c. a bottle. Put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto.

SHUTTING DOWN OF GERMAN INDUSTRY LEAD TO BOLSHEVISM.

WASHINGTON.—Commenting on reports of fears in Great Britain of the spread of Bolshevism in Germany, State Department officials declare that the great danger lies in the shutting off of industry. Closing of German factories, either by lack of raw materials or markets for the finished products, they said, would force thousands of men into idleness and lead to Bolshevism, and with industry at a standstill the Allies might as well give up all hope of collecting any indemnity.

Mr. Polk, acting secretary, said the United States recognized from the first, that if the Allies hoped to collect indemnity from Germany, they must give her an opportunity to restore industry and make the money with which to pay it.

PETERBOROUGH SATURDAY, JANUARY 11, 1919

MAY EXPROPRIATE LAND FOR USE OF SOLDIERS

The Ontario Government Will Be Asked to Endorse the Measure —Conference at Ottawa.

A NEW PLAN

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Jan. 11.—Legislation giving the Dominion government or the Soldiers' Settlement Board authority to come into Ontario and expropriate agricultural land not being cultivated, in order to make it available for soldier settlement, will be submitted to the House at the coming session by the Ontario government. The measure arises out of the conference held by the Federal and Provincial authorities at Ottawa some week ago, when the new plan for soldier settlement was worked out. At the conference, the Federal authorities urged that the Ontario government expropriate the land needed, but Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, suggested the more direct method possible of having the Ontario Government co-operate by passing the necessary legislation. The bill to be brought before the Legislature will contain other provisions expressing the working arrangements arrived at Ottawa. Among other lines it will permit of the Federal Soldiers' Settlement Board coming into the province and placing ex-soldiers on Ontario Crown Lands. The lands will not, it is stated, pass by deed to the Dominion, the province retaining the title until the soldier has complied with the conditions laid down and has become entitled to a patent.

Canadian Press:

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 11.—Seventy-tow persons were killed, eighty-one gravely wounded and more than eight hundred received minor injuries in fighting which occurred here yesterday and last night as a result of general strike. # Babies Sell at 60 Cents Each

Little Ones Peddled on Streets of Hiughwa, China.

Poverty due to political and economic disturbance is making baby peddling a recognized occupation in Hiughwa, China, where it is possible to buy a child for as little as 60 cents. Mrs. William N. Brewster, head of the Methodist Episcopal Orphanage in that district, recently reported to the foreign mission board that missionaries had purchased many boys and girls in order to save them from falling into the hands of lepers.

"Their best customers are the dwellers in the leper colony just outside the city, who want the little ones to beg for them. It is only a short time before the babies contract the disease. I recently rescued a beautiful child from the lepers. They had paid 60 cents for it.

"Two dollars is the usual price for a child, though travelling theatrical companies sometimes pay more for boys who seem unusually bright. The Government is supposed to care for blind or deformed babies, but as a matter of fact the officials generally sell them to the beggars. Threatened starvation has made many people so desperate that they expose their defective children in the tiger infested mountains or bury them alive. One of the babies in the orphanage was found on a lonely mountain top; another, a blind boy, was rescued from an open grave."

Major Greer, M.C., Coming Home

Is Expected to Arrive Towards End of Next Week.

Word was received by cable yesterday that Major Garnet Greer, M.C., is coming home on furlough on the "Olympic," which sailed from Southampton on January 10th. He is expected to arrive in the city towards the end of next week. Major Greer is attached to the Canadian Army Medical Corps, and has been on active service without leave since August, 1914. He went overseas with the first contingent as medical officer of the 2nd Battalion, proceeded to France in February, 1915, where he has been on duty ever since. He received his majority and was awarded the Military Cross in November, 1916, was appointed Deputy-Assistant Director of Medical Services for the 4th Division in September, 1917, and was twice mentioned in despatches in 1918.

Major Greer's many friends will be glad of his safe return, and will be pleased to have the opportunity of personally extending hearty congratulations to a fellow-citizen who has helped to bring credit to the town by his distinguished services in the war.

COUNTY'S ROADS COMMITTEE MET GOV'T ENGINEER

Indications Point to Quiet Progress and Actual Steps to Evolve a Local System That Will Be Satisfactory to All.

The County's Roads and Bridges committee met a representative of the Ontario Department of Highways this week in an informal discussion on a tentative system of good roads the County Council may consider during the coming year. Reeve McIntosh, chairman of the committee presided, and views were exchanged, and various points brought up, indicating that the committee, representing the seven southern townships of the county, purpose familiarizing themselves with every phase of the Government's policy before committing themselves to any definite action. It is understood that the Department's engineer intimated his satisfaction with the scheme roughly sketched by the committee. There has been no announcement of what the committee is planning, but from some of the debates in the Council during the past year it may be advanced with some assurance that certain main highways are under consideration for designation when action materializes. One of these is the Gravel Road through Monaghan, connecting with the road from Port Hope. It will pass through Peterborough, then north on the Chemong Road, across the lake to Ennismore connecting with Victoria County.

Another road is from Peterborough to Hastings through Otonabee, by way of the line through the Keene station and north by the present favourite route of the automobilests that passes the Keene cheese factory and Warden Anderson's house. If this be correct, and it is only offered as a bit of county gossip, it means that the Warden is frankly stating that the northern line is more extensively used than his own.

Another road is planned to extend east from the city to the Hastings Boundary in the Blairton district. It will follow closely but not through its entire length, the boundary line between Otonabee and Douro and also the Asphodel boundary. It is understood that it passes through both Norwood and Havelock. There are other roads under consideration for each of the townships, but enough is indivated to show that the County is following its own plans in its own way, withtt a special endeavour to secure more assistance from the Government than is now given, and thus relieve both the farmers and the citizens of some of the cost of construction and maintenance that may be otherwise regarded as a burden before the "good roads" have been long completed.

The Allies Coal Supply Threatened

Disorders in Berlin Responsible for Fuel Shortage—Allies Refuse to Accept Cannon of Ancient Vintage.

PARTS ARE MISSING

(By Webb Miller—United Press).

AMERICAN HEADQUARTERS IN GERMANY, Jan. 10. (By Courier to Nancy). — The disorders in Berlin, with the resultant interruption of railway traffic, are threatening to cut off the coal supply of the Allied armies of occupation. A commission of American, British and French military officials left for the coalfields to investigate the conditions. The American army alone uses 25,000 tons a month. The third army has issued an ultimatum to the Germans, declaring it will refuse to accept 200 of the big guns surrendered under the terms of the armistice owing to many being old models and others having parts missing. As a result the German commission has hurried to Berlin, being unable to obtain any action by telegraph.

Paper Taken Over and Issued as the "Red Flag"—The Situation in Berlin.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Delayed Amsterdam advices, dated Thursday, contain reports of further activity by the Spartacans in Rhine towns. They apparently control Dusseldorf, where several prominent persons were arrested while many others only escaped arrest by crossing the Rhine. The Muenster Anzeiger reports that the Spartacans stormed the prison in Muenster and set free 170 criminals. At Meulheim, during a big demonstration of strikers on Wednesday, the strikers seized all newspaper buildings and issued the general "Anzeiger," the next morning as the "Red Flag," designating it as the organ of the revolutionary workers of Meulheim.

In the Dark.

Several despatches from the Associated Press correspondents in Berlin filed on Friday up to three o'clock in the afternoon and received here this morning, contained no mention of the reported death of Liebkneichr. The despatches in fact do not refer to happenings in Berlin, but deal with events in the provinces or with press comment. Nothing definite is known here as to what Friday night's developments in Berlin really were.

All the fighting yesterday ended in favour of the government it was stated. The Spartacans still hold a majority of the newspaper plants.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie Elected Director of Association

Peterboro Included in One of the Best Dairying Districts of Canada—Dairymen Meet in Belleville—Annual—Quality of Butter Improving.

Special to The Examiner:

BELLEVILLE, Jan. 11.—The Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association has elected the following directors for the year: H. Glendenning, Manilla; Thos. Hicks, North Gower; Wm. Brown, Dickenson's Landing; A. J. Robertson, Martintown; R. G. Leggett, Newboro; J. A. Kerr, Belleville; G. A. Gillespie, (M.P.P.), Peterborough; Geo. Smith, Iroquois; W. H. Olmstead, Bearbrook; D. Muirhead, Renfrew; T. H. Thompson, Madoc; Alex. Hume, Campbellford; Neil Fraser, Vankleek Hill M. N. Murphy, Napanee; J. A. Sanderson, Oxford Station; J. Campbell, Hartington; John Steel, Almonte, and W. A. Benson, Picton.

Dairy Instruction.

The annual report of the work of dairy instruction and sanitary inspection as performed during the past year, showed that the number of creameries in operation in Eastern Ontario was 44, and that the number of patrons supplying cream was 6,500 and the amount of butter produced from May 1 to October 31, 1918, was 4,000,000 pounds. Owing to the fact that butter markets have been giving more attention to the application of scientific knowledge to the process of manufacture and the increased use of pasteurisation, the quality of creamery butter shows a very marked improvement over previous year. There were 617 cheese factories operated in Eastern Ontario in 1918, 12 less than in 1917. The number of patrons decreased by 600. The number of cows providing milk for cheese manufacture, 279,540, a decrease of 5,201 from last season.

Milk Production.

The average production of milk per cow also decreased, the average yield for 1918 from May 1 to November 1 being 3,300 per cow compared with 3,600 pounds per cow for the same period in 1917. Corresponding to the smaller milk supply the output of cheese in Eastern Ontario decreased 6,000,000 pounds, the total for 1918 being 83,782,495 pounds. Mr. Publow emphasized the importance of sediment tests of milk in ensuring greater attention to cleanliness in handling their supply by patrons of factories. Speaking at the evening meeting Hon. Geo. S. Henry said that as a farmer he had specialized in dairying for many years, a fact that not only insured his interest on behalf of the dairymen of the province, but also helped him to understand the problems and the needs of the industry.

He said: "I do not urge production as a means of paying the national debt, but that it should be carried on solely with the idea of individual profit because as we prosper as individuals, we at the same time strengthen the nation as a whole.

A Leader.

Mr. J. A. Ruddick, Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa, in an account of the dairying produce commission, had compiled figures from the various producing districts which showed that Central Ontario district, which comprises that part of the province between the Kingston district and Toronto, had stood both years at the very top. In 1918, he said, the percentage of No. 1 grade cheese from the district was 98.26, while the percentage for the eastern provinces was 94.84.

The dairying industry in 1918 established a record in the amount of products exported.

"Hungarian Premier Finds a Haven of Refuge in Wilson's Plans for Peace.

WERE SUB-AGENTS

(By Frank J. Taylor.)
(Copyright 1919, by The United Press.)

BUDAPEST, Jan. 11.—"No peace which is not partically Socialistic will safeguard the world from future wars." President Wilson has this in mind. It constitutes his "fifteenth point" — as yet unstated — which might be devoloped before a treaty is signed. In these words Count Michael Karolyi Hungarian Premier, described to the United Press to-day what he believes should be accomplished at the peace congress. The Premier emphasized the fact that he is not socialistic himself, and that he intends to continue his fight against Bolshevism, but he declared that he is absolutely convinced that peace must be social and economic as well as political. He strongly advocated a league of nations, and said that the world must stick to Wilson's fourteen points or there will be another war within a few years.

A LONE HAND.

Karolyi, a man of noble birth, is easily the outstanding figure in Hungarian affairs. Practically alone he forced the Hungarian independence and is regarded as the one man who can weld the millions of his people into a solidity. Hungary was dragged into this war by Austro-Germany declared the Premier. "Our policy was never made in Vienna or Budapest, but in Berlin. We were Berlin's sub-agents, never walking on our own feet. I was against an alliance which meant that Berlin owned us. I couldn't do other than protest. I tried by every means to make peace. I stood against Germany. I openly protested against the Brest-Litovsk and Bucharest treaties. Now we have lost the war, absolutely our only hope is that President Wilson's principals will win at the peace conference. The Entente cannot let Hungary be crushed."

SOCIETY OF NATIONS.

"There must be a society of nations, with a "fifteenth Point." No peace, which is not partially socialistic will safeguard the world from future wars. President Wilson has this in mind. It constitutes his "fifteenth point"—as yet unstated—which must

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, JANUARY 11TH, 1919.

A BIGGER PETERBOROUGH.

"Your paper has been talking a good deal recently about "a bigger and better Peterborough," a citizen remarked to the Examiner the other day. "I can understand what you mean by a bigger Peterborough, but what do you intend to convey by the phrase "a better Peterborough?"

That is a fair question and requires an honest answer.

In the first place the Examiner has in mind, in pleading for "a better Peterborough," the improvement of living and working conditions. It believes that it is possible to make Peterborough a more pleasant place to live in than it is at present. There are things, simple in themselves, that could be done to accomplish this result. There is need here of houses for working people— preferably with a garden attached. At present the working man has to choose between a hovel and a house too expensive in rental for his income—there does not seem to be any medium between the two extremes. Civic intrest in the housing problem might accomplish good results along this line.

The city is well equipped with churches and schools, but the establishment of a modern technical school is another improvement that the Examiner has in mind in writing about a better Peterborough.

The providingof wholesome recreation is another plank in the Examiner's platform. Bathing beaches should be provided for the different sections of the city, and facilities for outdoor sports in summer and winter should be improved. Such things tend to make a health yand a cheerful population, and are good investments, if viewed only from an economical standpoint.

Better streets, an improved street railway service, more adequate street lighting in the outskirts of the city. These are a few of the many things that would go to making Peterborough a more enjoyable community in which to live.

THE INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.

The directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition are hopeful that the citizens of Peterborough will show their interest in the success of the exhibition by attending the annual meeting which will be held in the City Council Chamber next Friday afternoon at one o'clock. The directors want the people of Peterborough to look upon the exhibition as their own—an annual event in which every resident of the city and county should take an active interest and feel an honest pride. It is hoped that many citizens will be able to be present at next Friday's meeting to hear the reports for the past year and to take part in the discussion. The Exhibition has made vast strides in recent years and is rapidly approaching the stage when it will be a six-day event, with the necessary buildings and plant for a week's fair. This is the ambition of President Denne and his associates, and the present board of management have a happy knack of being able to turn anticipation into realization. They want the people of Peterborough generally to put their shoulder to the wheel and help the movement along. It is a big enterprise, growing bigger every year and means much to Peterborough. It can be made to mean considerably more with the co-operation of the citizens as a whole. A large attendance at Friday's meeting would be an evidence of a desire to co-operate that would be appreciated by those in charge of the destinies of the Exhibition.

BE WORTHY OF PEACE

Canadians are worthy of peace. In the ordinary affairs of life they must continue to exhibit patriotism towards the nation and towards individuals.

A good understanding and a sympathetic feeling among all classes is the demand of the day. Fighting side by side in war is a good beginning for living side by side in peace.

Co-partnership and co-operation are the watchwords of industry. It is in the interests of all that production should reach the maximum under proper conditions, of labour, and that profits should be shared fairly among all whose energies create them.

Particularly is it the duty of Canadians to be patriotic in their dealings with the men who return from the front. Each individual citizen must search his conscience for ways and means of establishing returned men in useful, congenial and self-respecting employment.

Repatriation is the great peace task for Canadians. As that task is done so will Canadians be held worthy or unworthy of a righteous and victorious peace.

THE BANK OF TORONTO

The annual statement at the Bank of Toronto, which is published elsewhere in to-day's issue contains some remarkably interesting figures which are indicative of a most prosperous year. The deposits total $79,039,274 which is the largest increase recorded in any one year, the gain being practically 24 per cent. There is also a notable increase in the cash and gold reserves which total $13,922,182. The statement shows that the immediately available assets amount to $47,048,174, the total including short-date advances to the Dominion Government and to the Imperial Government amounting in all to $19,888,000. The continued substantial support of the business interest of the Dominion is shown by the total of commercial loans $49,168,189 which is an increase of $6,855,043. The increase in the total assets was $15,914,079 which is the largest in the history of the Bank of the assets amounting altogether to the remarkable total of $100,207,977.

There were profits of $844,402 equal to 16.88 per cent. of the paid up capital and an increase of $41,482 over the previous year.

The amount brought forward from 1917 was $555,306, making a total of $1,399,708, available for distribution. The usual dividend was paid, and after payment of War Tax on Circulation and appropriations to Officers' Pension Fund, Patriotic and other War Funds, and to Bank premises, a balace of $623,623, was carired forward to next year. The General Manager in his remarks said, "Net earnings on banking capital are not entirely in keeping with the expansion in resources, but it must be remembered that costs of operation have greatly increased during the past few years, while rates of interest and our cahrges for banking services generally have remained practically stationary."

Concerning the future he stated "There must be a re-adjustment downward of prices for commodities and services, and, it is to be hoped of production upward, until we reach a stable level on which all classes of business can proceed in security and comfort, and that level will be found only in time and by natural processes, but violent changes can be avoided, and we believe will be avoided, through the enterprise and forethought of our Government and their co-operation with the business and financial interests of the country."

THE PRICE OF WHEAT.

The problems for man in authority in war time seemed and were very important. But it is beginning to be seen that the after-the-war problems are more numerous and more difficult of solution. If many things unprecedented in their character had to be done while the war was on there was a spirit abroad that made the doing of them easy. Men were wanted; there was an almost universal desire to help the good cause in some way Money was wanted; the people were ready and willing to provide it. Food and munitions were required; those who could do so were asked to do so regardless of cost or price. Seldom was a critical spirit manifested. The things that were needed for the prosecution of the war must be obtained, and whatever price was necessary to command them must be paid or guaranteed. As it was with us in Canada in the beginning so it became in the United States when that nation came into the war. We are now approaching a day of reckoning and difficulties are likely to be met with which will be more embarrassing than anything that arose while the activities of the war service were evident on every hand.

One of the serious problems now presenting itself is the price of wheat. In the days when it was of paramount importance to obtain food for the armies, as well as for our people at home, it became necessary to give the farmer an assurance of a satisfactory price, not only at the moment, but also for some time ahead. Otherwise he might not have felt able to produce the article. The current price, though fairly satisfactory, might fail, and in that event, in view of the increased cost of everything entering into production, wheat growing might be disastrously unprofitable. To guard against this, to make certain of abundant production, it became necessary to fix the farmer a satisfactory price for the wheat immediately available and also to insure his obtaining a satisfactory price for the next crop to be raised.

Thus it came about that in both Canada and the United States the Governments fixed prices designed to net about $2.20 a bushel. This was in one way an advantage to the farmer. On the other hand, there was advantage of a wider character which the community obtained. Wheat is the staple article of our breadstuffs. The prices of wheat and flour and bread had advanced. There was danger of further advance. There is much reason to believe that if the price had not been fixed, if the law of demand and supply had been left to unrestricted operation, the prices of breadstuffs would have advanced still further, and the people, already pressed by the high cost of living, would have suffered more severely through the higher cost of bread. There were times—perhaps they would have been continuous—when the farmer, if he had been allowed a free hand, might have obtained more than $2.20 for his wheat It is worth remembering that, at one stage our government, acting for the British Government, endeavored to secure a future supply of wheat, by offering a guarantee of $1.70 a bushel. The shrewd Canadian farmer, seeing that if the war were protracted, wheat would go much beyond that figure, refused to accept the offer. As he had expected, the price did advance, and later he received a guarantee of $2.20 a bushel, instead of $1.70 previously offered.

Now the question arises, how long should this guaranteed price continue? There are some articles which are basic in their character, their price having a controlling influence on the prices of other commodities. Wheat is a basic article of foodstuffs, and influences very largely the price of all other foods. If the price of wheat is to remain at $2.20 there will be but little if any reduction in the cost of living, which is oppressively high.

The question of the price of wheat becomes more perplexing because, while the price guaranteed in Canada and the United States is the same, there is a material difference between the periods for which the price was fixed. In both cases those in charge of the matter looked ahead; neither contemplated the sudden termination of the war. In Canada the period for which the price of $2.20 is fixed will expire in August, 1919. This means that the price was fixed for only the crop of 1918. The crop of one season is usually approaching exhaustion at midsummer of the ensuing year. For the crop of 1919, there is no Canadian guarantee. If no further action be taken by the authorities the price of wheat will then be left to the old law of demand and supply. That there would be some reduction of price is reasonable to expect. But in the United States the guarantee of $2.20 covers not only the crop of 1918 but also that of 1919. Thus until June, 1920, the American farmer will receive $2.20 while the farmer across the border in Canada will receive only the world's market price, which may be below $2.20, a situation which will certainly not enhance the happiness of the Canadian wheat grower.

If the crops of the coming season are so abundant as to supply the markets liberally the world's price may be so reduced as to impose an enormous tax on the people of the United States to enable the government to fulfil its contract with the farmers. A fall of a dollar a bushel, and a price of $1.20 would be a liberal one on a pre-war basis would probably call for a contribution of seven or eight hundred million dollars by the people as a whole to make good the loss of the government in paying the farmers the price agreed upon. If Canada in the consideration of this difficult question should find it expedient to follow the example of the Americans and extend the guaranteed period until June, 1920, a very large sum might be required from the general treasury to pay the farmers the guaranteed price.

A very complex and perplexing problem it is. If its solution costs the general treasury something, we may at least have the comfort of believing that the fixing of the price at $2.20, probably gave our people cheaper breadstuffs during the last year than there would have been if there had been no interference with th law of demand and supply.

Apart from the question of government guarantees it is quite probable that the world demand for foodstuffs for the next year will be so great that even with abundant crops there will not be any considerable reduction of price.—Journal of Commerce.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Pamphlets in connection with the War Savings Stamps Campaign have been issued in nine languages. And if the yare worded in the usual official language, the average English-speaking Canadian will be able to understand them as easily in the eight foreign languages as he will the pamphlet printed in his own tongue.

"Russia is a mess," so Rev. Dr. Macdonald sums up the Russian situation. It is a brief description, but says a lot in a few words.

"Hindenburg is working hard," reads a newspaper heading. Surely he is not constructing a new line somewhere.

Not Only a Claque, But a Rival Claque, Discovered in New York Opera House

Applause Accelerators Revealed by Journeymen "Viva!" Men Within Classic Precincts—Metropolitan Opera House Invaded by "Cheer Boys."

NEW YORK, Jan. Jan. 11.—At last the claque has been discovered within the classic precincts of the Metropolitan Opera House.

That there has been scientifically accellerated applause guided by some mysterious musical intelligence and expressed by some indefinite but muscular confraternity of hidden palms has, at least, been evident to patrons of the performances at Broadway and Fortieth street for many years.

Indeed, certain ones in the innermost know have declared: "Of course there is a claque." But when the question has been propounded: "Where is it? What is it?" the situation would again resolve itself into an aggravating indefiniteness.

Still the enthusiasm pushers continued to give manual colour to the openings of all intermissions and, at proper times to important arias during the acts.

But now, it may be said, there is not only a claque but a Claquera' Union. Furthermore, there is an opposition claque, and there's the rub. The opposition has let the secret out and established the fact.

The original disclosure was made throuhg a letter in a New York paper. Here it is:

"What is the matter with those music reporters? They complain about the "claque" at the Metropolitan Opera. Why single out the Metropolitan? We suppose we may be classed as the "claquers." From time to time we are admitted to the opera—to stand up! We wouldn't go and stand up if we didn't enjoy it. And as we do enjoy it, haven't we a right to express our appreciation?

If it weren't for fellows like us, half the time fine ladies and gentlemen in the orchestra seats and boxes would think they were in a cold storage warehouse instead of a temple of music!

TONY RUPATO,
GASTON GASPARO,
MISCHA SCHWARZKI,
D'OYLEY FINNEGAN,
Committee of Claquers' Union.

The paging of Tony, Gaston, Mischa and D'Oyley brought to light no sign of that famous quartette, but it did reveal the head of the claque and also his shoulders, arms and especially hands. He is one of the most interesting characters among New York's musical experts and his name is Schultz.

The finding of Schultz, soul of the claque, not only established the existence of the "Bis" and "Viva" factory, but also that unskilled claquers are at large and are trying to make trouble. For Schultz admitted that he was greatly puzzled over the letter and didn't know the odd international quartette.

Schultz read and his eyes snapped as he said: 'They ought to be put out of the house. Somebody is trying to queer the claque. We are hard working men, and we don't disturb the listenders will ill-timed applause. But men come here every night who break into plaudits at the wrong time. They cast discredit upon the claque. They want it to appear we are not doing our work properly. I don't engage any but the best of claquers.

"The same men come every night. They are led by skilled leaders, who ar stationed at convenient places where they can be heard. My men knew when to follow. They wait for the claders; some one is tryin gto spoil our good work.

"What would the house be without us? Cof-fas-ee. The audience does not know when to applaud. It is our business to lead. I have a score of every opera carefully marked with bursts of applause, just as a conductor has his tempos and cuts.

"You ask me who these Union Claquers are who send communications to the paper. I don't know. They do not belong to the regulars. They never have worked for me. Maybe they are trying to hurt our business. I'll find out.

"I've led the claque in Paris, in Berlin, in Vienna and in Russia and I know my business. I never let my men disturb. The artists come to me and say, 'Schultz, you spoiled my big aria last night.' The newspapers say the claque is a nuisance. But it is not us. It is disturbers who want us to pay them to keep quiet. They would spoil the reputation of honest claquers.

"And who supports the claque?' Schultz was asked.

"Ah, that's a secret. We get in every night. That's sufficient. Twenty of my men were stationed about the house last night, standing here and there among the onlookers. They are all trained workers. If you had been there and listened for yourself at the "Serenade" in the third act—the opera was "Faust"—you would see that my men came in at just the right moment neither too soon as to destroy the effect nor too late as to leave the artist on the stage cold after his trying performance.

"We got seven curtain calls for the principal at the end of the act. Watch us and you'll see how carefully and effectively we work. There are no frosty audiences when we're on the job.'

Norwood Men Return Home

Two Soldiers Who Have Seen Considerable Service.

NORWOOD, Jan. 11.—Lance-Corp H. E. Rorabeck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. E. Rorabeck of Norwood arrived home this week from overseas. Corp. Rorabeck, who was a member of the Norwood platoon, 93rd Battalion, received his stripe while overseas. He was eight months in the trenches, and was in that notable affair at Vimy Ridge. It was here he got too close to one of "Fritzs" gas shells and inhailed some of its poison. He also sustained a slight shrapnel wound in the arm and was invalided to "Blighty" in April last. During the period of convalescence following he took a course of instruction in the working of a machine gun and proved himself such an apt student that he was given first-class marks, raised to the rank of Lance-Corporal, with an appointment at Witley Camp, where he remained until after the armistice was signed suspending hostilities.

ON "IRON SECOND"

Lieut. W. T. Robus, one of the first boys from Norwood to volunteer for overseas service, also arrived home this week. Lieut. Robus has seen over four years service in the "Iron Second." He was wounded four times and bears many marks of the conflict, having been hit in the jaw, thigh, shoulder, neck, lungs and stomach. Lieut. Robus, who went to the front as a private, received his commission about a year ago. He is the guest of his former employer, Mr. W. T. Buck, on the Hastings Road.

Flexibility in Selling Prices

The Metal Markets For the Week—Scrap Metal.

One class is coming quite noticeably to the front in all departments of trade in machinery, steel, iron or metals, and that class may be lumped and called "waiters," and the principal reason assigned for their attitude is one of expectation in regard to declining prices. There is at present a fairly wide margin between what purchasers think they should pay and what sellers think they should get, and any concessions that are made tend to bring the sellers and buyers nearer to that point where they can be and do business to mutual advantage.

Steel Mills.

It is not expected there can be, for instance, any big reduction announced by the steel mills in Canada to meet every cut that is made by the big producers on the other side of the line. Warehouses, in many cases, are full of material that has cost more than the present U. S. price, and if the Canadian price were put down to a competitive basis at once it would mean a serious situation for these interests. As it is they show a marked tendency to sell at very close prices just now. They want all the business they can secure, and one way to secure it in the face of competition is to introduce a certain amount if flexibility in their selling prices.

Trade Is Quiet.

There are some enquiries for equipment for railroad shops and other lines but otherwise the machine tool trade is quiet. Dealers are not showing any particular desire to stock up on shell shop equipment, although there is a big opening to do so now. Some sales have been made, but mostly from places where operations had not been going on long before the word came to cancel.

A new list is out this week for scrap metal prices, and the cuts that have been made bring prices down to a poor looking remnant of their former war-time greatness. A few sales are put through at better prices, but in such cases there is always more or less urgency in the sale. For instance, one shell shop sold a car of copper turnings for 17c pound only a few days ago. To-day they could hardly expect to get over 15c. The 17c was paid because the dealer making the purchase had a contract that he had to fill or face cancellation. His need made 17c the price, but the price lasted for that one car only.—Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News.

RUSSIAN SABLE COAT VALUED AT $75,000 FOR MRS. WILLIAM E. COREY

Matching of Skins for Garment Kept Skilled Workmen Busy for Three Months.

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—A coat of Russian sable has been made for Mrs. William E. Corey, formerly Miss Mabel Gilman, wife of the steel man, by Balch Price & Co., of Brooklyn and Manhattan, at a cost of $75,000.

Skins for the garment were purchased by the company's agents in Northern Russia. It was necessary to examine thousands of skins to find those which blended perfectly. The matching of sables requires patience and skill equalled only by that required for the matching of pearls. Three months were occupied in this process.

The most skilled workmen were employed in the making of the coat. The cutting of the skins had to be done with the utmost care, for the slip of a knife to the extent of a fraction of an inch would have spoiled the work.

Mrs. Corey is in Paris and the coat will be shipped to her soon.

Peterboro Veterinary Surgeon Describes the Work of the Blue Cross Hospital Gorps

This Branch of the Service Has For Its Object the Care of Horses Used by the Army—Capt J. D. Deyell, of this City, Had Charge of a Veterinary Hospital Section.

Hundreds of books and stories have been written on the activities of the Red Cross, the Army Service Corps and other branches of the service overseas, yet few writers have deemed it necessary to tell of the work of the Blue Cross, that service which takes care of the wounded and disabled horses of the British armies and not only dresses the wounds of the equines but makes them fit for service again both in the cavalry and the draught departments. The horse has not been entirely supplanted by tractors, which are now used to bring the big guns to the front or by any kind of machinery. The light guns are brought to the front by horses and wheeled into position with a speed that would be impossible with the big, cumbersome tractor.

Charge of a Section.

Dr. James D. Deyell, V.S., of this city, went overseas early in the war and was attached to the 3rd Pontoon Bridging Train of the Third British Army which was stationed at Aldershot. Over 350 horses of the Train had to be inspected every day for any signs of disease. After many orders and counter orders the Train landed in France at Le Havre, and going to the front found that sufficient trains to accomplish the work of laying bridges were already in the front lines and the Train was set to work laying timber in the trenches. It was then that Captain Deyell was attached to the 14th Veterinary Hospital and given charge of a section.

The Casualties.

In order to understand the work of the Veterinary Service it is necessary to understand that the whole of the region behind the lines is divided into veterinary districts with an officer (usually a captain) in charge. The Veterinary Hospitals are at least 30 miles behind the front line, but there are sections of Veterinaries just in the rear of the front trenches. When an action takes place and the badly-mangled horses are left on the battlefield the Veterinary Corps attend to them on the field, and if they find that they are badly wounded they are despatched at once and put out of their misery. Those whose wounds would require six or seven months' attention in the hospital are also killed as it would entail such an expense that it would be much cheaper to replace them with other horses. Most of the casualties among the mules (there are many thousands of them) and the draught horses are from bombs and machine-gun fire of Boche aeroplanes. Herein lies the danger to the personal of the Veterinary Service.

Slightly Wounded.

If a horse is found to be only slightly wounded it is transported to the Hospital by railroad where after careful treatment they are inspected by the Remount Officer and are sent back to the Remount stables for distribution among the various services. Horses that are killed in action are got rid of as quickly as possible. Sometimes they are thrown in shell holes and earth hurriedly thrown over them and sometimes the carcasses are cremated. If a horse dies of disease the horse's remains are buried in quicklime.

Prevalent Diseases.

One of the most prevalent diseases among the army horses is mange. At the time Captain Deyell left the front there were 35,700 cases of mange reported among the horses of the British army. Another serious disease is glanders which was brought to the front by American ranch horses which were bought in the United States in thousands by the British War Office. If glanders is found to exist in a hrose that animal is immediately destroyed and every horse in the district is isolated. If in three weeks a horse does not show signs of the dread disease he is considered out of danger and after another week of isolation is again fit for service. At the end of the three weeks in order to find if the animal has the glanders an injection is entered in the lower eyelid. When the eye begins to swell it is a sign that the disease is present and the horse is destroyed.

The Imersion.

Dr. Deyell was in charge of one of these Veterinary districts for a time and had in his charge stables for all infectious diseases — Catarrh paddocks, glanders paddocks, ring-worm paddocks, and the skin diseases. In the treatment of skin diseases the horses are immersed in a bath of calcium sulphide. A long fenced road leading to the bath directs the animals to the sulphide. After a slight grade in the narrow road the horses are pushed over the edge into the liquid and are completely immersed. The floor of the bath becomes shallow at the far end and the horse lands on the other side. They are taken to hospital and watched, and if one bath is not deemed sufficient they are taken back to the bath and go through the same process again. This is repeated week after week until the Veterinarians are certain that the disease has disappeared. One of these baths was also under Dr. Deyell's jurisdiction. He also had a corps of blacksmiths who were experts far beyond the dreams of their civilian brothers. In the army horseshoeing is an art.

Shoeing the Horses.

Every horse in the service carries an extra pair of horse shoes on the saddle and the serial number of the horse which is stamped on the horseshoe on the foot is identical with the number on the extra pair of horseshoes.

Cutting the sole out of the foot of a horse is [illegible] ous offence, and the first time [illegible] fence is committed the offe[illegible] assessed three days' pay, and [illegible] cond time 5 days' pay. The same penalties are provided for the cutting the bars or the frog of the foot of a horse. A rasp mark on the outside of the foot of a horse draws a five-day suspension of pay. Otherwise the shoe is made to fit the foot, and not the foot to fit the shoe.

Care of Horses.

Like every Tommy in the trenches the horse receives a regular ration three times a day. Water is supplied regularly. A horse's harness must be cleaned every day, and if the grooms fail to do this they are liable to be hailed before the section Major for punishment.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I would like to express my strong approval of the action of Sir T. Eaton of the city of Toronto in adapting the shorter hours for all his employees and would like to see more of the employers immitate him and in doing so they would confer a great boon on all their employees and I firmly believe that the day is not far off when we shall have placed upon the Statute Books of Canada an act restricting the hours of labor to 8 hours per day with a half day on Saturday and by so doing the vast army of employees will be able to have ample time for recreation to which they are in my opinion fully entitled to and the employers will find by the adaption of the same that they will get better results from those that are in the employ.

Yours for shorter hours,
W. Stevens.

P. S.—I am pleased to see by the papers that on and after Feb. 1st. the freight handlers are to have a shorter day they will start at 8 and quit at 5:30 with half day on Saturday This is a step also in the right direction.

Russian Tells Grim Story Of His Country's Chaos

SANE ELEMENTS SEEK AID

LONDON, Jan. 10.— The Daily Chronicle publishes a statement by Titoff, Socialist member of a Russian delegation which has just arrived in London. The delegation is visiting the allied countries for the purpose of informing the Governments and peoples of the critical condition of Russia, and reached London by way of Odessa. It consists of Shebeko, late Russian Ambassador in Vienna, and Gurko, brother of the famous General both Conservatives: Tretjakov, a Liberal, and Titoff and Krovopuskv, Moderate Socialists.

"Under the cloak of socialism tyranny has been restored," said Titoff. The situation created by the Bolsheviki in Northern and Central Russia threatens to produce general starvation complete ruin of economic life and the annihilation of the Russian educated classes and of Russian civilization.

"All newspapers with the exception of Bolshevist publications have been suppressed and the right or arranging public meetings is only given to the Bolsheviki. Not only the Bourgeois but all the Socialist parties have been branded as counter revolutionary. All prominent members of these parties who were unable to escape have been arrested and thrown into prisons with common criminals, and they only receive food bought in by their relatives.

Justice and law courts do not exist The prisons are crowded with people who are detained without any legal grounds, or the most part, youngsters of 18 or less have replaced dismissed magistrates and their examinations are vertiable tortures and very often culminate in executions without any trial. People are frequently shot by their guards when being taken from one prison to another.

"All industrial and comercial enterprises have been nationalized and most of the works and factories are at a standstill or have been obliged to reduce their output to the utmost. Even discharged workmen get wages for several months in advance from Government funds. An enormous army of commissaries and clerks consisting mainly of Bolsheviki, are receiving enormous salaries.

"This swallows up milliards from the nationa resources, forcing the Soviet Government to flood the country with worthless paper money. The financial system is utterly destroyed and banks are abolished.

"The national food supply is based on the principle that only Bolsheviki are entitled to a regular supply of food, and the remainder of the population is literally starving, their daily food consisting of from one ounce to four ounces of black bread and a little fish.

"The Bolshevist army has now grown to 500,000 men well fed, each man receiving 600 roubes per month besides his daily ration.

"The situation in the provinces is worse than in Petrograd and Moscow. The local Soviet consist of illiterate and uncultured ruffians, often with a ciminal past, and they are supported by bands of brigands who rob and pillage the peaceful population.

"The peasants have been given over to so-called committee of the poor which haye been formed of the laziest and most depraved members of the community. These committees have been known to so anger the peasantry that the latter have burned them alive and have themselves been wiped out by the Bolsheviki in reprisal."

Titoff declares that the German policy of artificially splitting the country into independent parts is contrary to the aspirations of the masses of all the sane elements, who demand the union of the whole country in a single State.

"Active help is required from the Allies for all these parts of Russia which are in conflict with the Bolsheviki and are striving to unite and regenerate Russia," Titoff went on.

"This help is not required for the purpose of taking the offensive against the Bolsheviki, but to enable the sane element to organize themselves to create Government mechanism and an [illegible]

Peterboro Soldier Tells of Interesting Trip to Germany

Roy A. Dixon Was Detailed to Go Up Near the Rhine in Charge of Load of Maps.

Mrs. A. E. Dixon has received the following letter from her son, Roy A. Dixon, who is with the Engineers in the United States Army, and has been engaged in topographical survey work and map making:

Toul, France, Dec. 6th, 1918.

My dear Mother,—I received your letter of Nov. 13th. I have had a great trip the past week. The major let me go up near the Rhine in charge of a load of maps. We went through "No Man's Land" and saw the towns all shot to pieces. For about five miles on either side, the roads are camouflaged, and in some conspicuous places they are covered in entirely. They have places camouflaged just like big hills, and under these were railway yards. We passed barb wire entanglements for miles and miles. Got out and examined several German trenches of most perfect construction, with concrete dug out in the trenches, and they looked very comfortable. This was up above Port-a-Mousson. Then we went on to Metz, a most beautiful city, and saw all the overturned statues of the Kaiser, some of the most wonderful parks there and residences. The people are very well dressed, and though food is scarce and expensive, still the inhabitants seemed to have escaped any suffering at all. Some of the healthiest looking kids I ever saw were there.

City is Clean.

The city is clean and modern, with trolly cars, and everything looks spic and span. Then we went on and passed into the country of Luxembourg, really the most picturesque and beautiful country I ever saw. Between Metz and Luxembourg, we passed through the great iron country, and hugh steel plants of the most modern construction loomed up for miles to the left of our road. Passing into Luxembourg and especially passing out we noticed considerable difference in the roads. Hugh arches at intervals had been erected to welcome the boys ahead of us. The roads are wonderful and they wind through the most beautiful forests. These are also laid out in paths and drives, with big rustic seats at short intervals. Except for scarcity of food, the country has not been affected. The farm houses largely are pink and the barns also, and I can just imagine what a fairy land it would be with the trees all green and the grass also. Then we came to the city of Luxembourg, and you would think you were in a beautiful American city. Their residences make Fifth Avenue, New York, look like the Bowery. I never saw such a conglomeration of beautiful buildings, beautiful chateaus almost hidden by trees, shrubbery and gardens. It is laid out in a big ravine, and you wind around from the bottom to the top. The people greeted us with open arms and threw open their beautiful homes, and even supplied private servants to shine our shoes ond keep our clothes in shape.

Food Expensive.

Food is very expensive and scarce, but the people dress almost lavishly. Of course I have been in the French war towns so long that I have almost forgotten what real clothes are like. There are beautiful hotels in Luxembourg, and there is no scarcity of them, with their door men and bell boys and taxi starters in uniform, they are a most pleasing change to me. You see beautiful cars around town in large numbers. Lots of cake and confectionery in the store windows, but they are very expensive. The city is well lighted, greatly in contrast with Frenrch towns and cities I have been in. The people leave their windows unbarred and keep their homes lighted up, vastly different to the French as a rule. I hated to leave the place, everything was so pleasing, and after going through many more miles of beautiful country we passed under arches out of Luxembourg and into old Germany proper. Here the roads began to show signs of heavy traffic, and were not nearly so good. However, everything looked clean and showed no sign of neglect at all. The farms are in good shape, and I should say the towns are in as good condition, and the people generally as the French. We finally arrived at the third army headquarters (army of occupation), and the Germans had beaten us out by two days. The people are not rejoicing by any means, but they accept us in a very matter of fact way. The people all look healthy and entirely the reverse of what I was expecting. The kids are in good health and there were many who looked as though they were old enough and strong enough to be in the army, but had not been.

German Barber Shop.

I even risked my neck and had a shave in a real German barber shop, a place where the most sanitary precautions are taken and up-to-date in every way. In the school building where the map department is, pictures and busts of the Kaiser are still in evidence on walls and pedestals. It is a very modern building even though the town is small. On the way up during the night, the men of the advancing divisions were sleeping on the roads, beside fires, and it was raining at that. Armed guards had been posted all along the line to guard against any outbreak. Next day when we started back we passed thousands of men hiking ahead through the mud and rain. The roads were filled with horses, trucks, artillery and every other contrivance utilized during the war. When the troops move up to Coblenz, their final destination, I hope another opportunity may present itself, as they say Coblenz is a very beautiful city. Have heard nothing definite as to when we will be getting home.—Yours loving son,

Roy.

Anniversary Services of Trinity Methodist Church

To-morrow, the forty-seventh anniversary of Trinity Methodist church, will be celebrated by services of unusual interest. The speaker of the day will be the Rev. E. E. Scott, of Toronto, one of the foremost preachers of the Methodist church. The organist, Mr. King, has prepared a very fine programme of music for these services. His large and well-trained choir will be assisted by Captain and Mrs. Park. In the evening from 6.30 to 7 o'clock Mr. King will give an organ recital.

Forty-seven years ago the Charlotte street church was built. It was served for a time by the junior pastors of the George street church. In 1881 it became an independent church, and since then has had the following pastors in succession: Rev. J. E. Starr, Rev. Thomas Manning, D.D., Rev. F. H. Wallace, M.A., D.D., Rev. S. J. Shorey, D.D., Rev. George Edwards, Rev. J. J. Rae, Rev. D. O. Crossley, Rev. W. J. Jolliffe, B.A., L.L.B., Rev. H. M. Manning, Rev. Geo. W. Henderson, D.D., Rev. Thomas Mansell, Rev. J. W. Wilson, B.A., D.D., and the present pastor, Rev. F. E. Malott, B.A., B.D.

In January, 1915 the present splendid edifice was dedicated and the old Charlotte street church was given to the congregation of St. James' church, who removed the materials and used them in their present structure. The Charlotte street church and its successor, Trinity church, have enjoyed continuous prosperity. There has been marked growth along many lines. The present property, when completed by the building of a new Sunday school hall, will be one of the finest ecclesiastical buildings in Canadian Methodism. The membership of Trinity church is double that of the Charlotte street church of fifteen years ago. Rev. F. E. Malott, the present pastor, has received already, within the past four months, fifty new members. Trinity church is one of the well-organized churches of the conference. Capable and enthusiastic officers are in charge of all the departments of the church's work. The Church Boards are composed of able men, who give a loyal and hearty support to their pastor and a splendid lead to the congregation. Progress along all lines is the watchword of Trinity congregation as they enter upon the forty-eighth year of their history.

HER EXCUSE FOR SMOKING

MONTREAL Star:—The chief of a government office—he was a very great man too—informed his particular typist that he was quite aware that she occasionlly indulged in a cigrette, and that he objected to her cultivation of the baneful weed during office hours.

"Oh," she mumured, sweetly, "I only smoke to save you embarrassment."

"Me! Embarrassment!" spluttered the great one.

"Well, you see; you couldn't smoke in my presence quite as freqently as you do without asking permission. could you, unless you were aware that I didn't object to smoke?"

And rumor says that next time the big man asked if he might light up.

Putting Efficiency into Repatriation

THE Repatriation Committee has been formed by the Dominion Government to bring Canada forward to a peace basis with all speed.

It will use the existing machinery and any necessary new machinery.

The Committee consists of Hon. Sir James Lougheed, Minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment; Hon. N. W. Rowell, President of the Privy Council; Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Agriculture; Hon. G. D. Robertson, Minister of Labor; Hon. Arthur Meighen, Minister of the Interior; Hon. J. A. Calder, Minister of Immigration (Chairman). To assist them, Mr. H. J. Daly has been appointed Director of Repatriation.

This Committee is formed to co-ordinate the work of all those departments of the Government which have to do with the task of bringing back our soldiers to civil life, caring for them and their dependents, providing employment opportunities for soldiers and war-workers, and assuring proper living and working conditions. It also assists the efforts of all organizations and agencies prepared to give aid in the solution of our problems.

THE Committee surveys all plans. It prevents overlapping and confusion. It secures expert assistance. It obtains more speedy action, more effective co-operation. While its first consideration is the welfare of the Canadian soldier, its scope embraces the whole community.

The Committee has built up a Repatriation Organization to supplement the work of the existing departments of the Government.

The Committee has secured experts on each problem—military, employment, social, housing, farming, transportation, medical. Nothing is neglected. It invites representatives from all organizations which have interested themselves in the social and economic welfare of the country and the needs of our soldiers.

Co-operating with the Repatriation Committee is an Advisory Committee appointed by the Great War Veterans' Association.

With the assistance of these agencies the solution of the problem is presented to The Repatriation Committee in a practicable form.

The plans devised to meet every problem as it arises will be reported to you in the coming announcements.

Fifteenth Point Is Discovered

be developed before a treaty is signed.

"I am not socialistic myself... I intend to continue my fight against Bolshevism. But peace must be economic and social, as well as political, and it must be established soon, or everything accomplished by the war will be lost. I am sure nations will have enough foresight to stick to President Wilson's fourteen points, else within a few years we will have another war. Hungary's policy in everything accomplished by the war Wilsonest.'

"When I came into the government I orderer the people to lay down their arms. I did so with the purpose of putting an end to militarism. I hoped to show absolute confidence in the Wilsonian policies and relied upon their basic justice. Now the Czecho-Slovaks, Roumanians and Serbs are overwhelming us, seizing all parts of Hungary though in the armistice it was clearly stated that the administration of all occupied territory would stay in the hands of the Hungarians. Thus it was demonstrated that so far as Czecho-Slovaks, Roumanians and Serbs were concerned, armistice terms were military and not political, and were not meant to be kept.

FOOD SUPPLIES.

"Potatoes, wheat, other food supplies and coal, are in the hands of nations surrounding us. Distribution of necessities is impossible. Our economic and political state s hopeless and unbearable. The people say that President Wilson cannot prevail at the peace conference. This agitation is very dangerous. Budapest is on the verge of a great catastrophe of Bolshevism — now let us call it by its correct name—"anarchy" This is not developing from Russian propaganda, but from the needs of the people.

PUBLIC OPINION.

"Public opinion is beginning to have impression here that the Entente wants us to become victims of Bolshevism. There will be no help for us unless the 'Entente makes haste and concludes peace. The present government cannot hold out much longer. It was I who led the people to trust President Wilson's policies until the peace conference could put them into effect.

"We cannot do anything unless we are recognized by the Entente. We must receive assistance from our erstwhile enemies. Elections will be impossible with Czecho-Slovaks and Roumanians inhabiting our lands. The people are asking now why I led them to trust in the Entente to recognize us. The people are desperate and will certainly revert to action which may develop into anarchy unless something is done right away.

USE OF FORCE.

"Regarding our boundaries, Hungary must be a geographical unit. You can cut the legs and arms from a man and he will live. But if you cut any more he won't live. I advocate the formation of a commission, headed by Americans, to fix our boundaries. The Americans entered the war to crush Prussian militarism and mitteleuropa. If mitteleuropa is succeeded by a group of small nations, irritated by being prodded, there will always be trouble."

Karloyi's cabinet has declared war against the Bolsheviks, who are threatening Budapest, and is enforcing the strongest measures of suppression. A cabinet crisis, which arise over the use of force, was relieved by the resignation of two Socialist members— Garami and Bunfy. They were anti-Bolshevik, but declined to vote in favour of possible bloodshed.

Peterboro Juniors Start Their Season With a Win

Local Youngsters Victorious in a Splendid Exhibition From Lindsay Midgets by 7 Goals to 4—Game Was Good All the Way and Petes Work Delighted the Fans

SHOWED FINE SPEED

The Peterborough junior O. H. A. team opened their season auspiciously last night at Brock street rink by defeating the speedy Lindsay Midgets by 7 goals to 4, after a sparkling exhibition of hockey in which the two teams showed mid-season form. Owing to the fact that the Lindsay train was two hours late the game did not get going for over an hour after the advertised time, but the crowd forgot the long wait as soon as the battle started, so fast a clip was set by the speedy youngsters.

The Petes won a clean-cut victory. They were ahead 2 to 0 at the end of the first period and 5 to 3 at the close of the second and were always in front, but they had to go to the limit to earn the verdict. They had the edge in speed and in stick-handling and this superiority won them the decision, but it was no soft snap.

Considering the fact that the teams have been practising but little over a week, the form displayed was surprising.

The pace was lightning fast from the go-in, and the fans, knowing that the teams had had little chance for getting into shape, predicted that they would not keep up the initial clip very long. The wise ones guessed wrong, however, for the teams battled along all the way at top speed. The result was as tidy a little argumen as the most ardent lover of hockey would ask to see. The pace was fast from gong to gong, with plenty of nice stick-handling and fast skating to thrill the spectators. It was rush and counter-rush, with an attack first on one goal and then on the other, and the players seemed to be going just as fast in the last period as they were in the first. A glass-like ice surface gave the speed merchants a chance to shine, and they took full advantage of the opportunity.

The form displayed by the Petes made a big hit with the local fans. There was not a weak spot anywhere, and everybody, substitutes included, worked their heads off to earn the verdict. With a few more practises under the coaching of Jerry Coughlin, the team should develop into as formidable a hockey machine as has represented this city in the junior series for a long time. The youngsters have speed and stick-handling ability to spare and will improve in team work with a few work-outs under their belts. A feature last night was their use of the poke check, which tangled up the Lindsay attack on more than one occasion.

While Cherrett and Frost were perhaps the most brilliant individual performers for the Petes, every player had a share in winning the game. Cherrett is the same brilliant performer as ever, swooping in through the opposing defence and shooting with his old time accuracy. Frost shares first honours with the junior captain by a magnificent game, rushing in stellar fashion and packing a shot that kept the Lindsay net guardian busy all night. The big youngsters's work last night delighted the crowd. Alongside of him on the defence was Campbell, and the soldier boy, who has not been on skates for two or three years, is most promising. He is big and willing and should round into a most useful player.

Cyril Flowers, whose brother Walter performed in the same position for the Peterborough juniors a few years ago, made his O.H.A. debut in the nets and gave a fine account of himself. He had a lot of nasty drives to handle, some of them at close range and he made good in splendid style.

On the forward line, Hagerman and Park both performed nicely. They are neat stick-handlers and possess a bunch of speed as well, and both youngsters should have a great season. Park was hurt in the second period when he was tripped by Green and got a bad toss, but he finished the game nevertheless.

The two substitutes, Williams and Girard, were used frequently and both were in the limelight. Little Williams, who was dubbed "the hornet" last year, is no bigger than ever, but has gained in speed and he hummed around in great style, while Girard, who was used both on the forward line and on the defence, was useful and effective.

In beating Lindsay, the Petes beat a good team. The Midgets were big and fast and they never stopped trying. Any let-up on the part of the homesters would have been disastrous, because the visitors were determined and clever and had to be carefully looked after. Garnett, the big defence man, was perhaps the star of the Scugog team. He has a fine turn of speed and is a neat stick-handler, as well as being decidedly dangerous when he broke away. Wilford, the speed merchant of last year's team, was at left wing and did not shine as much as last season, although he was Lindsay's best scorer, getting three of the goals. Kelly, the little centre man, is a speedy kid, but did not seem very effective in last night's game. Oliver, who was in the nets last year, is again on the job and played a sensational game last night. Half a dozen times he rushed out twenty feet and nailed the man with the rubber after his defence had been drawn out, while he blocked drives from all angles.

The teams:

It was fast going from the drop of the puck and the fans settled back to watch a battle royal. Both Flowers and Oliver had close-in shots to handle early in the game, but they were unbeatable. Hagerman drew a penalty for tripping, but no damage was done while he was off. Finally after ten minutes' fast going, Cherrett broke away with a nice rush, and shooting from outside Garnett, found the nets for the first counter.

A minute later Cherrett flashed down from his own end of the rink, and outskating the Lindsay forwards, took Oliver's measure again.

Frost was benched for jabbing at a Lindsay player, and a little later Garnett was chased. There was no further scoring in the period.

Frost increased the Peterborough lead early in the second period when he tore up the ice in a beautiful rush and drove a bullet-like shot under Oliver's arm into the net.

Lindsay broke into the scoring column a minute later. A neat rush took Wilford inside, and although Flowers made a fine stop the puck drifted out to Wilford again, and this time his shot was successful.

Frost drew a sentence for tripping and Kelly followed him to the boards for hooking. After this pair got back Hagerman was chased. Cherrett increased the Peterborough lead by a fine rush and a neat shot from close in that Oliver did not have a chance to stop. That made it 4 to 1.

Lindsay were not beaten yet, however. Campbell was sent away for throwing his stick, and from the scrimmage that followed the face-off, Kelly shoved the rubber into the Peterborough nets.

When Lindsay came right back with another counter, Wilford doing the trick after a combination rush, they looked more dangerous than at any other period in the game. However, Frost got away again nicely, and stick-handling inside, fooled Oliver, and the Petes were once more two goals to the good.

Girard was railroaded for tripping, and then Green dumped Park and was sent to the side. Park hurt his hip in the fall and retired for the balance of the period.

He was on again, however when the third session opened. The Petes had a royal chance early in the last period when Wilford and Kelly of the visitors were both in the penalty box, but failed to score. The teams were at full strength again when Williams raced down with Hagerman beside him. A neat pass at the right moment gave Hagerman a chance to score, and he made no mistake.

Shortly after Hagerman got away and passed to Park, whose quick shot took Oliver's measure. That made it 7 to 3 and cinched the game, although Lindsay had a chance a few minutes later when Frost and Park were both penalized and Lindsay had a 6 to 4 advantage. They did not get a chance to score.

Lindsay nailed the last goal of the game, when Wilford shot from the side and beat Flowers on a high shot that caught the top corner of the nets.

A Question for the Kickers' Club.

Let the Kickers' Club give heed to this. One of the usual discoursive conversation that occupy both the morning hour and the after-lunch siesta, that run up the scale of subjects from gay to grave and down again from sense to nonsense, one of these pleasantly wandering discussions turned to the prospects of the ladies' curling club this winter, and stopped short when some one uttered this prediction: "Mark my words, it won't be many years until we have them on the committee." The written warning or prophecy sounds noncommittal, and it is not the intention to indicate the tinge of coloring with which they were enunciated. But it may be ventured that this subject was dropped as abruptly as the sudden interruptions that put an end to comments on some member's curling or characteristics when he appears unexpectedly at the door. In this case the topic was quickly changed for any reason you wish to ascribe. Perhaps the members were lost in contemplation of the possibilities, and certainly they are intriguing.

It is conceivable that the innovation might be accomplished by quiet pressure upon the married members of the committee, and the way smoothed for feminine influx. At that it is rather selfish of the men to monopolize the management of affairs, and to relegate the ladies to morning games that largely interfere with their household duties, such as 'phoning to the grocer and butcher, and seeing that the hired help doesn't loaf. If they were admitted to the ice in the evenings, bridge and the national indoor game would be forgotten in the mental, social and physical pleasure of curling. The round table would give place to the concentric rings. You and the wife, with Al and Florrie could form one rink, for example, against the Hatches and the Jones, and if need be the sporting element could be enhanced with bets on each end instead of each hand, as in the indoor game. Or the losers could pay for the suppers or prizes for the two ladies on the wining rink. The husbands would, of course, oppose each other as leads and seconds, and the ladies, who had swept the house all day, could settle between themselves as to who should vice and who skip. The possibilities are boundless. The social side of curling would soon assume the paramount interest, and the bright lights would be softened to the pink shade that is peculiarly the aura of femininity. It would be a simple matter to transform either the assembly hall upstairs or the loft into a tea room. Neither rooms are paying for their "keep," and they have a bare, unfurnished, barracks look that is simply crying out in their neglect for a defter, softer treatment than the men have dealt them.

The Kickers' Club must take thought of the many-wintered bachelors who would shy at the fulfillment of the awful prophecy that stunned even the married men into silence and abstraction. Society has established so many inhibitions, and set up so many arbitrary barriers to intercourse that such innovations as this would meet with immediate and insuperable suspicion.

The unattached would be driven out of a last refuge with no alternative but a business or fraternal club, which has long since lost whatever attractions it first held out.

"DOC" AMYS SNIFFS GERMS

When the committee issued a membership ticket to Dr. Amy's they must have forgotten that they were admitting the city's medical officer of health. He was scarcely initiated into the art of sweeping before he had unofficially condemned the "common drinking cup", which is obviously as unsanitary in a curling rink as it may be in any place where one hundred and forty slake their thirst. In all offhand way the "oDc" intimated that the club should have a sanitary-drinking fountain, but the club may pass the buck to the holding company, and if any improvements are to be made the expenditure might be met from T. Brightman, W. G. Morrow and company.

The incident indicates that the committee can't be too careful in its reception of new members, especially these professional medical men who can see "flu" germs and legions of the other fifty-six varieties on a clean-looking, white enamelled kitchen cup that has been passing from mouth to mouth for several winters without dry-cleaning, sterilizing or other cleaning except a splash of tap water after each using, and that has never called forth anything but indirect compliments to the qualities of the city's water in such as expressions as "Gosh but I was so dry my mouth felt like a knot-hole."

Archie Barbeau Will Shepherd the Big Flock of Sheep

Winter Landscapes Etched By Jack Frost on Street Car Panes

When Jack Frost takes possession of the street cars, subduing the feeble heat from outworn or inadequate electric resistance coils tucked away under the seats, with one and the same breath he chills the marrow of the occupants while holding their gaze with wondrous etchings on the windows delineating fairy vistas of landscapes remote from the drab scenes in the passing streets. The imaginative passengers forget discomfort in the fantastic traceries framed on the panes, of hills and pallow straggling across a skyline as broken and as beautiful as any silhouette nature achieves with inimitable art.

The conductor's fare box brings you back to the commonplace, but the eye returns to those entrancing panels and leads your thoughts off to the offland they suggest. So realistic, so true the art of the unseen sketcher that you distinguish the trees as pines, and follow a rail fence down a hill and across a valley, ending at the edge of the glass. You even people the slopes with elves and catch the faint blowing of their horns. Little short fellows they are, with peaked hats pulled down over their ears, and with their beards pointed into rough Van Dykes. Pages of a long forgotten nursery book steal back to you, and you suddenly perceive that this arctic fairyland is an Eveless realm. There is no Alice in this wonderland, and yet it seemed as sufficient, when you recall it now, as did Robinson Crusoe's isle. At length your wandering in this far off country on the street car windows; that subtle flashes back pictures that were a boyhood delight, suddenly cease as you observe the reactions of other passengers to these self-same panes, on which you found a vision,

"That shut away the sordid, cruel street.
I may not enter that white paradise,
And life is real as the living know,
But I have seen it with my tired eyes,
And it has given me the strength to go
On the rough way to what I cannot see—
The end who knows the end? But peace is good.
And I have looked upon tranquility,
And seen a vision as a pilgrim should!"

A girl, a youth and a woman, alike scraped away the snow surface with an impatience to peer through the white curtain as if it were shutting out familiar sights they would not be denied or strange ones they must not miss. A small boy leaves the imprint of his lips and nose on the frost and similarly impresses his hand upon it. A maiden scratches in light letters with the tip of a gloved finger the initials E. R. and below them G. S. D., and then quickly effaces the lower symbols as if some one had read her thoughts.

The facetious passengers are in the rear vestibule, and their jibes at the rigidity of the car float in with unwholesome smells of long service pipes and tobacco that disgraces the weed. It is all so intensely human that to change any part of that brief grouping would be to rob life of elements of that variety and interest, to the bystander more priceless than pearls.

DELEGATES OFF TO BERLIN

(Canadian Press.)

LONDON, Jan. 11. — The British delegates to the Peace Conference left for Paris this morning. Premier Lloyd George, with the Premiers of the Dominions and the representatives of India, travelled by the ordinary route. Andrew Bonar Law, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, made the trip by airplane, as he invariably does when he goes to France. Premier Lloyd George's party was accompanied by an army of officials and newspaper correspondents.

Denies Charges Concerning the Scandinavian

(Special to The Examiner.)

ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan. 11.—Capt. E. Griffiths, commander of the C. P. O. S. transport Scandinavian, last evening issued a vigorous denial of the numerous complaints and accusations made by the soldiers and dependents who arrived here yesterday on board the vessel. In regard to the complaints of accommodation, sanitation and food, Captain Griffiths stated that he believed the whole trouble was based on the fact that the passengers had suffered severley as a result of six days of exceptionally stormy weather and that they were in no mood to do anything else but complain. He stated that as long as the present shortage of tonnage exists there is no other way to bring back dependents but with third-class accommodations, and it is only to be expected that such accommodation will not meet the expectations of many.

Regarding the statement that the latrines and other sections of the quarters were in a filthy condition the greater part of the day, he replied, "I really feel sorry for the poor devils who had to work day and night to keep the vessel clean. But sea sickness cannot be overcome, and when you have a crowded boat with the great majority sick for five or six days it is impossible to keep the place clean all the time. As an emergency measure we allowed the third class passengers the use of the first class passenger deck but they soon had it in a filthy condition with beer and stout bottles, fruit skins and other refuse scattered about" As regards the kicks about food the commander said he believed the stormy weather and sickness was responsible also for these.

"The one thing I noticed above all else," he said, "was that on the one day of the trip we had sunshine every person was in the best of spirits, and there were no complaints."

THREE YEARS IN PICCADILLY AND A WEEK IN FRANCE

(Blank Verse on a Blank Shame.)

(By Harris Turner.)

Down in the dirty hold I swelter,
Restlessly tossing on my bed of pain.
To right and left of me, I see the forms
Of wounded soldiers, like myself,
Coming home—coming home to Canada.
Not many month ago I stood
In front of Cambrai, and saw the German host
Melt like a pile of snow beneath the sun.
I saw a thousand comrades fall and die
For Canada, for Justice and for Right.
Great men beside me uncomplaining, died:
Nor did they grudge their going for the cause.
Some German metal fore my leg in two, and I,
Bound up in miles of snow-white cloth,
Came back to Blighty.
And now I'm going home, sweet home;
It seemed to me that once on board the boat,
The war forgotten and the tension gone,
All would be well. I pictured to myself
Great days on deck, with comrades from the war.
Filling up our lungs with the salt-laden air;
Filling our hearts with hopes of welcome home
Rank, forgotten; red tape cast aside.
But the free breezes of the restless sea
And not for me, nor for those wounded men
Whose pallid faces, upturned to the deck,
Tell misery's tale.
My thoughts distracted from the tasteless meal;
There filters to my ears from decks above,
The sound of laughter, free and unrestrained,
And Private Smith, who also caught the sound,
Turns in his hampered bunk and curses loud:
"Oh, damn them: damn them all," he groans;
"Three years in Piccadilly and a week in France,
And yet the whole accommodation of the ship
Is their's to tramp at will.
I asked the doctor when he came to-day,
If I could find a chair up on the deck,
And see the seagulls and the passing ships.
He laughed and said: 'The officers, you know, and nurses,
Must not be ruffled by the sight of men
With clumsy crutches and unsightly scars':
Oh, damn them—damn them all."
Poor Smith, I knew him long ago;
He taught a country school near Winnipeg.
He fought two years in France and licked no boots:
The man, whose laugh he heard from decks above,
Was coming home to Canada rather than Revert from his exalted rank of Major
To the low, servile rank of Captain.
Alas! does Britain's might rest on the fact
That some poor dupes were fools enough to fight?
We fought four years against the junker class
To travel homeward 'neath the kings of snobcraft.

Prices, Wages Vicious Circle

25 per cent. reduction in the price of radiators is anounced by the American Radiator Company. The management explains, however that it will not attempt any reduction in the present scale of wages. It will be content with lower profits for the time being in the hope that its policy will stimulate building operations.

Recently the United States Steel Corporation announced a similar policy. It cut prices in order to encourage peace orders for its products, but refrained from reducing wages. So long as reasonable returns were possible, the corporation deemed it sound business policy to continue the present wage scales and avoid friction and misunderstanding with labor.

Are not these instances significant and instructive? Do they not indicate the precise way to escape what has been called the vicious circle of high prices and high wages? Labor says it cannot accept wage reductions while prices remain high. Manufacturers say they cannot reduce while wages remain high. Men or affairs contemplating extensions or new enterprises say the cannot begin construction while both prices and wages maintain prohibitive levels. Manifestly, some one must make a beginning if the vicious circle is to be broken and business is to be stimulated.

If those corporations and firms that can reduce prices without sacrificing reasonable profits will hasten to do so, accepting for the time being a lower rate of return, the wholesame and necessary process of defiation will be set in motion. Labor will not object to reduction in pay if the purchasing power of the dollar is increased and the standard of living is not threatened. Actual not nominal, wages determine the wage worker's standard of living. Far sighted and broad minded corporations will wisely emulate the concerns above mentioned and reduce prices to a point that will eliminate not fair and reasonable profits, the "profiteering."

GERMAN STATES WEALTHY.

Approximately one-eighth of the total wealth of Germany is in the possession of the National and State Governments, according to an article appearing in the Weser-Zeitung of November 23, in which it is suggested that the new Socialist regime, in case is succeeds in establishing itself, has plenty of material with which to experiment without taking over more industrial and agricultural plants.

Quoting from a book by Dr. F. W. R. Zimmermann, published in Stuttgart, the writer gives the wealth of the nation before the outbreak of the world war as 350,000,000,000 marks ($83,300,000,000 at normal exchange), and then points out that the value of the land, forests, mines, railroads, steamship companies, postal and telegraph systems, etc., in the hands of the National Government and the Federal States amounts to 44,000,000,000 marks. Of this the property owned by the National Government represents 5,000,000,000 marks. The rest was distributed among the States, with Prussia and Bavaria in the lead, with 26,000,000,000 and 5,120,000,000 marks, respectively.

A county organization was formed with Mr. E. N. McDonald as president, Mr. Wallace Anderson, Vice-President, Mr. W. Barrie, Secretary.

Mr. J. J. Grady, of Indian River, was chosen as stock manager for the district of Norwood, Indian River and Havelock.

In the evening a public meeting was held in the town hall when addresses were given by both Mrs. Webster and Mr. Powers. Mrs. Webste spoke on the U.F.W.O. and the advantages of education and organization. Mr. Powers, who comes from a municipality through which the new provincial highway—known as the Kingston road—passes, spoke for a short time on the road question. He said as near as he could ascertain, the cost of construction of this new highway would be in the neighbourhood of $45,000 pet mile and that Clark Township's share would be somewhere about $125,000. In conversation with Mr. Squire, the Provincial Road Iverseer, he had asked the question, upon what basis the tax on automobiles was levied and his answer was, "You ought to be able to answer that question yourself." He then inquired if it was not based on the horsepower of the car and an estimated damage to the road. He then asked why the Government took their money and returned only 20, 40 or 60 per cent of it.

Later, Mr. Powers dealt with the U.F.O. movement and the establishment of a farmers' paper. The first issue he expected would make its appearance very shortly. It would be issued weekly for a time and later they hoped to supply a farmers' daily paper.

A branch of the ladies organization was formed with Mrs. Thos. J. Buck as President, Mrs. C. Johnson, Vice-President; Mrs. James Long, Secretary, and Mrs. John Rorabeck, Treasurer. The directors will be chosen at a later meeting.

WHAT FRENCH LABOUR ASKS.

Minimum Wage Law Among Demands for Premier's Consideration.

PARIS, Jan. 9. — One of Premier Clemenceau's early appointments is with a delegation of the Council of General Workers. This delegation saw the Premier just before he went on his holiday in the south of France. He received them cordially, but they had no written programme. He told them to see him later after having reduced their proposals to writing.

These proposals, now prepared, cover four main points. The workers will ask for a minimum wage law for France; a limited working day, probably of eight hours; protection against the lowering of wages and the standard of living, which French labour fears may come from foreign labour being brought into the country unless there are safeguards against it. There is no objection to foreign labour coming in, especially from Italy, because the French workmen realize the absolute necessity of it in conditions existing after the war, with French power so depleted. But they want assurance that employers will not be able to take advantage of the situation to reduce wages.

The delegation of workers will also ask the Premier that their leaders be consulted at the Peace Conference on all questions affecting labour.

M. Clemenceau is ready to receive these proposals and to give them sympathetic consideration.

EXPRESS COMPANIES PLEAD FOR INCREASE

Higher Rates Absolutely Necessary to Pay Expenses, Urges Official.

OTTAWA, Jan. 9.—The hearing of the application of the Express Traffic Association of Canada, for permission to introduce an increased tariff was resumed before the Board of Railway Commissioners yesterday afternoon.

The chief witness heard stated that he had been largely responsible for the detailed statement upon which the claim for authorization of the increased rates, was to a great extent, based. His figures, he informed the counsel, would show that additional and increased revenue was absolutely necessary if the company was to pay expenses. Under the new rates, each class of express traffic preferential otherwise, would have to bear its proportionate share.

Witness affirmed that the minimum rate for 100 pounds was so low as to be ridiculous when one considered the conditions governing short haul traffic and the corresponding rate in the United States. It was felt that although, in some cases, the American and Canadian rates per cwt. were about the same, the rates in Canada should be much higher, because of conditions existing— particularly regarding the vast difference in density of population.

In the matter of zones or territories, counsel for the express companies stated that any suggestion or agreement by the Board would be acceptable, providing that the asked increase was granted.

But for indigestion and dyspepsia, many a life might be a pleasant one.

The misery which stomach troubles cause the sufferer knows only too well and any one who has suffered knows what joy it would give to be able to eat three good meals a day and not be punished for it after.

Nearly everything that enters a weak stomach acts as an irritant, and even the little that is eaten causes such torture and is digested so imperfectly that it does little good.

Before you can eat heartily, and not pick and choose your food, you must put your stomach right so that it will manufacture its own digestive ferments.

For forty years now Burdock Blood Bitters has been making weak stomachs strong, and permanently curing severe cases of indigestion and dyspepsia that other remedies were powerless to reach.

Mr. H. L. Fairweather, Cumberland Bay, N. B., writes:—"I was troubled with my stomach for two years, and sometimes was so bad I thought I would die. I tried everything I ever heard tell of, and had medicine from three doctors, but continued to grow worse. One day I read of some wonderful cures made with Burdock Blood Bitters. After taking two bottles I could eat any kind of food without any bad effects and by the time I had taken four I was in perfet health."

Ruth's Aunt Meets Arthur Mandel

CHAPTER LXXXV

Arthur Mandel had looked into Ruth Hackett's eyes and had divined something not quite happy in their depths. It troubled, while in a way it encouraged him to believe the time might come more quickly than he had dared hope when he could call her his own.

Now as he sat opposite her at luncheon, he was sure he had read her aright. Something had caused that haunting look of unhappiness in her eyes. Had he been still more keenly alive to her moods, he would have noticed that it followed some reference to either her husband, or some man who was in the same profession, and who was making a success.

The luncheon was perfect, and perfectly served. Mrs. Clayborne beamed. She was delighted with this employer of Ruth's. He was the sort of man she understood; and of whom she approved. As the meal progressed she became more positive that she had been right; that Mandel was in love with Ruth. At the same time she discovered that Ruth herself was totally unconscious of it.

"Clever man!" she said to herself. And he rose still higher in her estimation.

Mrs. Clayborne was a clever, intelligent woman. She knew that it took tact and patience for a man to be day after day, in the company of the woman with whom he was in love, and keep it from her.

"Yes, I'll make quite a stay," she decided, just as Mr. Mandel said:

"I hope you intend to remain with Mrs. Hackett some time, Mrs. Clayborne? "And that I shall have the pleasure of helping to entertain you." He had sensed this woman's liking for him at once. The good impression he had made. It would be easy to turn it to his advantage with Ruth, did she remain long enough.

"I shall be here some little time," she replied, to Ruth's astonishment. (she had said nothing about making a long visit, and had brought very little baggage.) This she went on to explain: "I am in need of many things. I shall replenish my wardrobe while here. I brought very little with that end in view."

"You will wish Mrs. Hackett to shop with you." Then he turned to Ruth. "Whenever Mrs. Clayborne wishes, please feel entirely free to accompany her on her shopping excursions."

"That is more than kind," Mrs. Clayborne returned, "But I shall not require Ruth to neglect her work for me. I have bought my clothes in New York many years. I shall have no trouble outfitting myself alone." She would not be the means of taking Ruth away from this man, even to help her shop.

Mrs. Clayborne was a good woman, but a worldly one. She had realized something was not quite right with Ruth and Brian, and had immediately jumped to the conclusion that it was money—that Ruth had worked because Brian could not provide for her; and that her love for the work was only a pose to excuse his deficiency.

That Ruth really loved her work—that she preferred to do it, even though she had not felt it necessary, would not have seemed reasonable to her aunt. She had not understood things, very well, when so far away. She still felt it was beneath Ruth to work, yet if she must, there was no place she could be where she would be treated as she was by Arthur Mandel.

Their luncheon finished, Mandel sent them home in a cab, after asking if he might send them tickets for the opera on Monday night. If they were free to go. They accepted with delight. Mrs. Clayborne thanking him effusively.

"Your employer is a very fascinating man," she said to Ruth when they reached home.

"He is a very kind man," Ruth replied. And, noting her tone, Mrs. Clayborne once more realized that Ruth was entirely unconscious of the way Mandel felt toward her.

"How can she be so blind?" she asked herself. She did not quite understand that her love for Brian, blinded Ruth to what, had she not been so intrigued, would have been plain to her.

"You are very lucky to work in such a place—if you are still determined to work."

"I don't think I could give up my work, be idle, Auntie, even though Brian should make our fortunes. I love my work. Women are doing things nowadays, Auntie! many things that used to be only done by men. They are doing them well, too. I don't see why we shouldn't, or why we should be expected to be parlour ornaments or kiechen drudges—one or the other—all our lives. Don't be, and look, so shocked. I didn't feel so at first. But work, if one loves it, grows interesting just as other thinks that appeal to one's interest. And to work among beautiful stuffs, in such delightful surroundings, is a delight. Of course I get tired. But so I would doing anything else. Yes, Aunt Louisa, I shall keep on working—always, I think."

Tomorrow—Mrs. Clayborne Decides To Prolong Her Visit.

A THOUGHT FOR BOYS

We do not see much written about poor, wild reckless boys, who deserve the sympathy, tears and prayers of every Christian woman and man. There is a period in the life of a boy when, if he makes a mistake, people or some classes, at least, are apt to magnify the same, and having the tact of being more critical than correct, the matter is announced to all the world, or to that portion in which the culprit dwells. That most angelic christian grace, Charity, fails to come to the trembling balance and weigh the burden upon the side of mercy, and so the boy is hooted and reviled as he goes "slipping down the ladder rung by rung," till he is eventually lost to love and trust. There is not a good christian women on earth who cannot do good if she will only speak kindly and encouragingly to those wild boys and try to draw them into something that is good and noble. Make them realize that they have one true and sympathetic friend at least; one that will assist and defend in their darkest hours. Select some wild boy, give him good advice, lend him good books, arouse the spirit of true manhood and try to impress upon his mind that "It is not all of life to live,

Nor all of death to die."

He was wise who wrote: "Half the sting of poverty or of small means is gone when one keeps house for one's own comfort, and not for the comment of one's own neighbours." Deny it as we will, few of us have the moral force to set up a standard of our own particular home environments. We commit the folly of regulating our expenses by the income of some one else. If the Browns across the street hang up expensive lace curtains, we are discontented until lace curtains have gone up to our windows, no matter how much smaller our income may be than that of the Browns. If the Smiths put down a velvet carpet our net and pretty ingrain become an eye sore to us. We are extremely mindful of what our neighbours will think about many things that should not concern them in the least. We have no standard of our own. Our dress and even our tables must be regulated by the standard of others We have not the courage nor the independence to be indifferent to the comment of our neighbours. This form of moralcowardice is causing many families to live beyond their incomes.

"Christmas Eve!" The wondrous Santa Claus come to the children with thee. What visions of dolls, games, books, candies, and all sorts of goodies; drums, trumpets, whistles, with all sorts of squeaks and discordant blasts ;and the wonderful Christmas tree with its brilliant lights, gay colors, and mysterious packages, some of which may contain the long-wished-for skates or huge jack-knives, It is all enchantment, all the color of the rose, the rainbow that spans their young lives. Not all the agony in the manger, all the wonder of the story of the Star of Bethlehem, of the following and guiding of the wise men to the lowly cradle of the coming King; not all the sad beauty of the old, old story can fully satisfy the juvenile hearts like these. But are we not children of a larger growth? In spite of the solemnity of the occasion, in spite of its deep and tender meaning, the gifts and goodies and merrymaking are all dear to us, children in heart as we are.

How time flies! Hear we are again with our cheery greeting! Happy New Year!

Soldiers Home THE SALVATION ARMY Coming Campaign

The Boys Have Done Their Part

The boys have won a great Victory. Their banners are crowned with glory. But they won't all be home for many weary months yet—perhaps 1920 will see some of them still waiting and longing——

We must see this thing through to a finish—just as they are doing. "Till the boys (all the boys) come home"—that was your pledge, and while there is a Canadian garrison on duty in Germany or elsewhere; a Canadian company in Paris, Boulogne, London, Liverpool, or anywhere else, waiting for transport, Canadian troops landing in Halifax, St. John, or Montreal; or returned soldiers waiting to start civilian life again—THERE THE SALVATION ARMY LASSIE MUST BE.

The Salvation Army Million Dollar Fund

January 19th to 25th

"FIRST TO SERVE—LAST TO APPEAL"

Think what might happen to your boys with military discipline relaxed and no Salvation Army to furnish the fun and a song, to bake pies, fry the eternal eggs, mend clothes, provide a place to write to you, steer the boys out of graver dangers than German shells, and mother them in the hundred and one ways every man needs and never misses until he is away from his women folks.

Repatriation

Then think how vitally necessary it is that the Salvation Army should keep open the doors of its Hostels—yes, and open MORE Hostels—right here in Canada, for the returned soldier, from the moment he lands until he has settled down to civilian life again. Assure our boys Hostel comfort in Halifax, St. John, Quebec, Montreal, Kingston, Toronto, London, Chatham, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

The Hostels are soldiers' hotels where the men can find a hearty, wholesome welcome, find good entertainment, home cooking, clean beds, and a bath;—all at prices they can afford to pay.

If they haven't the Hostels, where will they go? THAT is the problem. It is for you to answer by your whole-hearted help!

Remember how the boys went away with your promise ringing in their ears: "We'll keep the home fires burning till the boys come home." And we WILL too,—till the last boy is home and settled down.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Four Ethels

By LURA LEE

"You see, it is a matter of four Ethels," spoke she of that name. Miss Hoyt, "and, all attendants at the same seminary, we naturally flocked together. In fact we formed a little circle of our own and now, after happy school days gone forever, we still keep in close contact. The four of us would have been here today instead of only three, had it not been that one of the quartet had married since our last reunion."

"You mean my sister," spoke Rodney Bayrd. "She told me to tell you she was very happy."

"Of course, we are glad of that," continued Ethel Hoyt, "and there is a compensation in your sister sending two desirable envoys to help us put through two weeks of our summering —yourself and Mr. Dale. Did your sister tell you that I was to take charge of you?"

"I hope so," replied Rodney, returning with interest the mischievous glance of his young hostess. "It seems quite delightful to feel that a fellow has a guardian angel, you know."

"Chaperon, scold and busybody—that more applies," declared Miss Hoyt. "I always was the practical one of the quartet. Now there is your sister, the glowing radiance of ethereal loveliness. Ethel Ward is all music. Ethel Morse is literary."

"That will suit Warren Dale," said Rodney. "He dotes on poetry and that stuff."

"Stuff! the word is horrid. Yes, I shall encourage Miss Morse and Mr. Dale. As to yourself, your sister told me to see if I couldn't send you back with something in life to interest you outside of fishing and tennis."

"You are likely to do so," advised Rodney, and the bantering raillery momentarily subsided. For the moment Miss Hoyt wondered if she had met her match, but she continued.

"So you are awarded Miss Ward."

"But I don't care for music," he insisted.

"What is your predilection, then?" questioned Miss Hoyt.

"Nature," announced Warren, with absurd emphasis. "Give me a girl—I mean companion—pal—"

"Shocking! Girls can't be pals," avowed Miss Hoyt in a horrified wa

"Oh, yes, they can," persisted Warren.

A charming girl and a clever tactician, so Ethel Hoyt settled the matter. The two intelligent, courteous young men accepted the ruling.

"I'm through!" Dale observed at the end of a week in a tone purposely made desperate.

"You mean—"

"Miss Ethel Morse, wity, with her lacksadisical ways, her practical quotations and sense of total proprietorship of your humble servant, I shall go rank stark mad if I do not escape.

"Your younger sister, Florence, wanted to have me go out into the world and try myself out with other atoms of loveliness."

"My sister Florence?" repeated Rodney surprisedly. "So you are interested in that direction. Are you two engaged?"

"We will be if she will consent," replied Warren decisively. "I'm going back purposely to find out."

"And leave me to the mercies of Miss Ethel Ward's sonatas and operatic experiments?" groaned Rodney. "False friend! heartless and reprobate traitor!"

There was only a week left of the vacation, however, and because he would be near Miss Hoyt Rodney determined to endure the ordeal. One day the two other Ethels were absent at a musicale and he passed three whole delightful hours with Ethel Hoyt. The very last day of his sojourn Rodney wandered disconsolately down the river shore.

He sat on a boulder and aimlessly switched the bushes with his cane. Then he began tracing a name in the smooth sand, "E-T-H-E-L."

Ten feet up, entirely by chance or mischance, his charming hostess had bestowed herself in a bushy nook with a magazine. She had analyzed a certain gloom on the face of the young man which interested her. Then as he traced that name her eyes brightened with suspense. Was he about to write the name of his heart's choice? She bent dangerously past the limit of safety and eagerly followed the further tracings of the cane. Then she gasped and crimsoned, for the completed chronicle read "E-T-H-E-L H-O-Y-T."

A sudden cry startled Rodney and he sprang to his feet, alert. Miss Hoyt had leaned too far over. Her dropping form parted the vines and he caught her in his arms. Her face was tell-tale and his soul awoke.

"If I dared, I would hold you here forever!" he whispered. "It wouldn't be half as audacious as what I am going to say to you. Miss Hoyt, I love you, and I could not go away until I had told you so."

She was all a-flutter, but smiling. His clear glance, his earnest words deserved recognition, and she awarded it.

"Yesterday I half guessed it," she said, though with drooping eyes. "This morning, when I realized that you were going away, I hoped it. Now, I am glad it is so."

She swayed towards him slightly, her eyes fixed on the name written in the sand. His arm stole about her and life seemed complete.

Was Pulled Through

THE TRYING TIME

IN A WOMAN'S LIFE

Mrs. H. Membury, 325 Seaton St., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have used Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and found them to be of great benefit to me, in fact, I consider they saved my life, and I have told many of my neighbours about them.

Two years ago last November I was in poor health. The doctor said it was change of life, as I was over forty years old, and that I would have to be very careful of myself. Shortly after that I received an awful shock that nearly killed me. The doctor my husband sent for said I would soon be all right, and sent up some medicine, but it only seemed to increase the trouble. I was then taken to the hospital. The doctors examined me, but could not understand my case.

Then they sent for a specialist, as they began to think it was my mind.

When the specialist came he was baffled, for I answered his questions all right. Every day I was getting weaker, and when my husband came he could see that I was going, as I could read his thoughts, but said nothing.

Next day a friend came with a cab and took me to their home. They got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I started taking them and began to get better, and at the end of two weeks, I could walk around the room. I am now well and able to do my own work."

KEEP URIC ACID OUT OF JOINTS

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Eat Less Meat and Take Salts.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat, but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which helps overcome uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

Broom Corn In the Argentina.

In Argentina the cultivation of maiz de Guinea, or broom corn, is conducted along simple lines not differing much from that of ordinary corn. The broom corn is frequently sown after the wheat, flax or oats crop on the property has been harvested, and if there is abundant rain and if the frosts are late a good yield may be obtained, thus giving two harvests in the same year from a single piece of ground.

The cost of production of broom corn in Argentina is calculated more or less at 163 paper pesos per hectare, on the following basis:—Rental of land, 30 pesos (the Argentine paper peso is equivalent to about $0.4475 Canadian currency, at present); preparation of ground and sowing, 18 pesos; seed (10 kilos), 0.30 pesos; cultivation, etc., 25 pesos; harvesting and bags, 90 pesos; total, 163.3 pesos.

The returns per hectare average 280 pesos, made up of 220 bunches of corn at 1 peso each and 20 fanegas (about 2 tons) of seed at 3 pesos per fanega. This gives a net profit of 116.7 pesos per hectare (2.47 acres) of land cultivated.

The 1918 crop of broom corn was quoted at 0.90 to 1.20 pesos the vara or bunch, a bunch measuring in circumference 1 vara or about 33 inches. Seed was quoted at 3 pesos (about 220 pounds).

Argentina's exports of broom corn have increased rapidly during the last few years. In 1913, 409,454 kilos (kilo equals 2.2046 pounds) were exported; in 1914, 512,703 kilos; in 1915, 762,601 kilos; in 1916, 1,012,961 kilos, and in 1917, 3,235,202 kilos.

Brazil has been the most extensive buyer of Argentina broom corn, although during 1917 it is probable that at least one-third of the amount exported went to the United States.

Lawmaking Bodies.

Any legislative or lawmaker body may be called a congress or parliament, but different countries have different names. France has a national assembly, with two houses, called Senate and Chamber of Deputies; Germany has an upper and a lower house, Bundesrath and Reichstag; Belgium has Senate and Chamber of Representatives; Spain has a cortes with two houses, Senate and Congress; Denmark has a rigsdag with upper house called Landthing and lower house Folkething; Italy a parliament with Senate and Camera di Deputati, or Chamber of Deputies; Sweden a diet, with first chamber and second chamber. All the South American republics, being modeled on the government of the United States, have a congress composed of two bodies, Senate and Chamber of Deputies.

War Nurses.

"War nurses," said Dr. Alexis Carrel, in an interview on the western front, "differ amazingly in their touch. The touch of one war nurse will be unsympathetic, hard, almost rough, while that of another will be positively soothing. A nurse of the former kind was dressing a soldier's wound one day. The soldier squirmed and grimaced and the nurse said to him reproachfully, 'Why, where's your fortitude?' 'Fortitude?' grumbled the doughboy. 'I tell you what it is, miss—fortitude or sixtitude couldn't stand your handling.'"

Fogs.

Official records show that fogs are more frequent on the coasts of Maine and New Hampshire than anywhere else in the United States.

The Art of Deduction.

"And when does the wedding take place, Miss Blank?" asked the genial proprietor of the little stationery shop. "The wedding!" exclaimed the young woman, blushing. "Why, you don't think—" "Ah, Miss Blank!" rejoined the old bookseller. "When a young lady buys a hundred sheets of paper and only twenty-five envelopes I know there's something in the wind!"

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS WITH ECZEMA.

After the third of fourth application of this grand Ointment I obtained relief and a few boxes were sufficient to make a thorough cure

LATEST IN STAR GAZING.

New and Simple Method by Which Asteroids Are Discovered.

An apparatus has been invented and is now in regular use that will actually discover any new stars that may appear in the sky. The ordinary method of discovering new comets, new stars and the tiny planets called asteroids is by careful observation based upon a thorough knowledge of the stars, but the new method, which so far is only being used to discover asteroids, is so easy that a person who did not know one from another could make the discoveries.

A telescope is pointed to a section of the sky, and then, from the stock of negatives of old photographs of the heavens that every observatory collects, a negative covering the same section is selected. This negative is placed under a lens, and behind the negative is placed a green light. In looking through the lens one can discern the tiny points of green light which represent each star.

The observer then looks through the telescope with one eye and through the lens at the negative with the other eye.

Careful adjustments will soon bring the two images into perfect register, as the printers say. Every familiar star seen through the telescope doubles up with its picture on the photographic negative and thus has a greenish light. But if on that night in that section of the sky an asteroid appears it will not be present on the old negative, and so to the observer it will appear in its normal reddish or yellowish color, while every other star appears green. A glance through the combined apparatus will show whether or not there is an asteroid in the field of the telescope that night.—Saturday Evening Post.

An Edged Tool.

In most reviews and musical comedies a young couple meet in some hotel garden, "fall in love," and are married in the last act. Charge me not with lack of humor if I suggest that many marriages are so made. In my note-books are several confessions. Among them is that of a young girl who pledged her hand on board a liner because there was nothing else to do. (She was wrong; she could have jumped overboard.) People do marry as casually as they learn to play golf; but they take more pains with golf. In that negligence hides the nightmare that shall haunt them; they blunder into marriage; they think to conduct it without travail or diplomacy into the detachment of mature years. Therein they go astray, for marriage is a tool with many edges, and none shall use it with impunity that treat it without regard. For it may close as many doors as it can open.

That marriage can close doors, none should deny, and it is folly to overlook its limitations, notably those which bear on individual freedom. No skill or tolerance can make of marriage a state akin to celibacy, and it is well to agree that the married are not free people in the sense of the unwed; this is not a reflection on the conjugal condition, for freedom is a word, and Silvio Pellico in the Spielberg found wings for his spirit that no Austrian peasant could fasten to his shoulders. To be free is sometimes to be derelict, and as in marriage such dereliction seldom arises, the loss is undamning to the state. But the married must, after the ceremony, realize "that they have this day lit a candle which cannot be put out"; accepting a new condition, they must be ever ready to adopt new manners, which is not easy when creatures are adult, differently bred and nurtured, perhaps rooted out of dissimilar social strata, even brought together across continents. They must abandon the idea that they may, unchecked, change their dwelling, their occupation, the circle of their friendships; all these things they may still do, but only in consultation. Or if they do not consult, if one imposes upon the other his will or the thrall of a nagging tongue, then shall victory turn as dust and ashes in his mouth.—W. L. George in Harper's Magazine.

Cabbage must be cooked quickly in fast boiling water.

Brave Children.

"I thought I had told you everything," says Mrs. Jane R. Lucas in her book called "The Children of France." "I haven't. To-day at 11 was almost the most thrilling moment of all at Evian. Six hundred and eighty Belgian children arrived on the morning train. Two-thirds of them had been taken from their parents because their fathers would not work for the Germans. Those poor children, thin, sickly looking, alone, calling 'Vive la France,' then 'Vive la Belgique,' for the first time in three years! How they ate! They just stuffed that good dinner. I shall never forget their hands, little bird-like claws, so thin, and when they sang they waved those pathetic little hands. Such a column of song as came from them: 'Le roi, la loi, la liberte!' No one could bear it; the French, the Americans, the Belgian officials who had come to receive them, all stood with tears on their faces."

Denotes Privilege Title.

"Von" before a name in German denotes a privilege title, either inherited or bestowed by a monarch upon his subject for meritorious services. While formerly this prefix was found in military or feudal families only, many commoners, captains of industry, scientists, financiers and artists were so honored by their monarchs. The title is either hereditary or ceases with the death of the distinguished person.

Children Love Cascarets—10c

Your child is bilious, constipated and sick. Its little tongue is coated, breath is bad and stomach sour. Get a 10-cent box of Cascarets and straighten the youngster right up. Children love this harmless candy cathartic and it cleanses the little liver and thirty feet of bowels without griping. Cascarets contain no calomel and can be depended upon to move the sour bile and poison right out of the bowels. Best family cathartic because it never cramps or sickens like other things.

His Regret.

They were going along the public highway at a leisurely rate of forty miles per hour when a decrepit hen and rooster started to do the chicken specialty—cross the road.

The front and hind wheels on the right side struck the poor, old, stiff jointed rooster amidships, and with one squawk he succumbed.

Immediately the man at the steering wheel started to slow down and to look about for a place to turn.

His solicitous wife turned to her seat mate and said:

"Isn't that just like his tender heart? He won't be satisfied unless he goes back and settles for that rooster. He just can't bear to feel he has injured any one or anything."

Then, louder, to her husband she said:

"George, remember that appointment. We haven't any time to go back for anything."

Glancing at the clock near his feet and at the speedometer near by, he sighed and said:

"You're right, Jeanie, but I just know if I had turned back I could have killed that old hen just as easy as I did the rooster!"—Exchange.

OREGON FARMER GAINS 28 POUNDS

"I Simply Feel Like a New Man," Says Beaverton After Taking Tanlac.

"To look at me now you'd hardly think that just a little while ago my life was despaired of and I was told to make my plans accordingly; but Tanlac has fixed me up so I am out in the fields every day forking hay, and that's a strong man's job I can tell you."

This remarkable statement was made the other day by William Welch, a well-known farmer who has lived all his life about a mile north-east of Beaverton, Oregon, on Route 4, Box 51, in telling of his wonderful recovery through the use of Tanlac.

"I have always enjoyed pretty good health up to the first of last March," he continued, "when something seemed to go wrong and I got into such a rundown condition that I fell off from a hundred and fifty-five to a hundred and thirty-two pounds, a loss of twenty-three pounds. I was terribly weak, and my heart would beat and thump so fast that I could hardly rest at night. I had to be very careful about what I would eat, and for three months I lived on the very lightest kind of diet. My skin had a yellowish, sallow look like I didn't have any any blood in my veins, and I wasn't able to do a lick of work on my farm. I got mighty discouraged, for none of the medicines I took did me any good, and I really thought my time had come.

"I was in this awful fix when I read about the wonderful way Tanlac was helping others, so I got a bottle. Well, I began to feel better soon after starting on it and kept on improving right along as I kept on taking it. I have just finished my second bottle, and I have not only gotten back all my weight but am actually five pounds heavier than I was before I was sick at all, that is, I have gained twenty-eight pounds since I began taking Tanlac. I don't have a bit of trouble now and simply feel like a new man."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

WORDS OF THE KAISER

CHARACTER OF MAN FOUND IN WAR SPEECHES.

Fiend Who Drenched World With Blood Spoke With Boastfulness and Sentimentality. Though His Tone Altered Gradually as the Teutons Went Down to Inevitable Defeat—Can Be Judged Out of His Own Mouth.

IN a court of law the internal evidence takes precedence over the external. Now, when the Kaiser is awaiting trial before the world court, a short preliminary survey of his own utterances will give a line on the character and motives of the accused. For the present purposes we need not go beyond August, 1914, though his previous expressions are, to say the least, more picturesque. It was long before the war that he said: "In Germany there is but one master, and that is I." "Whoever opposes my will, him I will break." "We Hohenzollerns derive our power by the direct imposition of divine authority"; and others of the celebrated sword-rattling adjurations now as obsolete as the crossbow and the catapult.

Last June a Cologne publishing house announced two fat volumes devoted exclusively to his messages and speeches in the previous three years and a half. Not all of these are known here, but enough has come out of Germany to furnish a basis for this examination.

In the main, one discovers in these utterances two dominant thoughts: confidence in ultimate victory under the protection of "our old God," and grief over the devastation caused by a "ruthless foe."

Another characteristic is to be noted in the progress of these utterances. As the years advanced a gradual lessening of martial splendor appeared in the war-like appeal which finally reached a diminuendo. At the same time "the grief that lies on my heart" swelled over up and up until in September, 1918, in his letter to the mayors of the Rhine cities, he broke into a veritable crescendo of crocodile tears as he lamented "the despoiling of the fair fields of France which she has wantonly forced us to visit upon her."

On Aug. 30, 1914, he addressed the troops in Belgium. "Take Paris or die" was his ultimatum.

Early in 1915 he addressed his troops in Lorraine, saying: "We will be grateful to God that we have thus far the honor of being the instruments in the divine judgment which has come upon our enemies. Let the decision fall as it will. The hewing will proceed further until our adversaries have had enough."

Later that summer he spoke in Alsace, as reported in the Cologne Gazette, concluding with, "the old God of Battles directed. We were his instruments and were proud of it."

A year later he was even more boastful. On Oct. 26, 1916, he said to his soldiers on the Somme: "The world's history knows no parallel to the greatness of your deeds. For centuries these battles of the Somme will stand as a blazing model for the conquering will of a united people. In you the German will finds expression under whatever circumstances to prevent the enemy from prostrating us to the ground, and to stand firm against French insolence and British stubbornness. Even though it endures long and continues hard the Lord of Hosts is with you. Those at home have besought him and he has inspired you with strength and courage."

Yet, only a week later, on Oct. 31, he addressed his then Chancellor, Bethmann Hollweg, saying: "My dear Bethmann: I have since been turning our conversation over thoroughly in my mind. It is clear that the peoples in the enemy countries who are kept in hard endurance of the war by lies and frauds and deluded by fighting and hatred possess no men who are able or who have the moral courage to speak the word which will bring relief—to propose peace.

"What is wanted is a moral deed to free the world, including neutrals, from the pressure which weighs upon us all. For such a deed it is necessary to find a ruler who has the conscience, who feels that he is responsible to God, who has a heart for his own people and for those who are his enemies, who is indifferent to any possible wilful misinterpretation of his act, and possesses the will to free the world from its sufferings.

"I have the courage. Trusting in God I shall dare to take this step. Please draft notes on these lines and submit them to me, and make all necessary arrangements without delay."

On Aug. 1, 1915, he said in a manifesto from Grand Headquarters: "One year has elapsed since I was obliged to call to arms the German people. An unprecedented time of bloodshed has befallen Europe and the world. Before God and history my conscience is clear. I did not will the war. Full of gratitude we can say to-day that God was with us. The enemy armies who boasted that they could enter Berlin within a few months are driven far back east and west."

It was not long before he resumed weeping (publicly) for France. On Oct. 12, 1915, he said to a Socialist member of the Reichstag: "France has been the greatest disappointment of my life and I am sincerely sorry for her because she is destined to ruin. The French method of warfare is one of a terrifying nature, brutal and inhuman, the genius of which will only be known after the war." This deputy said that the Emperor cried when he declared that France was condemned to death.

On April 22, 1916, the Kaiser received a deputation of Socialists and assured them that he sympathized with their aims.

"Germany is the leading Socialist state," he said to them. "France has had Socialist Ministers who did nothing to advance socialistic legislation while official Germany quietly nationalized the railways, passed all insurance schemes and factory laws and interfered on behalf of the interests of the working class. It has now practically nationalized industry. Nothing remains to be settled between the Government and the Socialists except the question of the possession of power, and if the Socialists had a majority in the Reichstag or could create one with the aid of other parties nobody could prevent them from getting a measure of administrative power." There is a note of prophecy in this utterance of thirty months ago!

On April 7, 1917, the Kaiser coined his delectable phrase, "the people's kingdom of the Hohenzollerns," though he said "a far-reaching change of the Constitution must be postponed in the highest interests of the Fatherland until the time of the home-coming of our armies and when they themselves are able to join in the counsel and the voting on the new order."

On Oct. 18, 1917, he was again assertive. "So M. Painleve wants Alsace-Lorraine, does he? Good, but he must come and take it!"

The following day he telegraphed a federation of German unions: "The Fatherland is proud of its young and old warriors. They will stand against all hostile attacks and criminal attempts to introduce disunion into the ranks of the German people in arms, indissolubly bound to their ancestral purpose."

Beginning with the present year, the tone of assurance noticeably dropped. On March 10, 1918, he addressed the Prussian upper house, saying: "Even if the road to a general peace is a long one, a good beginning has been made, and I confidently trust that our victorious sword and steadfast unity in this serious work will soon bring us within sight of the goal, which will give us the great peace. God grant it!"

On March 29, after the great German drive in France had begun, he wired Hindenburg: "The army will not relax until, with God's help, it has won for the homeland the good victory which it needs as the foundation for a future based upon a strong German peace."

A few days later he said to a German author: "The German sword will regain us the respect of the world. In France the detestable word 'boche' is getting ever rarer. Things will become different. The sword makes us respected."

On May 15, 1918, he addressed the town council of Aix-la-Chapelle, and here again his "grief" for France became vocal.

"I inspected half a devastated France," he said. "There, gentlemen, one obtains the right impression of the awful state that has been spared the Fatherland. Whoever should grow faint-hearted ought to come to the front and see the devastation. Then he would cease to lament his fate and be satisfied with his lot and bear patiently the hardships and privations of war's horrors.

"Our opponents have had a bad time. They deserved nothing else. Our task in the west will be accomplished, but we must be patient. We cannot settle in a day armies of millions."

A little before that, in a speech to the Second Army, the boastfulness came out when he said: "The most gigantic feat ever accomplished by an army, and one without parallel in history, has been accomplished by the German army. I do not boast. It is a fact and nothing else. Nothing can in any way place in the shade or surpass what you have accomplished, however great and overwhelming it may be. We do not know what is still in store for us, but you have seen how, in the four years of war, God's hand has visibly prevailed, punished treachery and rewarded heroic persistence."

In a telegram to the Sultan on Nov. 6, 1917, he said: "May our armies soon bring peace—our only aim in this righteous fight."

As the German drive commenced last March, he sent a message to the Schleswig-Holstein Provincial Council, saying: "We are at the decisive moment of the war and one of the greatest moments in German history." By August the beat he hoped for, as he expressed it in a telegram to the Austrian Emperor, was "a good peace."

At the same time he addressed the German army and navy, on Aug. 1, 1918, with this not overconfident message: "The fourth year of the war has brought us peace in the east. In the west the enemy has been heavily hit by the force of your assault. The battles won in recent months count among the highest deeds of fame in German history. You are in the midst of the hardest struggle. The desperate efforts of the enemy will, as hitherto, be foiled by your bravery. Of that I am certain, and, with me, the entire Fatherland."

Ten weeks later there was a deep note of desperation in his speech when he addressed his soldiers in Alsace, saying: "Neither the French nor the Americans will break through our front in Alsace-Lorraine. We shall defend with the last drop of our blood these provinces which belong to us, and which the Almighty has intrusted us to administer as His stewards. We are under divine protection."

That was on Oct. 8. Within thirty days the Kaiser had abdicated.

The turpentine used in Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is not the ordinary commercial article, which is little used because of the unpleasantness of taste, but is specially extracted from tamarac and spruce gum and so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be at the same time pleasant to use and wonderfully effective in the cure of affections of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs

A Palace Amid the Peaks

(1) Banff Springs Hotel. (2) The swimming pool at Banff Springs Hotel

THIRTY-FIVE years in three and a half decades and a great deal might happen during that time. In fact, one might grow from a toothless, mumbling family pride into a white hope and a nation's pride, or one might grow from a white hope or a nation's pride into a toothless, mumbling civic burden. No matter what happens there are always changes, the few things remaining unaltered being the mountains, the ocean, the deep blue sky. Forests wither and burn and draw in their borders, fences and grain fields are now where the wild lands rolled, towns and cities flourish where the antelope and the mule-deer used fearlessly to slake their thirst.

Mountains, having the broader perspective, see the greatest changes, and and the mountains of Banff could tell much if they would talk. Forty years ago they looked down on the primeval forests of their lower slopes and valleys, traversed sometimes by red men, sometimes by pioneer whites. Thirty-five years ago they saw the C. P. R. gangs stretching the first steel threads which binds the Pacific to the Atlantic and have opened the land for the coming millions. The white men lived in the open, in tents, in dugouts and log cabins, they ate of the rudest fare, and they hewed a way for the following hordes who brought with every new contingent, new comforts and new developments.

Up on the slopes of Sulphur Mountain the sulphur springs had rippled, and smoked and steamed for centuries, known only to the wild animals and natives, but when the railway steel was put down white men came and saw the commercial possibilities of the medicinal waters. One of these earliest pioneers decided to be forehanded and obtain possession. On the northeast side of Sulphur Mountain, where the sulphur bubbled and a wondrous cave of gloomy pools and stalactites promised attractions for future tourists he erected a small log hut and placarded it with a roughly planed board branded "hotel" in letters of charcoal. Consequently, while waiting for the rush of tourists he fed and bathed stray railroaders, trappers, guides and prospectors. He was a free and easy landlord, if there was room on his floor they could sleep under his roof, if there was flour in the sack and bacon on the nail they could eat. They paid what they thought was right. This was the first hotel in Banff park.

The government, realizing for the first time the great possibilities of the mountains, streams, and medicinal springs of Banff decided that it should be reserved as a national playground and health resort for all Canada and the world. The squatter who had hoped to retain the medicinal springs for his own profit, was consequently bitterly disappointed. He took up other work and the "hotel" drooped in decay. Wood flies, ants, mountain rats, bears, and mountain storms soon wiped out the structure.

To-day there is modern housing in the big Canadian resort for three or four thousand transients. The people of the world visit the springs, the caves, the fishing and hunting grounds. They live in the hotels and go away satisfied with the comforts provided. In the early days four walls and a roof were comfort, today bellboys, elevators, waitresses, servants, fine linen, baths, architectural marvels are necessities. Roman baths, foodstuffs from the distant parts of the earth take the place of the muddy pools and the flour and bacon of pioneer days. The first bonifface of Banff built his hostelry from timbers which grew on the mountains; the great C. P. R. hotel in Banff went deeper and builded from the very stones that underlaid the soil which fed those timbers. Tall, and grey as the very cliffs themselves the big structure looms up in castellated grandeur, not even seemingly pigmatized by contrast with the mighty precipices.

Eight guests would have strained the accommodations of the first log hotel, eight hundred is not too many for this one great building which now stands and overlooks the valley of the Bow. As one will admit changes come with the years, though the mountains still stand as they stood when Rome burned and Nero played.—L. V. K.

NERVOUS RUN-DOWN WOMAN

Tells how Vinol Creates Strength.

Duke, Tenn. — "I live on a farm and keep house for six in my family. I got into a nervous, run-down condition so it seemed as though I would die. A friend advised me to try Vinol. I have been greatly improved by its use and am better and stronger, in every way." — Mrs. H. H. Goodwin.

The reason Vinol was so successful in Mrs. Goodwin's case is because it contains beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates, the very elements needed to build up a weak, run-down system and create strength.

MADE SLIGHT ERROR.

Telegrapher's Mistake Resulted In Practical Joke.

It was at Krasniarsk that we barely missed a good joke on our Red Guard friends. They had received a telegram to prepare to receive sixty baranl, which were to arrive on the train that day. Now, barani means "sheep," so the Red Guards made ready wagons and an abundance of hay and feed for the welcome animals. Instead of sheep, however, there stepped off the train sixty aristocratic nobles, heavily guarded. They were being sent into exile from the northwest province of Russia. The telegraph operator had made the mistake of reporting barani instead of baroni. But it made good fun for the crowd at the station.

The best insight into true conditions was given me by Izenkin, whom I had known as a soldier at the front, a few months before. I chanced to run across him near Tomsk. I knew him to be a shrewd, prosperous peasant, and I took him to get his views.

"Now, Izenkin," I said after greetings were over, "you're a good Bolshevik, or Communist—pardon me!—so tell me about the reforms you're putting through here in Siberia."

He comically winked at me with both eye.

"Oh, Gospodin Atkinson, you know very well why I pretend to be Bolshevik—because it isn't safe to be anything else. Most of us here in Siberia are descended from political exiles, and we've always tried to keep up our education a little and be worthy of our ancestors' fight for liberty. And now it seems as if everything had gone to pieces.

"My people tell me that even when Kerensky was in power a lot of low toughs from the Petrograd factories, to say nothing of Siberian convicts, were receiving pay from somebody to go through all our villages, trying to stir up the vilest kind of trouble. Deserting soldiers were coming home, so they repeated to our home folk the lies we all used to hear from Germany and the Bolsheviki, all about America and Japan stealing eastern Siberia, and about the 'deliverers, Lenine and Trotzky,' who were going to keep us from becoming slaves to foreigners.

"Our people didn't believe these stories, nor did they like the way the provocators were acting; so they decided that they'd set up a republic of their own, with the capital near here, as Omsk or Tomsk.

"You know the rest," he continued, bitterly. "Trotzky, while he was talking internationalism and the rights of free peoples, sent cannon and guns and ammunition, and a blood-red gang of cutthroats — and what could unarmed Siberia do? Every city fought to the last, but it had to end sometime. Thousands of our soldiers turned traitor and joined the invaders, getting good money for it. Of course, the criminal elements were happy. Some of the women believed the stories of the deserters and thought it was a great battle for their freedom. But most of them are just waiting, like the men, for a chance to throw off the despicable rule of these tyrants!"

GETTING A LINE ON HIM.

For All That, Robert Had His Dad Worried at First.

The president of a large manufacturing concern decided a little while ago to start his son in the business, letting him begin at the bottom. After the boy's first day in the factory his father asked:

"Well, Robert, what did you learn today?"

"Oh, there's nothing much to learn in that place," the young man airily replied.

The father looked worried, but he refrained from giving expression to his disappointment.

"Well, what did you learn today?"

"Oh, I learned a good many things," the young man answered.

At the end of the third day the father again asked:

"Well, Robert, what did you learn today?"

"Gee, dad," the boy replied, "I never can learn that business!"

Then the delighted father clapped a hand upon his son's shoulder and said:

"Robert, you're all right. I guess you'll be able to take hold of things when I have to let go, but you had me worried at the start."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Disastrous Wreck on the New York Central Line

Engineer on Ill-fated Train Cannot Account for the Wreck—Bodies Awaiting Identification.

AN INVESTIGATION

Canadian Press:

BATAVIA, New York, Jan. 13.—Officials of the New York Central Railroad to-day were continuing their investigations to place the blame for the wreck at South Byron yesterday, in which 21 persons were killed in a rear-end collision. Attempts were renewed to identify 13 nameless bodies still at Batavia undertaking establishments. John Friedly, of Buffalo, engineer of the south-western train, maintains that no block signal was set against his train and that he saw no warning light until he was within a few car lengths of the Wolverine Pullman train which had stopped to take on an extra engine for the steep grade. In this statement he is supported by the fireman.

J. R. Dinan, superintendent of the western division, said that he could not explain the accident. It was recalled to-day that Engineer Friedly was in a similar wreck twenty years ago. His train on that occasion plowed into another at Bergen, the next station on the Central, east of Byron, and several people were killed. One of the remarkable features of the wreck was the fact that none of the passengers in section coach from the end of Wolverine were injured. The rear end of the car was lifted high in the air by the force of the collision and then it dropped through the roof of the ill-fated last car, but all of the passengers escaped except for bruises and shock.

JAN PADEREWSKI WAS INJURED

(Special to Examiner.)

GENEVA, January 13. — Ignace Jan Paderwaski was badly wounded when several shots were fired into his hotel at Warsaw.

A despatch from that city reported to-day that twenty Bolshevists were arrested in connection with the shooting. Despatches received several days ago reported that Paderwaski narrowly escaped injury when shots which German soldiers fired at a party of Polish citizens, including several children, went wild and penetrated his apartments.

WILL RENOUNCE HER THRONE

(Special to Examiner.)

LONDON, Jan. 13. — Grand Duchess Marie has declared her readiness to renounce the throne of Luxemburg as a result of the revolution in her country, according to a official despatch from Luxemburg to-day.

THE WEATHER

Some fairly sharp weather has been experienced during the last few days. On Saturday evening the temperature was down to 12 degrees below zero, while on Sunday morning about 7 o'clock we had it 19 degrees below zero. This is the lowest figure up to the present time. However, this is a long way from the figures that obtained last winter. Last night's lowest was 2 degrees above zero.—W. P.

HAS ISSUED A PROCLAMATION

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The Luxembourg government has issued a proclamation appealing to the people against the movement for the establishment of a republic, and urging support to the dynasty. Proclamation announces that the Grand Duchess Marie has declared her readiness to abdicate if her retention of the throne would be an obstacle to the decision taken by the government to seek an economic alliance with the Entente powers, especially France and Belgium.

Bolshevists Are Arrested

Hand Pumps Were Filled With Dynamite—Supplied With Funds.

Special to The Examiner:

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 13. —Police declared to-day they had discovered a Soviet organization in Buenos Aires and arrested its President, its Minister of War and Minister of Police for this city, and two other officials, all of whom are Russians. The names of these men, as well as those on a list of 140 the police say they have, are being withheld.

Bicyclists, the police asserted, have been arrested as bomb plotters. These men, it was stated, carried hand pumps filled with dynamite.

Members of the Soviet, it was said, came to South America from Russia in October and November. They were plentifully supplied with funds and obtained considerable munitions. They were sent, it was declared, by Bolsheviki in Russia to foment Bolshevik uprisings in the important South American capitals.

FAUX CASE WAS ADJOURNED

Evidence Heard This Morning —Grain Alcohol

The case of Emmet Faux, who is charged with selling liquor, was resumed this morning, Mr. John Corkery, Jr., conducting the defence and Crown Attorney Hatton prosecuting. The benches at the back of the court room were occupied by persons usually found listening to court cases and they seemed to take more interest in the sallies of the Crown Attorney than they did in the evidence given by the several witnesses. The brother of the accused alone listened attentively to the main points of the case.

Dr. Edward Wood repeated his evidence which he gave in the Bourgan and Irwin inquests. Chief Thompson stated that he sent the contents of the bottle found in the Bourgan home to the analyst of the Board of License Commissioners, who, writing back, said that the bottle was 73.97/100 proof spirits. (Proof spirits is ethyl alcohol or grain alcohol and not a product of sawdust as is Columbian spirits which the inquest jury found that Bourgan had drunk.)

Mr. Corkery asked the Chief if the other ingredients of the bottle had been analyzed, but the Government analyst will analyze only for spirits and not for poison.

Was Signed.

Mr. E. L. Payne, in the box, said that he sold a bottle of ethyl alcohol on Chirstmas day to a man who had a prescription from a local doctor. He would not state positively that the prisoner was the man. The requisition which was produced in court, was signed E. Faux, and said that the alcohol was for Mrs. Henry Faux, who was suffering from rheumatism. The same man came back a second time with another prescription from another city doctor for 16 ounces of alcohol. Mr. Payne refused to fill it as he already filled one for the same man only two hours before. A doctor may prescribe 20 ounces of imperial pint at a time. Mr. Payne did not know whether there was ethyl alcohol (proof spirits) in Columbian spirits or not, but was of the opinion that methylated spirits, which is very much like Columbian spirits and might be mistaken for it, is one-half methyl alcohol or wood alcohol and the rest ethyl alcohol or grain alcohol.

The case was adjourned until to-morrow.

TAKE ADVANTAGE

May we remind the man, who is contemplating buying a suit, overcoat or dress accessories, that Cressman's Semi-Annual "Lonely Sale" is now in progress. Take advantage of it.

CONGRATULATIONS.

His many friends will unite in congratulating Mr. Roland Tivey, of East City, who is to-day celebrating his 80th birthday

GOVERNMENT IN CONTROL

Rosa Luxemburg Arrested by the Government Soldiers—Hand Grenades Used.

BRITISH TROOPS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 13.—Rosa Luxemburg, associated with Dr. Karl Liebknecht, in the leadership of the rebellous Spartacan forces in Berlin, has been arrested by the government soldiers, according to a report in the "Taeglische Rundschau." The arrest is said to have been made when the troops were clearing out the central office of the Spartacans last night, when Dr. Liebknecht's son also is reported to have been taken. The capture of the Spartacan office was effected by the free use of hand grenades. Soldiers burned in the street an immense quantity of Bolshevik literature found there.

Karl Radek, one of the Russian Bolshevik emissaries in Berlin, has been arrested, according to Berlin advices.

British troops have occupied Dusseldorff, which has been in the hands of the Spartacans. Dusseldorff is a town in Rheinish Prussia. It is situated on the right banq of the Rhine, twenty-one miles northwest of Cologne.

Government forces have captured police headquarters after a short bombardment. The Ebert government is now in complete control.

The Supreme War Council

Number of Delegates to be Allotted to Each Nation—Yesterday's Session.

(Associated Press.)

PARIS, Jan. 13.— The first business before the Supreme War Council when it re-assembled this afternoon was the settlement of the question of representation in the first session of the Inter-Allied Conference. It is still unsettled what nations will be represented or pumber of delegates which will be allotted to each. It has developed, however, that China will not be represented by Japan, but will have her own delegation. Efforts of the French press to bring to the fore the question of the status of the Entente and American troops in Russia and the advisability of sending such troops into Poland to check the Bolshevik advance, it is understood, have been without success so far. The United States, it is said, will not consent to accept in principle or as a military policy, the task of using American forces in Poland at all, or in Russia in larger numbers than already are there.

Yesterday's Session.

Yesterday's session of the Supreme Council of the Peace Congress was a lengthy one, lasting from 2.45 to 6.45 o'clock. The degree to which the Germans had fulfilled the conditions of the armistice was one of the important matters before he Council. It heard Marshal Foch's report on this subject.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Premiers Have Pledged Themselves to Support Wilson's Ideas Concerning the League.

THE TERMS

(By William Sims.)
(United Press.)

PARIS, January 13th. — The league of nations can now be considered as an established fact.

Premier Clemenceau, Premier Lloyd George and Premier Orlando are pledged to support President Wilson's various ideas of this league. Public opinion in France, Great Britain and Italy is solidly behind the scheme. The peace delegates are agreed that the league is an absolute necessity if future wars are to be prevented, and that it must be given preference over all other business at the peace conference. There is still some disagreement regarding the details but these were expected to be smoothed out quickly in the conferences of the associated powers, which were resumed to-day.

Wilson's plan, as a whole, is unsatisfactory to the French because they believe it does not provide sufficient economic penalties for Germany.

They say that his proposed probationary inclusion of Germany would permit that country to start up its undamaged industries in competition with the French and Belgians, whose industrial plants were wrecked by the Germans themselves.

Senator Bourgeois, who will head the French section of the Inter-allied Commission to draw up plans for the league (if the conference appoints such a body) made it plain in a recent interview with the United Press, that he agrees with Clemenceau on this point. He favors excluding the Central Powers until they consult provisions they must sign at the peace conference.

Clemenceau is understood to favor a league conposed of the victorious nations. Opposition to this plan centres on the fact that such a league would also permit Germany to to beguished powers, and would certainly result in another war.

The French delegates are opposed to any plan that would not completely guarantee France's frontiers, together with her northern and eastern industrial centres, against sudden attack or invasion.

The bourgeois favor letting in the neutral nations immediately after peace is signed, their formal application for admission being passed upon by the "charter members." They would also permit German yto become a member once she carries out the obligations imposed by the congress.

These are some of the details that will confront the associated representatives when they first begin the formal discussion of the league of nations. None of them is regarded as presenting a very difficult obstacle to a complete agreement.

Peterboro Soldier Died Overseas

Drivate Percy Harold Johnston Fell a Victim to Pneumonia.

The deceased would have been 30 inst. He left Peterboro nine years years old had he lived until the 26th ago for Vancouver, and in 1916, he joined up with the 68th Battery in that city. He went overseas in Jan., 1917, and was in France transferred to the 38th Battery, with which he continued to the day of his death, which occurred on January 1st.

Berlin Government Will Annihilate the Spartacans

Water, Gas and Other Public Services Will be Cut Off During the Operation—Workmen Hold a Mass Meeting—The Situation in Berlin—Week-end Features.

(Special to The Examiner.)

BERLIN, Jan. 12.—The government announced its intention to-day to surround the city and utterly annihilate the Spartacans with artillery, unless they surrender immediately. During this operation all water, gas and electricity would be cut off.

The announcement followed another attempt of the Spartacans to open negotiations. Chancellor Ebert, however, insisted on practically an unconditional surrender, declaring all demands of the government must be met unreservedly.

Independent Socialists urged the government to consider the Spartacan offer of compromise, saying they would throw their support to the government if Ebert agreed to the postponement of the national elections for three months.

Resolutions were passed at a great mass meeting of workmen and Socialists urging the government to stop all bloodshed. At the same time a delegation of other citizens called upon Ebert and urged him to accept no compromise and to "kill Bolshevism forever."

Groups of citizens attacked the Spartacan prisoners to-day, despite the efforts of the Government troops to prevent them, and battered some of the insurgents until they were unrecognizable.

Fighting was still going on in some parts of the city to-day, despite their efforts to effect a truce. The Spartacans were fortifying the strategic points remaining in their possession, bringing up carloads of arms, munitions and reinforcements, and requisitioning from private families. Forty thousand additional Spartacans were rumoured to be entering Berlin from all parts of Germany.

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The Entente has given us enough food to supply Vienna and the rest of German Austria until February 16, declared an official despatch received from Vienna to-day.

Several Spartacans have been summarily executed by Government rifle squads, an agency despatch from Berlin reported to-day.

A Refugee.

METZ, Jan. 13. — The Grand Duchess Marie of Luxemburg was reported to-day to be a refugee in a chateau near her capital, following a revolutionary outbreak on Saturday. Unconfirmed despatches received here said she had abdicated, and that a republic has been proclaimed in Luxemburg. Revolutionists in the Chamber of Deputies held a tumultuous session, members of the clerical party withdrawing.

Have Been Captured.

Special to the Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 13. — Karl Liebkneicht and Rosa Luxemburg have been captured by German Government troops, according to the "Taeglisch Rundschau." The Spartacan leaders, the newspaper said, were taken prisoner with ten thousand of their followers, including a son of the agitator Lewin. A quantity of military material was also captured, consisting of 100 machine guns, 1,200 rifles and 1,000 bombs.

Spartacans attacked and shot into the crowds which were attending the Government meetings in Berlin yesterday, according to the despatch. This was believed to have been the final effort of the insurgents, the despatch said, as the Government now practically controls the situation.

Peace Congress.

Special to the Examiner:

PARIS, Jan. 13.—The discussion of the organization and methods of the Peace Congress proper was resumed at the second meeting of the Inter-Allied Superior Council this afternoon.

The consideration of the problems in connection with the extension of the armistice also formed a part of the deliberations.

Forty thousand troops are supporting the Berlin Government, which was scheduled to hold twenty-eight mass meetings in the city yesterday, a Berlin despatch reports to-day. The despatch said 1,500 Spartacans were killed in last week's fighting.

Chairmen of Council's Committees Appointed

Ald. Phelan Heads Board of Works and Ald. Morrison Gets the Fire, Water and Light Committee—Ald. Turner Suggests Change in Reception of Returning Soldiers.

MEETING HELD THIS MORNING

The new Council's first action at the preliminary meeting held this morning was the cancellation of Ald. Murray's lease of the narrow strip of Park Street, on which he had erected a fence, and which prevented him from taking the prescribed oath of office. Ald. Murray excluded himself from the Council, remaining in the public gallery, although Ald. Turner suggested that he take his seat. Mayor Duncan invited him to enter the civil body of bodies, but Ald. Murray declined until Ald. McIntyre moved the resolution a few minutes later, seconded by Ald. Taylor, revoking the agreement under which the strip of the street for which Ald. Murray has been paying the nominal rental of twenty-five cents a year was held.

With his flock complete, Mayor Duncan delivered to them his inaugural address, sketching the work that confronts the Council of 1919.

Chairman Appointed.

The Council went into a nominating committee to strike the working committees for the year.

The Board of Works chairmanship went to Ald. Phelan, who stated that he had held it under a former Council, and, with the assistance of the aldermen, would endeavour to make his efforts entirely successful.

Ald. Morrison was appointed to the Fire, Water and Light Committee, defeating Ald. Turner by 6-4. The four Labour men and Aldermen McIntyre and Taylor, who proposed Ald. Morrison, comprised his six supporters.

Ald. Taylor was returned to the Finance Committee, Ald. Edgar to the Railways, Ald. Hamilton was made chairman of the Property Committee, and the Special Bridge Committee was retired with the old Council. Ald. Hamilton recommended that the bridge question be handled by the Board of Works for the reason that all the members of the Council are on that committee, and the newly elected members would have an opportunity of acquiring all the information necessary for their thoughtful consideration of the bridge problem.

The Reception Committee.

After much persuading, Ald. Turner accepted the chair of the Legal and Reception Committee. He presented several objections when he was nominated. He declared that the Labour men had been elected with such majorities that they were entitled to two chairmanships. The citizens had given them convincing support, had imposed certain responsibilities on them, and it was their right and duty to accept the full share.

Ald. Garside replied that the Labour men were not opposing Ald Turner. "There are no hard feelings on our part, and I know you have the ability to handle this committee as it should be," he said.

Ald. Gainey remarked that the Labour men were willing to accept their share of the work, but would prefer to have the special bridge committee.

Ald. Turner said that if he accepted the Reception Committee's chair it would be on the understanding that the arrangements for meeting the home-coming soldiers would be revised. "It seems to me," he continued, "that we have outgrown the village stage. The Aldermen should not be called upon to expend their money for what is actually the city's business. They should not be called upon to provide conveyances for the soldiers. The returning men don't care a hoot for the Mayor or the Aldermen. They want to meet their relatives. I don't think it was fair that Ald. Worth should have had to assume this duty last year and provide cars the city should have supplied. I think we should have conveyances for the returned men, and from time to time we could hold public receptions when a number of them have come home."

Mayor Duncan stated that this subject could be taken up by the Reception Committee at once and fully discussed.

The Mayor added that the homes of some returned men were outside the city, and their relatives had telephoned him their requests to meet the soldiers at the stations.

Ald. Turner proposed Ald. Murray for the position, and when the latter declined, accepted it himself.

Mayor Duncan remarked that there should be no reference to particular groups with which some of the Aldermen were affiliated.

"We are all here as representatives of the citizens as a whole, and not of the Trades and Labour Council or any other body," he said.

"Nor the Board of Trade," added Ald. Murray.

A WIN FOR PETERBORO

G.T.R. Will Be Obliged to Replace Traffic Bridge on Bethune St.

RULING OF BOARD

The Grand Trunk Railway Company applied before the Dominion Railway Board to-day at the Assize Chamber, at the City Hall, for an order permitting them to rebuild their bridge on Bethune street, near Murray street. This bridge was built about sixty years ago, and is fic. The company now intends to cut off the vehicular traffic and to build the bridge only the width of used for railway and vehicular traffic the railway track. The city opposed this and Sir Hendry Drayton declined to make an order, and instructed the Peterboro City Engineer, Mr. R. H. Parson, who was present, to make an appointment with the engineer of the Railway Board to ascertain the class of piers and abutments which would be needed to avoid flooding if a reconstruction of the bridge is permitted.

Waiting a Report.

Sir Henry Drayton stated upon the application of City Solicitor G. N. Gordon, that if the order were made, the Railway Company would be required to leave the bridge in as substantial condition as it is at present for vehicular traffic, and the city would not be called upon to reconstruct this part of the bridge. In addition to that the City Solicitor asked that if there were any costs of re-building crossings or sidewalks, the Board would order the Railway Company to pay all the cost of such alteration. Sir Henry Drayton said this would be a term of the order, if it were made. In the meantime, Sir Henry Drayton, the chairman of the Board, announced no order would be made until he obtained the report from the Board's Engineer, and when that came in the matter would be taken up again.

ORGAN DONATED TO PROTESTANT HOME

Through the kind interest displayed toward the Protestant Home for many years by Mr. W. A. Cuningham, Mr. Britton, manager of the Heintzman Co., this city, visited the Home during the fall. He also showed much interest in the Home, the inmates, their pursuits and pleasures. That this interest was not an evanescent one, was proved on New Year's Eve, when a beautiful piano-cased, six-octave Berlin organ was sent to the Home, with Mr. Britton's compliments and good wishes. The thanks of the management are due and are hereby tendered for this fine gift.

FUNERAL OF MRS. S. HICKEY-THIS MORNING

The funeral of Mrs. Sylvester Hickey was held this morning from her late residence, 84 Aylmer street, to the Church of the Sacred Heart, where a requiem mass was celebrated by Rev. J. J. O'Brien. The pallbearers were Messrs. John Grisdale, Thos. Hickey, Max Rohers, Herbert Mowry, Herman Laplante and Frank Goselin. Rev. Father O'Gorman officiated at St. Peter's cemetery. Mrs. Hickey's mother, of Cobourg, who had been with her during her later illness was one of the mourners.

AN IMPORTANT POSITION.

The appointment of Mr. Sidney Whatley, secretary of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, to the very responsible position of field secretary for the Province of Ontario to the Advisory Committee of the G.W.V.A., which is working in co-operation with the Repatriation Committee of the Dominion Government, is a matter upon which the local Veterans are to be congratulated as well as sympathised with. The selection of Mr. Whatley for this most necessary work on behalf of returned and returning soldiers is a tribute to the manner in which he has fulfilled the duties of his position as secretary here, and incidentally reflects credit upon the Peterborough branch as a whole—hence the congratulations; while on the other hand his acceptance of the position necessitates his resignation from the secretaryship of the Peterborough branch, and the local association loses the services of a most capable and energetic official. However, in his new position Mr. Whatley is given the opportunity of being of services, not only to Peterborough returned soldiers, but to ex-service men throughout Ontario. As field secretary to this Advisory Committee, he will be the connecting link between the official body of returned men and the Government. His duties are responsible and important, and provide him with the chance to do much useful work in protecting and furthering the interests of the men who have fought for Canada overseas. Citizens of Peterborough generally will unite with the city's returned soldiers in congratulating the local secretary on his appointment, and in wishing for him a successful and useful career in the wider field of duty to which he has been called

MEMORIAL TREES.

Everywhere throughout Canada there is much talk in the newspapers and elsewhere as to the best means of perpetrating the memory of the Canadian soldiers who have fallen in the great war. The discussion that has taken place in Peterborough in this regard has been repeated in many municipalities, but so far in very few cases has the matter got beyond the talking stage. In this respect, considering that Canada was engaged in the war for years before the United States entered the conflict, we are far behind our cousins in the neighbouring republic in expressing in concrete form our gratitude to the men who will not come back from over there. Various plans have already been commenced in different cities to commemorate the dead, and one particularly fitting method is that of planting memorial trees—a plan that is a simple and yet beautiful way of honouring the memory of the unreturning brave.

At the suggestion of the American Forestry Association, the Lincoln Highway is to be shaded by these trees, it being understood of course that trees indigenous to each locality will be chosen, and that they will be cared for by the communities through which the Highway passes. Even centres situated far from the Highway will have a share in the plan, having decided to erect groves of trees as memorials not alone to their dead but to the notable epochs of the war.

Every soldier and sailor who went from the Borough of Manhattan is assured of a memorial tree. American elm will be used, the species selected flourishing in the latitude of Manhattan and attaining a fine size. The trees are to be planted in a long line in Central Park, and on each is to be placed a bronze tablet bearing the name of the man to be remembered. The result will be a beautiful avenue from which no trees will be allowed to disappear through lack of care.

There is a beautiful sentiment in connection with the plan that might commend itself to many Peterborough citizens, and no doubt the Horticultural Society and other bodies might co-operate in considering the planting of memorial trees in honour of Peterborough's dead.

LAND FOR SOLDIERS.

In connection with the problem of the repatriation of Canada's army the Soldiers' Settlement Board, which has in its charge the matter of assisting returned men, to adopt farming as a permanent occupation, has the opportunity of doing a vast and most important work. Hitherto the chief difficulty in the way of the success of this movement has been the lack of information concerning the manner in which the soldier can take advantage of the privileges offered him. There are many returned men who have been considering the question of taking up land, but beyond a few bulletins issued from time to time, and usually worded in the somewhat involved language of officialdom, there has been a lack of illuminating articles, and as a result many men have lost interest in the scheme, and have turned to something else.

The new advertising plan of the Repatriation Committee may go a long way towards solving the problem, while the Great War Veterans' Association could not do anything better than devote an evening to a special discussion of the Soldiers' Settlement Act. It would not be a difficult task to have an official of the Settlement Board visit Peterboro and go into the details of the matter with the city's returned men, and the result of such a discussion could not fail in being helpful.

Here are a few facts about the Soldiers' Settlement Board that should be of interest to all returned soldiers. They are printed in the hope that they will be of service to the men who have done their bit, and with the suggestion that the G. W. V. A. make an effort to have this information supplemented by the visit of a representative from the Board.

In the first place it should be understood that land grants to returned men are given, not as rewards, but as privileges to those who wish to farm as a life work. It is essential that the soldier settle on the land and produce crops, in order to secure the benefits of the Act.

The Act offers a loan up to twenty-five hundred dollars to the returned men to get land, discharge encumbrances, undertake improvements, erect buildings and buy the necessary stock, machinery and equipment. The loan is at 5 per cent, repayable in twenty equal instalments; the first two being deferable.

Advances are made, not in cash, but in the form of payment for material and equipment. This loan provision applies to all lands everywhere in Canada. The use of private and Provincial lands on any large scale awaits the co-operation of the Provincial governments. The returned men are given a decided priority in the matter of Dominion lands.

A soldier on active service, holding Dominion land as homestead pre-emption or purchased homestead, is protected in his entry. A returned soldier holding such entry is eligible for the twenty-five hundred dollar loan on the same terms as if the land were privately owned. He is also eligible to secure a free entry for another quarter of a section.

All Dominion lands in the Western Provinces within 15 miles from transportation, have been reserved for returned men.

W. J. Black is the new chairman of the Soldier's Settlement Board. That Board arranges for short courses in practical farming to soldier settlers who have not had experience. The Dominion Experimental Farm, Provincial Department of Agriculture, Agricultural Colleges and Khaki University are being used in this connection. The Board supervises the administration of loans. It makes use of the Survey Branch and the Dominion Land Brauch of the Department of the Interior to survey land, determine what lands are open for entry, and render other services for the returned men. It also secures the proper equipment for the returned man on his farming venture. Its experts will help to draw plans for his buildings and advise him as to purchase.

The Board has a supervisor in the field for each Province. These eight Supervisors have a competent staff to value the land, to advise the returned man in his training, and in his farming. Two honorary boards advise the Supervisors, one in regard to financial assistance, and the other in regard to the capacity of the applicant for a loan under the Board.

Up to date, loans have been approved to 975 returned men, aggregating $1,239,685. One hundred and sixty-two applications are under consideration at present. Since the Board was instituted, 675 soldiers entries have been granted on Dominion Crown Lands.

THE FUTURE OF AVIATION.

Fascinating prophesies as to the future development of aviation are made by John Fisher Russell in the current issue of the By-Water Magazine. Peterborough has supplied a considerable number of airmen for the Royal Air Force, and these trained flyers will be especially interested in Mr. Russell's article, part of which is reproduced here for their benefit.

"What aviation may develop into," says the writer, "nobody knows, but it is interesting and instructive to view its possibilities. One writer made the startling asser[tion] other day that aviation would [make] it possible for a business [man] to start out from Montreal or Toronto in the morning, spend the day in New York and be back home in time for supper.

"That feat, however, is the merest trifle compared with what will be a commonplace experience within a year or so. Before the year 1919 comes to a close it is practically certain that people will be able to leave Eastern Canada one day and be in Europe the next, for machines already exist capable of crossing the Atlantic in less than twenty-four hours, and plans are already under way for organizing such an ocean service.

"Let us look, however, at the purely domestic side of the service. Aerial mail services are already in existence between New York, Washington and other places, and will soon be extended to cover all the important cities in the United States from coast to coast, hundreds of machines for the purpose having already been turned over to the Post Office by the Army authorities.

"It goes without saying that Canada will establish similar services at an early date. The mail services will be quickly followed by passenger and freight services. As machines are already being built capable of carrying 20 tons, the possibilities in the matter of parcel post and express deliveries of light packages may be judged.

"It now takes over 24 hours to make the journey between Halifax and Montreal. With aeroplanes it will be possible to leave Halifax in the morning and arrive in Montreal the same afternoon.

"The journey from Montreal or Toronto to the Porcupine Goldfields takes a whole night and day by train. By means of the aeroplane it will be possible to go to Porcupine in the morning and return home the same evening.

"It now takes two nights and two days to reach Port Arthur from Montreal. By the air route the journey will be made between daylight and dark. It now takes two nights and three days to reach Winnipeg from Montreal, but in summer time it will be possible to make this journey also between daylight and dark. Calgary can be reached from Montreal within less than twenty-four hours. That is to say, by leaving Montreal at six o'clock in the morning, it will be possible to arrive in Vancouver by noon the next day, and in Victoria an hour later.

"How such fast services will stimulate inter-provincial trade may be imagined.

"But while these feats will become mere commonplaces as regards the length of Canada, think what it will do for the breadth of the country. We shall be able to take a flight from Winnipeg to York Factory on Hudson's Bay in five hours, and from Montreal to James Bay in about the same time. The Peace River country and the Klondyke will be brought within hailing distance of the prairie cities. The flight to the North Pole and back will be but a few days' journey. Sea fish caught in Hudson's Bay in the early morning will be delivered in Montreal and Winnipeg the same evening.

"As regards exploration, aviation will do wonders for Canada. At present we know but little of our vast timberland beyond the land immediately contiguous to the larger rivers, for the only means of transportation is by canoe. Winter exploration by the use of dog teams counts for little, for the country is then under a heavy blanket of snow. By means of the aeroplane the country will be as open to us as a book. Vast mineral riches will undoubtedly be discovered, and mining supplies and equipment will be carried in by aeroplane. Likewise the products of the new mines will be brought out in the same manner. There will be no need to build costly roads through forests, across rivers and over muskegs.

"Leaving the domestic field, let us consider for a moment the possibilities of international traffic. What are now long journeys to places in the United States will be short trips measured by hours rather than by days.

"The West Indies will become as accessible to Eastern Canada as is the prairie country. The trip from Montreal to Bermuda will be made in less than eight hours. In other words we shall be able to leave Montreal in the morning, and be on this beautiful semi-tropical coral island the same afternoon. St. Kitts and Jamaica will be only a sixteen-hour flight away, and British Guiana, on the South American Continent, less than thirty hours away. Instead of taking seven weeks to make the trip from Montreal to British Guiana and back, we shall be able to do it in three days, if necessary.

"Then, of course, there will be the trans-Pacific flights. That from Canada to Siberia will be made in less than forty-eight hours. Australia will be only three days' journey away.

"Of course it will take time to establish services in all these directions, but the possibilities exist, and once we begin, it is probable aerial transportation will increase with amazing rapidity, for there are thousands of trained aviators ready for the work. The machines are already in existence, and aircraft building is a huge industry, to which the best engineering and mechanical brains have been attracted.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"Indifference in municipal elections causes indifference on the part of those elected," is the truthful remark of the Brantford Expositor.

"The first to serve, the last to appeal." That is the Salvation Army's splendid slogan for the Red Shield drive. It should be as effective as it is truthful.

RESCUES WOMAN, KILLS ASSAULTER

New York Policeman Fights Four Thugs to Free Young Mother

NEW YORK,—Jan. 8.—Attacked by four men from whom he had attempted to rescue Mrs. Anna Dowder, 18-year-old wife of a sailor, Patrolman Michael Gleason of the West Fortyseventh Street Station early to-day shot and killed a man identified as Peter Printy, a longshoreman, and seriously wounded another man.

The fight took place in West Fifty-seventh street, after Gleason had heard Mrs. Dowder scream for help. In a hallway he saw the young mother struggling with four men.

Gleason is more than six feet tall and unusually strong, so he "pitched in," but almost met his match.

The man who were in the dark hallway jumped on him, while the fourth held on to the struggling Mrs. Dowder. One man got Gleason's night-stick away from him in the first rush and beat him with it while the others kicked and pounded him to the floor.

Gleason, blinded and bleeding, managed to shake off his assailants and get out his revolver. His first bullet hit the man who was wielding the night-stick, in the heart.

The other assailants ran, but a bullet caught one of them, who almost fell, but was dragged away by his companions.

The Roads Are Mostly Paved With Square Blocks of Stone Such as the Romans Used—Motor Cycle Rider Finds the Travelling Difficult In Bad Weather—Peterboro Girl Receives Interesting Letter From a Member of the Canadian Army Occupation in Germany.

The folloing interesting letter has been received by a Peterboro girl:—

I believe the last time I gave you any sort of connected letter was while we were at Lewarde, a small town near Douai and the first town of the captured area that was not flattened by either our own or enemy fire. It was from this place to Denain taht I began to make the moves by motor cycle and I might say here that that first long trip was the worst of quite a number of succeeding and longer trips. The roads are mostly pave, that is square blocks of stone which have been smoothed and rounded off by a few hundred year of traffic and on this day were wet enough to make a sort of greasy paste so that it was some job to keep on the road. Several times the machine turned completely round and three times I hit old Mother Earth, got close to nature, as it were, but finally made the trip with everything intact.

Sugarless Coffee

Denain is the largest town we had been in and the people looked on us as some sort of conquering heroes. We were flooded with offers of billets and it was impossible to down the many cups of coffee. Indeed during the past few months I've come to consider black, strong, milkless and sugarless coffee as more or less of a delicacy.

The people of Denain had not been evacuated except hose young men of military age, but they had been almost starved and it would make your heart ache to see their poor thin bodies and pinched faces. The youngsters and girls got me most; poor, starved, bloodless looking little things. We were in Denain only a few days, during which time I had a trip into Valenciennes on the day of the official re-opening of the town after its being once more in civilized hands. There were still a few dead Fritzies lying around and other than the fact of the suburbs being rather badly shot up, the town looked in fair condition, owing to the fact that the British artillery would not fire direct into the city. Also I had a trip back through Douai to Arras one day and it did seem queer to be riding peacefully along roads where a few weeks previous it would have meant a little plot and an R.I.P. to anyone who showed his head over the top of the parapet.

Shoved Out

Next we moved on to Valenciennes when some sort of celebration was being held. Of course I didn't know anything about any doings and ran slam bang into the Grande Place as is customary when entering a new town as one can generally find the way from the Place, and was immediately shooed out by the M.P.'s, but not before I'd got my information and so I wasn't long in finding where our office was to be. Here again we secured fine billets and it was here that the news of the signing of the armistice came through. Now this is only another instance of how the past four years have altered men out here. It is quite natural to delete expect that there would be a great deal of yelling and noises of all sorts but such was not the case. Of course we had been expecting some such word for several days, before so that when it did come no one got excited. I remember the bunch of us were playing a quiet little game of poker. Some one read the order while we still played on. Not a face showed any change of expression and the game went on uninterrupted and unconcernedly, it would seem to a stranger looking on. But I know that hundreds of thoughts and plans began to race through my mind and one of the most dominant was the thought of the poor lads who had gone under, some that very morning in the taking of Mons, and the sorrow that would be mingled with the gladnesa. Thoughts of hate for those responsible for the state of the world since 1914 and—perhaps we should listen to that passage you menioned concerning vengeance, but will the vengeance he may exact be enough? Can it be enough? People at home think they hate the Huns, but they have never seen a wounded comrade with his throat cut and they haven't heard wild-eyed French people tell the British prisoners with hands chained to their backs and chained together going tight-lipped to the edge of a Canal to be pushed to an ignominous death so they can't hate until it hurts. Is there a vengeance bad enough?

Another Move

Canadian Corps Headquarters,
Schleiden, Prussia,
December 9th, 1918

You will notice that since finishing the last paragraph we have once more moved and this is our first stop in Germany. Just now though, I'll not stop to tell you about this place or the trip here, but will take up my litle story where I left off at Valenciennes, I think it was.

The day before the corps moved to Mons, I had a little trip to that place all by myself to see the official opening of the town and the march-past of the 3rd Brigade who took the town on the last day of hostilities. I can't say that it was any joy-ride for added to the fact the roads were vry greasy and several times my old machine turned around and stared home of its own accord, so that I nearly bit myself in the back of the neck. Lorries, G.S. Wagons, artillery on the march one way and lorries returning with refugees pushing and pulling all manner of vehicles mixed in between. I considered myself mighty lucky that I didn't hit anything and nothing hit em. I was rather late geting started on the way back and added to that had some engine trouble so that when I was about half way back it was quite dark and having no lights I had to travel mostly by instinct but landed O.K. without further mishap. Next day we moved to Mons and the roads were much better and not so much traffic so that it was a much more enjoyable—As I was trying to say when I ran off the track, the move down was was much more enjoyable and had no trouble whatever. We were in Mons about a week when we moved on to Gossellies and here w met with a regular reception.

The Town Band

The town band appeared in the evening in all their glory of top hats and frock coats and paraded the streets followed by most of the civilians who could possibly walk and they corralled all the sodiers, everybody going along wherever the band lead until at last they landed in the Grand Place and there everyone joined in a general merry-go-round, sort of a dance, until the band got tired and retired to the estaminet, but not for long for they were, soon hauled out again. This operation wa srepeated a number of times until they gradually disappeared, one by one, whereupon the C.E. bunch gathered together in the middle of the square and there we howled all the songs we could think of and a lot we couldn't. But even we became tired after a while and thus ended our first real celebration, the first time we had begun to realize that the war was over as far as fighting was concerned, at least. Five or six days in Gossellies and then we took the longest jump of all to Huy. This trip took us through the historical Namur where I saw the ruins of the forts, or some of them, upon which the Allies depended so much early in 1914. I realized somewhat the tremdous power of heavy shell fire when I saw what a mess they had made of that seemingly impregnable bunch of forts solid masses of steel reinforced concrete and stone reduced to a mass of twisted steel and rubble. About 25 kilometres before we reached our destination my travelling mate's machine went dead on him and after tinkering with it for an hour or so I was forced to leave him and go on ahead. The latter part of the trip was not very pleasant as it rained steadily for the last 40 or 50 kilometres, but I had no trouble and landed O.K. I didn't think much of Huy and was glad that we only stayed there three days and then moved to Veilsalm.

Inside The Border

Vielsalm is just a few kilometres inside the Belgian border and is really not much of a village so I won't say much about it. My trip from Huy to Vielsalm though, was rather an unique one. I had a sort of feeling that I was going to have trouble, but got along all right until about 20 kilometres out, when, travelling close behind another chap, he suddenly stopped without warning and before I could stop, although I shut off everything and stepped on the brake, I was into him. Tore out several spokes of the front wheel and put a bad wobble on it. At first I thought of waiting for one of our lorries and loading it on, then decided to go until it crashed and finally caught up with the bunch where one of the lads had decided he'd had enough motor-cycle for one day, so I put my machine on a lorry and took his while he went with mine on the lorry, and away we went again. Everything went fine until we started to go down a long curving hill and at a particularly sharp curve two of us were thrown. I landed in a ditch and bent my foot-rest in such a manner that it only allowed the machine to work on one cylinder. I struggled along that way for a few kilometres, but finally decided I could n't make it before dark. A short distance up the road was a house from which issued forth about a dozen girls who gathered round—curious as usual—and on my request for grub and shelter the chorus of "ouis" was almos deafening. So the machine went to rest in the cowshed—till they sent for me, I though—while I retired to the house, entirely surrounded by girls, a position which is very embarrassing for me I assure you. However I soon got used to being the subject of curiosity and at last came time to eat, and this, too, was a novel event for me. The meal consisted of boiled potatoes and some sort of meat mashed up into a sort of hash and the whole mass was placed in a huge bowl in the centre of the table, from which each one dipped in with a wee bit of a fork with three tines about an inch and a half long and half an inch wide.

A Good Joke

I had considerable difficulty in getting any of the stuff to stay on the fork long enough to convey it to the proper place and one of the girls took pity on me seeing that I was in danger of going hungry after all, and fed me herself. Very considerate, I thought, but judging by the amount of laughing I guess they thought it was a good joke. It'd have been no joke for me if she hadn't helped me out. Also there was very black bread but with butter served out in slabs about eighteen inches long and half an inch in thickness, and black coffee with milk but no sugar. I added to the banquet with a couple of boxes of Canadian biscuits which I had on the back of my machine and a pocketful of chocolate, the latter they refused to eat but ground it up and made a drink out of it, which didn't taste bad either. It would probably have been funny for anyone who happened to be listening to me trying to carry on a conversation wit hthe family after "tea" but I managed to get quite a lot of what they were saying concerning their treatment at the hands of the Hun and also to tell them something about Canada and the Canadians. They were not badly treated by the Germans it seems, compared with most of them, probably on account of being in such an out-of-the-way place and so far back from the line that there were very few German troops around.

More Coffee

I was finally shown a bed up in the attic where all the bedrooms were and they were going to give me some of their blankets to get to sleep. At 5:30 I was up again, had some more coffee and another slab of bread and then, with a bit of assistance from the whole family and a few choice remarks from myself, which fluckily they didn't understand, I at last got the mill to fire, then tied a few loose parts together with string and wire and left about 9:00 bells in the midst of another storm. The rain fell in sheets and up on the tops of the mountains where the road lead, the water froze as fast as it fell making a mighty ticklish road to travel, but I didn't fall off any more mountains and finally landed at Corps under my own steam.

Mostly A Name.

As I said before, Vielsalm was mostly a name. Had fair billets in a Chateau and left five days later for Schleiden, in East Prussia. This proved to be the most interesting and pleasantest trip of all, although it was a damp misty morning and the roads were bad for the first 30 kilometres or so. We crossed the border O.K. and passed both guards all O.K. and finally came to good roads where we made good time. The scenery on this trip was magnificent and we were much taken up with it that we quite forgot we were in an enemy country, auud also we got on the wrong road. After a consultation with a map and the help of a Fritz who came along, who could speak very fair English, we discovered that we were only kilometres from our destination, so on we went and in a few minutes reached this place. We are billeted in the Hotel Hermann, where are the proprietor and his wife and three Frauleins ranging in age from 22 to 12. They are not beauties but treat us very good considering the circumstances. They told me today they had about 50 soldiers and a number of officers billetted here when the Germans were on the retreat through here and that they would much rather have the Canadians as the Germans were drunk all the time and woudn't pay for everything they got. Some of our lads did get mildly lit up but I haven't heard of an instance where they took advantage of their being of a "conquering army", and I don't think, as a general rule, that they will.

Our stay here is about ended and I believe we'll be pulling out of here about to-morrow for further roads to conquer, so I'll call this the first phase of my little story and start in again when we arrive at our final destination.

Address by Capt. Anderson

Large congregations heard Captain the Reverend Frederick W. Anderson speak in St. Paul's Church yesterday morning and in Knox Church in the evening.

Eveing Service.

At Knox Church Captain Anderson who lately returned form overseas, gave an interesting address on religion at the front. He said that now the war is over it will be hard to make the men who have been overseas fit into the old conventions of religion. Over there, it is true, the church parade was held, but many would rather stay away when possible. The question of service was exemplified by Christ who at 12 years of age informed his friends that he must be about his Father's business. If to-day the church does not stand for service it might as well close its doors as service is the spirit most needed. The great spirit of serving over there has been wonderfully diversified, he said. It came in the duties of the engineer, the artillery, cavalry, infantry and other branches of the army.

Here Capt. Anderson gave an interesting summarization of what each branch of the service has done during the war.

In conclusion, he said that though the war is over the warfare is still on. There is a danger of panic in the church as well as in the world, added the speaker; there is also a danger of the people becoming indifferent.

We must urge war in the church to uphold her principles as well as the soldiers did overseas.

Brewery Captured By the Government

47TH ANNIVERSARY OF FOUNDING OF TRINITY METHODIST CHURCH

Rev. E. E. Scott Addressed Large Congregations—Speaker Deals With the National Life as Well as the Spiritual Life.

THE EVENING SERVICE

Rev. E. E. Scott, of Toronto, one of the foremost ministers in Methodist churches preached to large congregations yesterday at Trinity Methodist Church: the 47th anniversary of the founding of the church. His eloquence reaches not only theological subjects but into every sphere of national life and at the evening service many were unable to find seats in thelarge edifice. The large choir was augmented by the presence of Captain and Mrs. Maurice Parr and in the evening from 6:30 to 7 o'clock an organ recital was given by the organist of the church, Mr. George King.

At the evening service the blind speaker took his subject from the Psalms—2nd and 97th, showing the magnitude of the reign of the Lord

"The Lord Reigneth."

"Some people say that the world is undergoing an evolution not only socially but politically and religiously The faith of the church has been thoroughly shaken during the recent conflict. But we must not be confounded by these agitators. God is not merely a principle as Mrs. Eddy reduces Him to. He is above Kings and cabinets and men. He is not gone off. No, He is in His office attending His affairs. Nations may break His threads but only for a time The Lord shall be victorious.

Reigns Over Matter.

The Lord reigns over matter, organic and inorganic. God has predetermined things. For instance take the shore lines of Canada which are very irregular giving us scores of good harbours and therefore good communicatins with the other parts of the world. Canada is a country where political science is in an advanced stage. Take the continent of Africa. It has a very regular shoreline and very few harbours and as everybody knows political science is in a very backward condition as is almost everything else is.

The Gulf Stream

The Gulf Stream spreads its warmth over the whole ocean and the winds take up the warmth and spread it over England and France yet leaves Greenland and Iceland cold. Take away this warm wind and Britain and France would be as backward as any country. God predetermines. There are the Rocky Mountains. They hold the moist winds and enrich one side of the range. They are the source of the rivers and streams which supply our wheat-bearing lands with water. North America capable of supporting a population twice that of China.

A Free Agent.

This continent is going to play the biggest rôle of any in the future. The Lord reigns over phenomena of mind. Man is a free agent. He can go when and where he pleases. You can't run a nation by steam or an electric engine. Until the Cross gets a hold on the earth God must judge the nations as He did Egypt and Babylon You can't judge the movements of God's plan by a railroad calamity, but everything is moving on towards an end. The clock struck five when the Lord was crucified. Then it struck six when Christians of Roman Empire were not content with the catacombs and came out and gained control of the whole Empire. The clock struck again when the Lollards of Wycliffe would not be downhearted by persecution. The clock struck again when the Puritans of Queen Elizabeth's reign left their homes in England and came to the unknown country known as America. The Clock struck again when the bonds of slavery were broken in the United States and 4,000,000 negroes were released. The clock will strike twice yet, once when commotion and struggle between labour and capital ceases and again when all war shall cease and every man shall be a brother. When? I do not know.

Incudes the Individual

The Lord's reign includes the individual. There is not an isle or a living thing which is not included in the thought of God.

"The Lord reigns let the Isles rejoice." (Psalms).

Perhaps we often think what the Lords thinks of our little insignificant world when there are millions of other earths revolving round each of millions of other suns. But God is master of detail as well as the infinite. With one hand he puts a ring thousands of miles in circumference around Saturn while with the other hand he puts the colouring on the wing of a butterfly. He takes care of everything living no matter how small. When your good spouse says, "Swat the fly" but there he is gone, God took care of that fly. Not a sparrow falls to the ground without the intervledge of God.

On Behalf of the Righteous.

God's reign is on behalf of the righteous. His throne, His Empire founded on righteousness. If God thinks more of a beast than an He takes more care of the That is exactly what He does. I thinks more of a man than a He takes more care of the That is exactly what He do God thinks more of a righteous than He does of a man He more care of the righteous That is exactly what He does then you ask if God is not imp Yes, God is impartial. Every man the same chance for salvation when man comes under His p tion He takes more care of him

The War; A Mystery

There are mysteries that cann explained both among nations among individuals. For instance great war is a mystery. People what is wrong with Christianity the God of the Bible with Ger and her Allies? No. The Kaise thinking of the God, Woden promised in the event of victo allow the Germans to drink fo frothing beer from the skulls of enemies. That is the God tha Kaiser was thinking of. Is the of the Bible with the German drove their prisoners insane, ra the nuns of Belgium and France ed Edith Cavel and shot C Fryatt? Is the God of the Bible Turkey, the ally of the Hun, massacred 800,000 Armenians t them out in boatloads and dro them like rats? Is the God of Bible with Bulgarians who sco their prisoners to death and the Austrians who in the first of the war used their Russian oners so badly that they near died and later scourged and cru their Italian prisoners?

Why is it that your boy is ing under the poppies in Fla fields and some other boy not t god is allowed to come home. not know. No theologian or an else can tell you yet it is in plan."

Change in Ford Policy

Genuine Ford Parts at any Reliable Garage

The Ford policy in the past has been to supply repair parts only through Ford dealers.

The number of Ford Cars in use is growing so rapidly that wider provision for Ford service must now be made.

Many Garages not authorized to handle Ford Service have been repairing Ford Cars and using parts of inferior quality (parts not manufactured by Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited), thus causing inconvenience and additional expense to the Ford owner.

It has, therefore, been decided to supply genuine Ford parts—made in the Ford plant—to any reliable Garage which is rendering service to Ford owners.

TO THE OWNER—This means that wherever he goes he will find a Garage giving an authorized Ford Service.

The familiar Ford Sign will be displayed everywhere and it will mark the Garages where genuine Ford parts are supplied.

It will no longer be necessary to "hunt up" any special Garage to obtain genuine Ford parts.

It will not be necessary to accept any parts that are not made by Ford—the Ford owners can demand genuine Ford parts.

This will mean authorized Ford service everywhere—greater convenience—better service—prompter service.

TO THE GARAGE MAN—This new Ford Policy makes it possible for every good Garage to become a Ford authorized Service Station. This means that he can secure genuine Ford parts—made by Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited—at a discount; that he can, by improving his service to Ford owners, build up a larger trade in this rapidly growing part of the Garage business.

Bread Was Made of Disgusting Mixture and Butter Was of Tallow From Sick Horses and Dogs —Letter Received by Mr. Emile Baumer From His Brother.

FOUR YEARS OF SUFFERING

Peterborough, Jan. 10th, 1919.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly allow me some space in your valuable paper for a translation of a letter I received from my brother, who has been living in Alsace during the war. This letter might be of some interest to your readers.

Bischweiller, Nov. 30th, 1918.

Dear Brother,—By this time you will have received the card which I have sent you from Strasbourg, on the day our liberators, the French troops, entered the city. There is so much news now and so many surprises, that I don't know what to write first. At the present time French soldiers are billeted in our town, the first ones since 48 years. They have a better appearance than the Huns, which we had here stationary for four and a half years. They also have plenty to eat and good red wine, which makes our mouths water. A half year more under Hunnish rule and we all would be no more amongst the living. Very many people died of starvation, and we all are like skeletons. Across the Rhine in Germany, it was far worse; that is why they had to give in. The foolish German people believed everything they had seen in the papers. We would read all the time that the British and her allies had nothing more to eat on account of the German U-boats, which sank everything in sight, but we Alsatians knew different. We didn't believe it; we knew it was only German bluff. We used to get meat, butter and bread by the ounce. If you only could have seen the Huns which were garrisoned here. Amongst them were hump backs, cripples, some with only one eye, lunatics and syphilitics. You can imagine what kind of ruses Eugene and myself had to invent to make them believe that we were sick and not fit for the front, or else we also would have been sent to the slaughtering bench of the master butchers, Hindenburg and his gang. Every year we were examined three and four times and very strictly, and yet we fooled their experts through the help of a French druggist, who gave us some drugs to make us feverish sick, and at the same time we didn't shave for three or four weeks, so we had the appearance of epileptics. But it helped alright, but it was no cinch. In the first time of the war there were days of joy and jubilee amongst the German population, all the houses and public buildings gayly decorated with flags, victories after victories. You can imagine how we Alsatians felt. We couldn't say anything, but it is different now. The brutes are over there in their country now, and French soldiers are billeting in their houses. If you could have seen the retreat of the Huns through our town, some on foot, some on horse and some on wagons, with their heads hanging down. They sold everything of their equipment, new blankets, rifles, machine guns. We would get horses by the dozen for nothing, but they were of no use to us, as there is no fodder in the country for them.

All the soldiers wore red cockades on their helmets and on their uniforms; their officers were not saluted any longer. Two weeks before the French entered the town, all of us were wearing the tri-colour cockade of France. On Nov. 23rd the first French soldiers arrived in autos, and what a reception. I can't describe it. It is like a dream, like a fairy tale, but yet it is true. Nobody works, everyone celebrates and so on for the last two weeks. You can see thousands of French flags and flags of the Allies in our town. I also met some English and American soldiers in autos. I cried out to them, "Hallo, Englishmen," "Vive les Anglais." They stopped and gave us a good handshake. The older inhabitants of the town wept like children for joy. The troops were in command of General Rampson, who was given a great reception, and who gave some rejoicing speeches. Amongst the old French veterans was one who fought in the Crimea and who wears the medal with the bars Sebastopol, Inkerman, Alma, given to him by Queen Victoria. To him General Rampson gave special attention and kissed him on both cheeks.

I will also tell you what we have had to eat during the last four and a half years. We received every day a half pound of bread per person, but it is a different kind of bread than you have. It was a mixture from acorns, horse-chestnuts, bark of pine trees, dried mushrooms, fishbones, rye, oats and barley all ground together. Of butter we received three ounces in three weeks per person. After a while we received a substitute, called war fat. It was made out of tallow from sick horses and dogs. The tea was made out of strawberry leaves. The vegetables were red beets, plantain, sorrel and all kinds of weeds. The tobacco was made out of leaves from hops, cheeries, beeches and rhubarb. We had to wash ourselves with potter's clay instead of soap; hemp was made of hop tendrils and nettles, and out of this the cloth was made; some clothes were also made out of black dyed linen sheets. The towels, handkerchiefs, shirts and even clothes were made out of paper, which was made from pulpwood stolen in Russia by the Huns. The potatoes were $7 a bag, butter $8 a pound, eggs $3 a dozen, beans $1 a pound, apple cider $1 a quart, honey $2 a pound, one pair of boots $16 to $25. The soles on the boots and shoes were made out of wood. The Russian prisoners, who were working around town for the people, used to search the garbage pails for potato peelings, and they boiled a soup out of it. The Huns tyrannized us for 48 years, but never mind, they are gone forever. They are the most wretched, debauched murderers, incendiaries, imprisoners, rogues, thieves and bandits on the face of the earth. All the business houses have the following inscription on their shop windows: "To the public of Alsace-Lorraine and to the French soldiers: Don't buy anything in a store run by a Boche. Remember the 47 years of oppression and tyranny. Remember the period from 1914 to 1918."

Well, I must come to a close now; next time you will hear some more news.

Your brother,
HENRI.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for giving me a space in your valuable paper, I remain, sir,

Yours very truly,
EMILE BAUMER,

First Airship Was Built Back in 1709

Brazilian Priest Who Invented First Flying Machine Was Honoured by the King.

Men had the "flying fever" — coveted the power to fly—even sacrificed their lives to the hope of winging their way across the heavens, long centuries before the airplane actually rose from the ground.

Archytas, the friend of Plato, had the idea, when he puts his wooden pigeon in flight from a pulley, and set it in motion by compressed air from valves. Leonardo da Vinci had dreamed of flying for years before he made his automaton eagle which flew to welcome the Emperor Maximilian as he entered Nuremburg, and lighted on the banner that waved above him. Through the Middle Ages men dreamed many dreams of sailing up through the blue in bird-like machines, which dipped, careened, thousands of feet in the air, as they do to-day. They dreamed on, planned, spent long years trying to perfect a flying machine, died—with nothing gained.

No one of that age came so near the fulfillment of his dreams, however, planned so systematically for the aircraft's mechanical perfection as Father Bartholomew Laurent, a Brazilian priest, whose invention of the first "flying ship," in 1709, brought him the grant of a professorship in the University of Coimbra from the King of Portugal, a large pension, and an exclusive right to his patent. Death penalty was put upon anyone who presumed upon the "express license of the inventor."

Father Laurent foresaw the great commercial future of the airplane, and was undoubtedly the first to plan an air mail route. His flying ship was to carry letters between Portugal and her colonies, which then "bordered the extremities of the earth." The flying ship was eventually to bring an air route for the whole of Europe.

An old London Post of December 22, 1709, blazoned news of the invention abroad, with an engraving. People believed in it. This was no freak invention. Others had failed, but surely a ship of such marvellous design would fly safely, and more speedily than anything travelled on land or sea, making at least two hundred miles in twenty-four hours as her inventor claimed she would do.

In his address before the King of Portugal, Father Laurent, in explaining his invention, pointed out to His Majesty the advantages of sending instructions to generals in distant battlefields by the flying ship. He also pointed out how quickly necessaries could be brought to places under siege, and how much easier merchants could obtain their wares from foreign ports.

"Many misfortunes and shipwrecks have happened for want of maps," he said, "but by this invention the earth will be more exactly measured than ever, besides many more advantages worthy of Your Majesty's encouragement."

As a "flying ship" Father Bartholomew's invention was the most wonderful contrivance that could be imagined. The only trouble with it was that it couldn't fly. For some reason, it never even tried to fly. In every way — logically, arithmetically, mechanically and aeronautically —the Brazilian priest had demonstrated that his machine couldn't help but fly. But when the great day came for the trial trip, and all Portuguese land was agog with excitement — something happened. Perhaps one of the amber beads slipped off the net; perhaps some vandal bored a hole in the bellows—history does not record what happened, except that Bartholomew didn't show up and the flying ship didn't go up.

The editor of Chamber's Book of Days, published in England sixty years ago, in commenting on the invention, said: "At last a more extended knowledge of ity and the relations subsisting bet us and the atmosphere surrounding globe, has induced us to discard all fool attempts to emulate the powe the feathered tribe as chimerical." The editor lived almost long enough to the first airplane, yet he undoubted would have remained incredulous of t uses "flying ships" have been put to the past war. Could Father Bartholomew have seen their activity his o comment would probably have been, told you so."

Mayor Duncan Urges Caution In Expenditures This Year

Outlines the Problems the New Council Must Deal With, and Indicates the Possibilities of Heavy Demand on City's Revenue and of Increasing and Permanent Debt—War Taxes Disappearing But Construction Work Has Accumulated—Suggests That Street Railway Purchase be Deferred.

TEXT OF INAUGURAL ADDRESS THIS MORNING

Mayor Duncan surveyed the special civic problems and general work confronting the Council this year in the following address at the preliminary meeting held this morning for the purpose of organizing the committee:

Gentlemen:—

I am pleased to welcome you to Council of the City of Peterborough at our first meeting for this year. It is gratifying to me to welcome back three of the members of last year's Council, and I wish also to give a hearty greeting to the Aldermen who occupy seats here for the first time or who have returned to the Council after several years' absence. It is not often that we have so many changes in the personnel of the Council, and I miss members who gave a great deal of time and did valuable work last year for the City, but I feel certain that we are all animated by the one desire, to give the best service possible to the municipality, and we can look forward to a year of earnest effort and I hope, and have no doubt, a year of successful effort in administering the affairs of the City and in advancing its interests.

We meet to-day under circumstaces much more gratifying than those of a year ago. Then our Dominion was engaged, together with the other parts of the British Empire and the Allies of the Empire, in a bitter struggle with Germany and the other nations which had plunged the world into war and were striving to impose their yoke upon all other peoples. Thank God, that war is over. Our enemies have been defeated, and have had to accept the conditions laid down for them in the terms of the armistice drawn up by the Allies and will have to accept in the same way the final terms for peace which will be prepared. We can now hopefully expect that a League of Nations will be established which will make war highly improbable if not impossible and that will to a very large extent relieve the people of the world of the great burden of maintaining military establishments.

Assistance for Soldiers.

We know the most valiant part which the Canadian soldiers, including thousands from Peterborough, took in defeating the savage enemy. Many of our men have laid down their lives and rest in the fields of France and Flanders, and many have returned or will return to us maimed and crippled, while others who have bravely fought will happily return in good health. For those who have died in the war a suitable monument should be erected in the City. Those who have returned and who will return should be provided with accommodation where they may gather and where their Association may conduct its business. The Association now has rooms, but they are not suitable for the numbers who will use them. I know that the people of Peterborough will want to erect a suitable monument for the fallen heroes, and I am certain that they will provide accommodation for the returned heroes. It is our duty, as I see it, that we as members of the Council should not only co-operate with the citizens generally in these two important matters, but should take a leading part in them. This I know you will be pleased to do.

We have had difficulty, especially lately, in meeting the soldiers as they return, as we always like to do, because we are often not given notice of the time at which they will arrive. I will be pleased to take this matter up with the Chairman of the Reception Committee and see whether something cannot be done by which we will be informed of the time at which the soldiers will reach the city.

With respect to the civil re-establishment of the soldiers, there is in Peterborough a branch of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, which assists the soldiers in procuring employment, and the Council I know will be pleased to assist in this matter in any way that they can.

The Bridge and Sewage Plant.

One of the several very important matters to be dealt with this year and that will require our immediate attention is the construction of sewage disposal works. This work should have been carried out several years ago, but difficulties in securing a location and the great war have delayed it. It will now have to be taken up promptly and completed.

The construction of the Hunter Street bridge is another important and pressing matter. As you know, a sum of money was voted by the ratepayers to construct this bridge and one at London Street. Tenders were received for the building of the Hunter Street bridge, but they were so high that none was accepted. It is necessary for us to consider and decide the best way to proceed with this work.

A New Housing Plan.

The subject of housing has been brought to the attention of the Council. At the time provision had not been made in the law to enable the Council to deal with it, and in fact such provision has not yet been made. But towards the end of last year a circular was received setting out the plan by which the Government of Ontario will lend money to the cities for this purpose, and it will be the duty of this Council to consider what action should be taken in the matter.

Prospect of Good Roads Scheme.

In various parts of the Province the Ontario Government has adopted roads as Provincial Highways and as Provincial County Roads and is considering the adoption of others. So far no road which is in or approaches this county or city has been so adopted nor, so far as I am aware, has been under consideration by the Government with such action in view. The road from Toronto east, passing through Port Hope, has been adopted as a Provincial Highway, and it would be well for the Board of Works to consider the advisability of taking action with other municipalities to have leading roads in this neighbourhood, for example the road from here to Port Hope, taken over as Provincial Highways.

The Manufacturers' Committee.

It has for many years been the policy of this Council to facilitate the establishment of manufacturing industries in the city and this subject would appear to assume especial importance at this time. The period of reconstruction may result in the establishment of new factories, and in the location of branches of United States and British concerns in Canada, and we should be on the alert to secure new industries for the City. This is a matter in which many citizens can assist and we will be pleased to receive their co-operation. I would suggest that the Manufacturers' Committee hold a meeting at an early date and consider their policy and plans for the year.

Street Railway Problems.

Extensions of the street railway and improvements in the service of the railway are, of course, under the control of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, but the Commission operates the service for the people and without any purpose of making a profit. The Commission, I feel sure, will give sympathetic consideration to any suggestions made by the city, and it might be a good plan to have the subject of extensions considered by a committee of the Council with representatives of the Board of Trade or other persons especially interested. This subject will no doubt be taken up promptly by the Railway committee.

The question of the purchase by the city of the street railway and gas plant was broached last year by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, but a request made by the Council for information has not yet been complied with. It is perhaps just as well that this matter should stand over for a time.

The Two Platoon System.

Last year the members of the Fire Department were given to understand that their request for the adoption of the two platoon system would be considered early this year. There is no doubt that the firemen have a strong argument behind their request, and the promise for prompt consideration should be carried out. At the same time the Fire, Water and Light committee will be called upon to act carefully, with three objects in view, to comply as far as possible with the reasonable request of the firemen, to at least maintain the present insurance rate basis and to increase the tax burden as little as possible with justice to the men and the service.

I would like to see early attention paid to the railway passenger service given to this city by the Canadian Pacific Railway and strong representations made to the authorities of that railway on the subject. The service to and from Montreal is entirely inadequate and very unjust to the city and other improvements in the service can be made without giving the city more than it is entitled to. The Railway committee might obtain the co-operation in this matter of the Board of Trade, the manufacturers and others who are especially interested in a proper railway service.

Should Fix Appropriations Soon.

It is necessary for the careful management of the finances of the city that the appropriations be made as soon as possible. If expenses are incurred before the budget is prepared the Council may be hampered when the work of preparing the estimates and striking the rate is taken up. I hope that the committee will give attention at once to their financial requirements for the year and prepare their estimates, and that in the meantime only necessary expenditures be made or incurred.

The Tax Outlook.

The tax rate was increased last year owing to the grants made for patriotic purposes. I understand that we will not be called upon this year for a grant to the Patriotic Fund, and I hope that the Provincial Government will relieve the municipalities of the Provincial War Tax. Even without these demands it will be necessary for us to use caution and good judgment in the expenditures in order to conserve the financial resources of the city. There are large demands ahead such as the building of the Hunter street bridge and the construction of the sewage disposal works, with perhaps more school accommodation, and we must be very careful in taking any action that will increase the permanent charges upon the City Treasury. I hope that the other bodies which are entrusted with the expending of public funds, and for whom we have to raise the money they require, will also recognise the circumstances that call for economy and will make their demands as light as possible.

Chairmanships Are Important.

In appointing the chairmen of committees and the members of committees we should have in view only one object, and that is the civic service, and personal preferences and other considerations should entirely give way to that. I would ask the chairmen when appointed and the members of committees to take their work seriously and not to consider that their appointments to these positions are to any degree nominal. We have important work to do, and it will be only through each member of the Council doing his part thoroughly and earnestly that the work will be properly and efficiently done.

In order to do good work we must, like a team, pull together. Differences of opinion as to the best course to pursue will no doubt arise at times, but when we are all aiming at the same object we can respect opinions that do not agree with ours and by friendly endeavour to arrive at a decision that will be the best in the interests of the city. In this way, and bearing in mind that we have been chosen by the people to transact their business for this year, let us keep our duty in view, and while we have responsible duties to perform and hard work to do, we will at the end of the year be able to look back upon our association together and our work accomplished with pleasure and with gratification.

Royal Bank Announces Most Comprehensive Plan of Extension That Has Yet Been Made By Any of the Larger Canadian Banks

Branches Will Be Established at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; Buenos Aires, Argentine; Montevideo, Uruguay and Paris, France.

MONTREAL, Jan. 13. (Special).—As a result of the vital importance to Canada that the foreign trade of the country should be extended to the greatest possible extent, the Royal Bank of Canada to-day made the most important announcement of plans for new branches that has yet been made by any of the larger Canadian banks. The Royal Bank has had twenty years' experience in the foreign fields of Cuba, West Indies and Central and South America. On this account it is especially equipped to handle foreign business and to help attract more of it to Canada. Following on a careful investigation extending over the past couple of years, the Royal Bank now announces that it will help to direct a larger amount of South American trade to the Dominion by the immediate establishment of important branches at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; Buenos Aires, Argentine, and Montevideo, Uruguay.

As is well known in Canadian banking circles no Canadian capital has been required for the extension in foreign countries by the Royal, as the foreign deposits at every point have always greatly exceeded the foreign commercial loans.

In addition, the Royal has concluded arrangements to open a branch at Pairs, France, in order to secure for Canada a share of the commerce which is expected to develop as a result of the rehabilitation of Northern France and Belgium.

The Royal now has the largest number of branches in Canada of any Canadian bank.

Cities Caught With Fuel Supplies In a "Bear" Market

Loaded Up Last Summer to Prevent Shortage This Winter and, With the War Happily Ended, They Find Themselves With a Problem and Likely a Loss Facing Them.

PETERBORO HAS COAL RESERVE

Municipalities that laid up stores of fuel last summer and autumn to anticipate the threatened recurrence of the scarcity and consequent distress suffered a year ago, find themselves caught in a "bear" or declining market, loaded with supplies and facing a loss. Kitchener, for example, usually a forehanded and enterprising community, contracted for $39,000 worth of wood from Algonquin Park to be delivered this winter, and the Daily Telegraph states that the disposal of this wood will be one of the biggest problems the new Council will have to deal with.

"Up to the present there has not been a car load of the wood delivered," says the Telegraph," and the few people who make enquiry refuse to leave orders until the wood is on hand."

One of Kitchener's manufacturers stated that no criticism could be levelled at the Council for its efforts to meet the fuel situation, but he declared that there had been a mistake in not taking the orders long ago. Business men begin selling goods as soon as orders are placed, and the Council should have arranged to accept orders as soon as they had made the contract for deliveries from Algonquin Park.

Guelph's Predicament.

Guelph's plans for another winter of discontent have, likewise gone away. The Herald says, "A feat that will test the City Council's ability in salesmanship will be the disposal of 1,000 cords of hardwood at $16.50 a cord, but whether it can be done or not, the Council acted wisely in purchasing the wood. When the contracts were let the outlook was anything but promising for a sufficient supply of fuel for the winter, and had there been a shortage, the wood would have proved invaluable."

Stratford Caught Too.

Evidently Stratford has also been caught in the wood market, for the Stratford Herald reports the receipt of the invoice of the first car of wood from Algonquin Park. There are seventeen cords in the car which is expected shortly, but the Herald does not give the details of the municipality's contract. It indicates that the Council is worrying about a place of storage, and intends to make a thorough investigation of the fuel situation in view of the report that the retailers have their bins full of coal with no room for incoming shipments.

Peterboro has a reserve of nearly 1,400 tons of coal that was bought by the Fuel Committee to insure sufficient supplies for the citizens this winter. Of course these purchases were made while the war was at its height and German collapse wasn't hoped for before next summer. This coal has been seling at $12.50 a ton, and has been moving steadily for the reason that the dealers have not been able to restore their importations to normal. Some deliveries have been made to consumers in Peterboro at less than $12 a ton, and the new Council may soon find itself in the same dilemma that confronts the cities in Western Ontario. To use a stock broker's expression the city will have to take its loss, and forget it in the jubilation over the victorious peace.

"It's Confidence that does it."

Local Branch Had Big Share

Annual Report of Bank of Toronto is Very Gratifying.

In the splendid record set up by the Bank of Toronto during the past year, as shown by the annual report, it is gratifying to realize that the Peterboro branch has made a notable contribution to the general success. Mr. E. J. H. Vanstone, the local manager, has reason to feel elated at the results.

Net profits of $844,402, equal to 16.88 per cent. of the paid-up capital, and an increase of $41,482 over the previous year, were shown in the statement presented at the annual meeting of the Bank held on January 8th. The amount brought forward from 1917, was $555,306, making a total of $1,399,708 available for distribution. The usual dividend was paid, and after payment of war tax on circulation and appropriations to officers' pension fund, patriotic, and other war funds, and to bank premises, a balance of $625,623 was carried forward to the next year.

Other features of the statement included the growth in deposits to a total of $79,039,274, these showing the largest increase ever recorded in any one year, the gain being $15,131,977, equal to 24 per cent. Cash and gold reserves are $13,922,182, an increase of $1,339,830 over last year, and immediately available assets are $47,018,174, equal to 53 per cent. of the bank's liabilities to the public. This total includes short-date advances to the Dominion government and to the Imperial Government, amounting in all to $19,880,000. Commercial loans total $49,168,819, showing an increase of $6,855,043, indicating continued substantial support of the business interests of the Dominion, and total assets were $100,207,977, an increase for the year of $15,914,079, and the largest in the history of the bank.

BREAD DUMPLINGS.

This is a good way to use dry bread. Soak about a pint of bread crumbs in sufficient milk, then put in one well-beaten egg, two teaspoons baking powder, salt and mix with flour sufficient to make a soft dough. Drop from spoon into furiously boiling water, cover and keep boiling, and when dumplings rise to the top they are done.

ROCHELLE CRIES FOR MUZZLES WHILE GOATS EAT SCENERY

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.—Unless the goat owners of New Rochelle give their charges some sort of a prescription calculated to curb their voracious appetites, something dire is going to happen, and the way things look it will happen to the goats. Rumblings of the situation have been heard in New Rochelle for some time, but the matter has been brought to a head by a letter to the City Council from the Board of Health strongly complaining of the depredations of goats from West New Rochelle.

William E. Flandreaux, superintendent of Beechwood Cemetery, stated in the letter that the cemetery was being visited every day by a herd, or flock, or bevy of goats numbering from twenty to thirty, that partook of a full course dinner off the trees and shrubbery.

Mrs. Mary Miller, of Webster Avenue, complained that the goats chose her front porch for a daily sun bath, and not content with that ate her door mats, "Welcome," and all faster than she can supply them. Mrs. Ellis, of Rockdale Avenue, stated that the goats called at her premises before sunrise one morning and breakfasted on a garden hedge, with the result that nothing remains of it but the roots. Martin Bauer, of Webster Avenue, also complained of damage done his property.

The goats have been boarding in this promiscuous fashion for some time, with a sad result upon the public patience.

The "buck" has been passing from the Mayor, Fred H. Waldorf, to the Police and Health Departments in rapid rotation, and now the citizens are up in arms and demanding an ordinance compelling owners of goats, under severe penalties, to leash, muzzle, or otherwise dispose of their pets, so that the landscape of the city may be preserved.

Peterboro Boy Writes Home

Word has been received that Flight Lieut. T. H. Shields was one of the escorting party to convoy the German submarines to harbor.

Lieut. Shields is a Peterboro boy, being employed in the Peterboro Hardware Company before enlisting. It will be remembered that he flew over the city on one occasion last summer.

In the North Sea.

He has seen much active service in the North Sea, and has had many narrow escapes, the last one being when he narrowly escaped drowning, when the plane in which he and his party were flying sank.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Shields, Benson avenue, and has sent to them a number of pictures of the surrender, enlargements of which may be seen in the south window of Kent's drug store.

Lieut. Shields received all his training in Canada, and proceeded overseas in May of last year. He relates many exciting experiences in his letters, and says that he expects to be home sometime next summer.

No Necessity For Crowding Troops on the Transports

It Was Different When Men Were Bound for France—Argument Made By Mr. Orde—The Food Selling.

OTTAWA, Jan. 13.—John F. Orde, K.C., in opening his argument for the Government Saturday outlined the reasons leading to the enquiry and referred to the prompt steps taken by the Government to have the complaints thoroughly probed.

Evidence had been exhaustive witnesses including officers of headquarters, four military district officers, 51 other ranks returning on the ship, senior members of the conducting party, and the ship's officers, had been examined.

Two factors must be considered, first the desire of the soldiers to get home and of the Government to get them home as soon as possible, and the strain under which the Admiralty laboured to get ships. The shortage of ships was common knowledge and possibly resulted in placing larger numbers of men on available vessels and thus adding to ordinary discomforts.

Another factor to be considered was the absence of previous experience among a proportion of the conducting party. There was also the fact that, the armistice having been signed there was some relaxation of military discipline.

Complaints Not Proved.

The main complaint was as to food shortage, as the complaints as to poor quality of the food had not been borne out. In certain particulars the complaint that food was not properly cooked had been established, but just how general this condition was did not appear. There was no established suggestion that the shortage of food was due to an insufficient supply on board, or to any desire on the part of the ship's company to stint the men. Any shortage that did exist he considered due to the system of serving. There was, however, abundant evidence to show that, while there was plenty of food on the ship, the men did not get enough allowed to them on their plates. There was serious cause for complaint of the method of serving food.

The Food Selling.

It was also clear that food had been sold by stewards but this was an evil it was most difficult to combat. His suggestion was that if selling could not be stopped a sufficient quantity of food should be issued to the men so that even if food was abstracted for sale by the stewards there would also be plenty for the men. The complaint as to shortage of water had not been borne out in a general sense. It was necessary to turn some of the water off at certain periods to prevent freezing but the men should have been informed where to get water when their customary supply failed. There was evidence of cramped accommodation and it might have been advisable to have distributed the men more evenly throughout the ship. As to limited deck space it did not appear there was ground for complaint after the first couple of days. There was no evidence that the ship was verminous, in fact he considered it rather remarkable that with the large number of men brought over vermin was found on only twenty-five.

The desire, for an instance, Mr. Orde said, to keep all the Toronto men in one section and the same with the other districts men probably conducted towards crowding in places.

Some of the men had complained against eating in the same room where men lay sick. "That, while unpleasant," said Mr. Orde, "is probably natural on account of the shortage of shipping and the necessity of getting the men across."

His Lordship Disapproves.

"I have found absolutely no evidence," interrupted his Lordship, "of the necessity of sending men over under such conditions. If they had been going to war it would have been different. But there has been no evidence of the necessity you talk of as to whether 5,000 or 500 should be sent in one ship."

"I think you will admit the desire to get the men home as soon as possible," ventured Mr. Orde.

"Yes, and as comfortable as possible," said his Lordship. "While the war was going on we all saw how necessary it was to get men over as quickly as possible. We all saw how they would be willing to put up with hardships. Am I to understand that the same necessity exists today?"

"The desire of the men to get back may compel necessity," said Mr. Orde.

"The men desire to get back and the Government desires to get them back," retorted the judge, "but under the best conditions possible."

While it was a pity that the men had not been permitted more promenade space at first, the complaints fell when the cause of it was rectified.

Exaggerated, He Says.

Complaints that a latrine had over flowed, had at once been removed when the carpenter fixed the pipe. When the men spoke of standing in an inch of water while washing and shaving something must be attributed to imagination, and to the tendency towards exaggeration. Fatigue parties should have attended to cleaning of quarters.

There was another charge that the stewards were dirty and that the pudding was handed out in their hands.

"That may be, stewards are stewards and, serving so many men, they may have become untidy, but how are you to help that?"

Mr. Orde attributed the existence of unwashed floors to slackness on the part of the corporal in charge of the fatigue party, and not to the stewards.

It had further charged that the ship had been held at Halifax to permit officers and civilians to sober up.

There had been no evidence to prove that. On the contrary there had been the strongest possible evidence to controvert it.

Weakness in Organization

There appeared, however, to be a weakness in the organization, and a certain slackness among all ranks in discipline. The conducting staffs did not appear to get their organization working harmoniously until toward the end of the voyage. Efforts should be made to remove grounds for complaints promptly. "And I submit," he said, that it is for the military authorities to see that that is carried out."

Mr. Orde concluded by saying that he had never attended an enquiry which had proceeded "more comfortably and with less friction than this."

David Loughnan representing the G.W.V.A. declared that the association was not concerned upon whose shoulder blame should be fixed if blame there was. Their desire was to prevent the recurrence of conditions creating complaints. He was convinced that many of the men who had come across were still suffering from overseas disabilities, and that comparisons with east-bound voyages could not be fair, owing to condition of reaction among overseas men returning. "They are not the same men who went overseas," said he.

Considering the fact that there was vacant accommodation on the second-class he believed that those in worst physical condition should have been chosen and given the accommodation. "I do not think that any man would begrudge such accommodation to a comrade in less healthy condition than himself." Only cot cases came back on hospital ships. There were walking cases, however, unfitted for steerage conditions.

Clear's Ship's Officers.

"We feel," he said, "that the evidence submitted entirely exonerates the ship's officers, that their duties were performed, attentively and well."

"All of them?" asked his Lordship.

"All that were heard.

"I do not include the assistant steward. They were getting more money than the men coming back. Conditions generally in connection with distribution should be considerably improved."

Producer and Author of "Sunny France" a Poet

Mr. J. Wilson MacDonald is Also a Musician of Note and Possesses Highly Artistic Gifts.

Mr. J. Wilson MacDonald, Canadian poet and musician, who will produce for the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E., his opera, "Sunny France," was born in Vancouver, and has spent the greater part of his life in Western Canada. He was a distinguished guest at the Chapter dance on Friday night, and his brother artist, Mr. Jules Brazil, who was conducting the orchestra with the "Hearts of the World," played the selection from "Sunny France" as an entr'acte.

Mr. MacDonald has recently published a new book of his poems under the title, "The Song of the Prairieland and Other Poems." A reviewer in the Toronto Globe, "J. L. M.", probably J. L. Middleton, former editor of the Peterborough Review, makes the following comment on Mr. MacDonald's work:

The first thing that strikes one about Mr. MacDonald's work is his metrical facility. He can write in any metre, and once started in the pursuit of his theme he goes on and on, even when he has finished with it. This fluency of metrical utterance is at once the blessing and the bane of Mr. MacDonald's muse; and what might have been a fine poem too often deteriorates into a jingle or a piece of rhythmic verbosity.

As to Mr. MacDonald's quality as a poet that must be judged, not by the accuracy or dexterity of rhyming, but by the intrinsic merits of these poems. That they have merit there can be no doubt, for there is vision and feeling and evidence of wide reading and deep thinking in almost all of the poems. There is also more than a little self consciousness and egotism pervading them. That is not essentially a vicious trait; some egotists are lovable, and most of them are interesting. But while Mr. MacDonald is interesting he does not court our affection. He is too much obsessed with the presence of his audience and is always conscious of the eye of the critic. When a poet declares that he does not care a rap about the critic, he is either whistling to keep his spirits up, or he is a bit of a daredevil. In one place Mr. MacDonald addresses the critic thus:

"Have ye ever torn, O critic-man, your soft, white hands on a thorn?
Then you'll tear them if you touch these lines that deep in the wilds were born."

The hands of the present critic are by no means anaemic, and they are a trifle hard in these days through tending the furnace, so that he will not be alarmed at the above warning regarding these prickly poems.

Mrs MacDonald has shown good judgment in placing "The Song of the Prairie Land" as the title poem of his book, for it best represents his style of thought and expression. In its way, it is a fine piece of work, and contains some striking passages:

"I opened my cabin door,
And the starry hosts were gone,
And I knew that God had gathered the sparks
To kindle the flame of dawn."

The poem is not of this quality throughout, but that is due, not to the poet's conception of his theme, but to his fluency and his tendency to thresh the straw after all the grain has been extracted.

In the "Song of the Snowshoe Tramp" Mr. MacDonald has plenty of latitude, and no one will complain of its length. There is joyous, vigorous life and the clear atmosphere of the Canadian moonlit snowscapes in the poem. It is perhaps the best thing in the book, because it is so natural and spontaneous.

The "Whip-Poor-Will" is an ambitious experiment after the style of Keats' "Ode to the Nightingale." This is all that can be said for it.

There are some fine lines in the poem on "Peace":

"And that vast company we call the dead
Shall know the flag of Peace flies overhead
Because of the new lightness of our tread."

But this poem also suffers through the author's rhetoric— the occasion, however, was a rhetorical one, and the poet merely expressed the universal exuberance.

On the whole, Mr. MacDonald's book is an interesting contribution to Canadian poetical literature. It reveals a personality infused with lofty aspirations in the creative sphere. If the specimen of free verse, "At Brookside Manor," indicates the poet's attitude to life and the Muses, he has yet much to learn in the way of restraint.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Preparations For Opening of the 1919 Ball Season

Players Are Beginning to Return to the Fold—A Few of the Season's Prospects.

Harry Sparrow, the business manager of the Yankees, has packed his old kit bag and pointed for the Southland. His first stop will be at Dover Hall, Ga., where he will shoot doves and otherwise vacationize for 24 hours. Then he will go to Jacksouville hard by and probably close the option the Yankees have on the Southside Ball Park there. He may go further south, down among the poinsettias and the pineapples, but it is almost a foregone conclusion that he will decide on Jacksonville as the training place of the Yankees. The park to be used is the one on which the Athletics trained last year, but Mack resolved to train at home at all costs of rain and wind and weather, has given up his option in order to condition his men in the balmy and salubrious April climate of Philadelphia, to which point incidentally, railroad fare is much cheaper.

Bill Fischer, the catcher who has played with the Brooklyns, Cubs and Pirates, and is now with the Binghamton Club, is divided between a desire to return to big league baseball and to continue as a shoe drummer. He intends to make a flying trip west and be back for the joint meeting next week if possible, there to see whether Miller Huggins wants another catcher. Huggins can do business with Fischer if he wants to. "Looks to me as if Huggins was going to have a sweet team, with those hitters and those pitchers," remarked Fischer yesterday. "I know the third baseman for him if Baker does not return. Baker will return I believe, but if he doesn't Kid Lear, with Toronto last year, is the man Huggins ought to get for third. He was the best player in the International last year."

J. J. McCaffrey of Toronto, and Rube Oldring, slugging star with Connie Mack for numerous years, had a meeting of their own while the Internationals were idling between sessions. Oldring ran over from his New Jersey farm at McCaffrey's behest, and the report is that the former is wanted to manage the Toronto Club.

John Evers says the conditioning ball players have had from army training isn't the sort that will make them directly fit for playing but that it will be an excellent foundation for that practice which sharpens the eye and makes supple the muscles for the twists and the turns of baseball. "Take the case of Alexander," continued the Trojan. "When he went into the army last season he was just able to go through nine innings. Nine innings tired him a bit, showing that he wasn't hardened. Yet when he arrived in France in the summer he pitched a fifteen innings game and did not feel it. He hadn't done much pitching since leaving the Cubs but the benefits of the army army training made it easy for him to get fit, with a little baseball practice, for the strain of a fifteen innings tilt."

An influenza victim, now on the way to recovery, was Walter Johnson—he of the unrivalled speed, ease of motion and unobtrusive ways.

Claude Williams, the pitcher, who left the White Sox, for a shipyard, told Kid Gleason the other day that he would sign with the Sox for this year as soon as Comiskey handed over $186 back salary. Under the circumstances it would appear that Williams would be glad to hand over $186 for the privilege of signing.

Harry Hooper of the Red Sox and the best of all the right fielders, makes his position known in a letter to a friend in Boston. He has his ranch in California to look after, says it needs his attention and that it would take considerable contract to bring him back to the Fenway. "It is doubtful," he says, "if the Boston Club would accede to my demands. I don't intend to pose as any holdout, and want to say that the Boston Club and the Boston fans have always treated me fairly."

From which it may be inferred that Hooper will do his ranching next summer in the eight right fields of the American League circuit.

MIDGETS CAME NEAR WINNING

(Lindsay Warder)

It was anybody's game at Peterboro, and the Midgets came near winning.

The Midgets threw a real scare into the Petes and at full time had the game tied!

Wilford and Maunder were a tower of strength to the Midgts.

HOCKEY

The Peterborough intermediates will journey to Lindsay to-night to meet the Scugog team in an O.H.A. fixture. The Petes line-up will be practically the same as in the game against Whitby, and the players are confident of their ability to pull off a victory.

The only game the Peterborough juniors have this week is an out-of-town engagement. They clash with the Port Hope Ontarios in Port Hope on Friday night.

There will be an important junior practice to-night at 7 o'clock sharp. Coach Jerry Coughlin wants to see all the regulars out sharp on time.

The fans who attended Friday night's game found another reason for rejoicing at the end of the war, Cherrott and Park of the Petes' forward line, though well under the draft age, had signed up with the Royal Air Force as cadets, and if the armistice had not been signed would by this time be learning how to drop bombs on Berlin instead of studying the art of fooling a goal minder.

The Church Hockey League will get under way this week. It should prove a good nursery for future junior O.H.A. players. Incidentally, Hagerman and Williams of this year's junior team, are Church League graduates.

THE MUSHROOM HUN EMPIRE

Forty-seven years is not very long for a great Empire to live, but the German Empire founded in January, 1871, flourished only that long, since in November, 1918, revolution broke out and the empire collapsed.

The German Empire is an excellent example of the truth which German rulers havt always denied, that a State must be founded on, and must walk in, the ways of righteousness. The German religion has been one of blood and iron, the people have worshipped the god of efficiency, believing the gospel of Christianity to be sickly, sentimental stuff, meet only for decadent peoples, and the result has been that their wonderful empire has lasted less than forty-eight years.

The German rulers had long been in the habit of warring against each other, and through these wars of petty rivalry the German people had been slaughtered and impoverished. For a long time the best German minds had been devoted to the problem of creating a German state which should be at peace within itself. The rivalry and jealousy of the rulers brought their efforts to nought however, and things seem in as bad shape as ever when in 1862 Bismarck became Minister-President for Prussia.

He immediately set himself to unite the German nations into one empire, of which his sovereign, the King of Prussia, was to be the nominal head, and he—Bismarck—the ruler. Looking around him, he saw that the proposed empire would need a longer strip of coast line on the North Sea. It also needed the harbour of Kiel. As these belonged to Denmark Prussia—or rather Bismarck—having persuaded Austria to join her, declared war on Denmark. In seven days the tiny kingdom was brought to her knees, and Schleswig-Holstein torn from her. Prussia had her coast line and harbour.

Making Prussia the Master.

Bismarck realized that if Prussia was to be the head of the future Germany she would meet with strong opposition from Austria, who had always claimed the leadership in German affairs. Accordingly Bismarck laid his plans, and two years after the Danish war Prussia fell upon Austria and after a brief campaign of six weeks Austria was crushed. Incidentally, and of course as part of the general plan several of the smaller German states which would probably object to Prussian domination, were also crushed.

Prussia had now succeeded in getting her coast line, and in establishing herself as supreme in Germany. The next steps was to bring all the states to realize that the King of Prussia was the best person to have as Emperor of Germany. Clever statesman that he was, Bismarck realized that the best way to unite Germans of all shades was to have them fighting shoulder to shoulder against a common enemy. Four years after he had defeated Austria Bismarck had inveigled the French into a declaration of war.

The war only lasted a few months In January, 1871, in the Hall of Mirrors, in the ancient palace of the French Kings at Versailles, the Empire was founded. Forty-seven years later, the representatives of the free peoples of the world, gathered in conference in the same palace, laid down the terms upon which this same Empire could have a cessation of hostilities. The Empire was unable to sustain the shock, and after a life of forty-seven years it died.

That is the story of the birth of the Empire. The tale of its life is much the same. Rattling the sword it took what it wanted, no matter to whom it might belong, or what national feelings were outraged by its action. The world suffered in patience, but there came the day when it would do so no longer.

For four years the war raged, and then the Empire, which had been founded on blood and iron, which worshipped the god of efficiency, which was armed with all the abominable devices man could invent, this empire fell before its enemies who fought under the standard of liberty and right.

SKULLS USED FOR BALLS AND BONES USED FOR PINS

In the Early Days—Bowling Has Developed Some Since Days of Egyptians.

Although the origin of the game of bowls is not definitely known, its modern offspring of the alleys is of comparatively recent birth. It will be seventy-nine years ago on New Year's Day since the first match game of bowling was played in America. This historic contest was played on the Knickerbocker Alleys in New York, and marked the real beginning of the indoor sport in North America, although the outdoor game of bowls had been played in New York since its first settlement by the Dutch, as the name of Bowling Green a little park in Lower Manhattan, would indicate.

Bowling is, perhaps the oldest of all sports, since there is evidence to show that it was played by the ancient Egyptians. Skulls were used for balls and the bones of animals for pins in those days. Bowling was popular in England and continental Europe from the earliest times, and was introduced into the American colonies by the English and Dutch settlers Twice, at least it became so popular among the young men that it was outlawed. In the twelfth century in England bowls occupied so much of the time of the rising generation that a statute was directed against it. The same condition prevailed later in New Amsterdam, and Peter Stuyvesant, the Dutch governor, prohibited the playing of the game on penalty of being placed in the stocks for not less than twenty-four hours. This official prohibition was directed specifically against the game of "nine-pins," and the devotees of the sport promptly added another pin to the setup, and so originated the modern contest of tenpins.

Following the first match contest in New York in 1840, the game gradually spread over the United States and Canada. Abraham Lincoln was one of the enthusiasts of the bowling game, and his scores are still preserved at Washington. Sir Thomas Lipton, the British yachtsman, was one of the organizers and long president of the European Bowling Association

BOLSHEVISTS ARE STILL ADVANCING

British and American Missions Arrive at Warsaw

(Special to The Examiner.)

WARSAW, Jan. 13. — With the Bolshevikist forces only 180 miles away the political muddle continues here. General Pilsudski, Polish military dictator, is apparently hesitating to accept the proposals of Ignace Jan Paderewiski. General Pilsudski is said to fear that the pro-Bolshevists will resume street fighting if they are not overawed. He is also reported to be adhering to his original contention the present government of Poland must remain in power until after the elections. The outlook seems to be serious in view of the arrival of British and American missions which have announced that they are unofficial in character. It has been made plain that these missions will do nothing to help Poland unless a stable government is formed. This fact, however, has failed to influence Socialists whose attitude is deprecated by their opponents, who point out that the Bolschevikist are advancing and that the Poles must soon be called upon to protect their frontier from the Baltic to Roumania. Bolshevist troops are moving toward Warsaw from Vilna along the railway. They have already occupied Lida and have Bialystok as their objective.

ADVOCATES EARLY CLOSING HOURS

Sermon by Rev. Canon Davidson at St. John's Church

Last night, at St. John's Church, Canon Davidson, in speaking on the subject of "Rejoicing," referred to social entertainments. These were appropriate under present happy circumstances, and should be healthy means of innocent enjoyment and fellowship. It was important, he urged, that they should be willingly kept within reasonable bounds, and it hardly seemed reasonable to continue them through the greater part of the night. He hoped that a disposition might be evidenced to begin at an earlier hour and to end before people became unfitted for the duties of the following day. There was also an undue excitement connected with undul. late hours which was unhealthy and should be avoided.

OFFICIAL INQUIRY

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Jan. 13.—Immediate official inquiry by the Allies into the actual state of affairs in Russia was predicted in certain official circles today. It was hinted that such action was discussed at yesterday's meeting of the associated representatives. British influence was understood to be back of the idea for a searching investigation of the Russian problem. Such an investigation would be conducted by an Allied commission, and would be pushed as rapidly as possible. This commission would report back directly to the Peace Conference.

The plan had materialized to-day to a point where possible members of the American contingent were being mentioned among the names.

William Howard Taft and Elhi Root were being considered for British membership on the commission.

Big Staff of Stage Mechanics Needed for "The Wanderer"

A big staff of expert stage mechanics worked feverishly this afternoon setting up the massive scenery that gives the impressive realism to the wonderful production of "The Wanderer," the dramatic presentation of the biblical story of the Prodical Son. Mr. Roy Hollinger, the stage carpenter, supervised the erection of the Wanderer's home, a spacious dwelling that will give the appearance of the old cement or stucco that was used in ancient times. The stairs and yards into which the discontented son drove his sheep from the field with the distant vista of hills on which he had tended his flock will unfold a scene of essential simplicity, and of solidity that is achieved only by laborious and detailed work. Mr. Roy Hollinger, the stage manager, stated that every piece of scenery will be used in this three-days' production as in the Toronto production at the Royal Alexandra. In fact the baggage cars were emptied this afternoon, and all the props and sets were deposited at the theatre.

Mr. John McRobbie, the property man, stated that "The Wanderer" is a bigger production than "The Whip," the big Drury Lane melodrama that was brought from London to New York intact. Mr. McRobbie was with that company in New York and also with the "Round Up." "The Wanderer," he said, is of similar proportions to these companies, and also to "Ben Hur." The scenes will be exactly as those shown in the big cities of the United States and Canada during the past two years of "The Wanderer's" unbroken successes. It was for a long time held in the east and reached Canada for a short route last season, and made two trips to the Pacific coast. In fact this is beyond doubt the most elaborate theatrical production that has ever been shown in Peterborough, and it is expected that during the three days' presentation here the people of the district will take advantage of the exceptional opportunity of witnessing and enjoying one of the biggest scenic and dramatic successes of the past decade. There are six electricians alone required for this production.

IN MEMORIAM

BLAKE.—To the memory of James Charles Blake, who died Jan. 13, 1917.

We mourn his loss, yet by whose right
Should we mourn, he was not ours.
Created by the Master's hand,
Which took him back, we understand
He lives in heavenly land,
And waits us, safe from temptations powers.

BLAKE.—Also to Pte. Leonard Blake, Killed in action, June 2, 1916
On Flander's fields, the gods of war, an altar made,
And on that altar many sacrificed,
We think of one, to us the fairest bloom
Of all the flowers, in unmarked tomb,
Yet in our hearts no shadowy gloom
Is felt, he's with God's Christ.

Inserted by Mr. and Mrs. E. Pemberton.

Solution in Harbour Strike

Former President Taft is the Presiding Officer.

Canadian Press:

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—The National War Labour Board, convened by the cabled request of President Wilson, decided to-day, over the objections of private harbour owners, to make a finding in the dispute between the employers and the crews, which resulted last week in the strike of 16,000 marine workers and in the tie-up of the most. Former President Taft, presiding, announced that the finding would be in the form of a recommendation that the owners comply with the Board's ruling on the men's demands for a "living wage" and the basis of an eight-hour day.

ITALIAN FINED $250 FOR MAKING STRONG WINE FROM RAISINS

PARRY SOUND, Jan. 13.—An Italian was caught here making what was called wine from raisins, and which contained a high percentage of liquor. Another Italian, who is said to have been a partner in the still, has disappeared. A large quantity of raisins had been used, and the man in charge admitted that eight gallons of the stuff could be made at one brewing. He was fined $250 and costs.

The still, which is the second that has been seized by Chief of Police Kidd and his assistants within a short time, was a very primitive affair. Fermented raisins were used.

Mrs. Claymore Decides to Prolong Her Visit.

CHAPTER LXXXVI

Ruth was surprised at her aunt's attitude. Surprised and pleased. She had expected she would be so opposed to her going to work, that it might make her visit unpleasant. She welcomed the change without, in the least, appreciating the cause. Her aunt had come North with the sole intention of seeing if she could not persuade her niece to give up her work and return South with her. Her meeting with Arthur Mandel, her quick appreciation of his feelings toward Ruth, had caused her to change her mind, and also to desist from disparaging remarks about women who went out into the world and worked.

In general, she had in no wise changed her deep-rooted opinions or dismissed her prejudice against women working outside of the home. But her clever wit had seen at once that for Ruth to continue, was in time to become discontented with Brian, and to realize Mandel's superiority—at least she persuaded herself that this would happen. Not that she disliked Brian Hackett for any particular thing he had done; but because of his failure to succeed financially, she looked upon him as almost a nonentity, one not to be considered in her plans.

When Brian heard that Mrs. Clayborne was to extend her visit, he groaned inwardly. He was not unaware of her attitude toward him, and altho he resented it, he did not allow himself to show that he did. She was a relative of Ruth's, almost the only one she had. He would be as gracious as he could for Ruth's sake. But the very next day he called Mollie King up and asked her to lunch with him, and confided to her sympathetic ears the way he felt because of his inability to be with her as often as he had been of late.

"I shall have to walk a crack while the old lady is here!" he complained. "She's as sharp as a steel trap. No one could put much over on her. And she'd be sure to make trouble if she thought I as much as spoke to another woman. Ruth isn't at all like her," he explained, flushing a little because of what he had said, "not a bit. She never has asked me not to see my old friends—not that it would do her any good if she did;" he added, "she does as she pleases, I do the same. But, you see, this aunt brought Ruth up. She's as rich as mud. But for all the good it does us, she might as well have nothing. What she has sticks like mud too—sticks to her. Not that I want it for myself, but had she not been such a fight-wad, Ruth would not have gone to work."

"She went to work, then, because she wanted more than you could give her?" Mollie asked. She wondered what Ruth expected. Brian seemed to have enough money to do lots of things the rest of the crowd couldn't do. He must be making money. But some women never were satisfied.

"Of—course! she had been used to maids to wait on her, butlers to pass her food, and all sorts of things like that. The flat we could afford, and the one maid didn't appeal to her." Brian forgot that they had no maid at all until Ruth took her position, and then paid for one—at least, he forgot to mention it to Mollie.

"Poor Brian!" and her hand crept across the table and rested for a moment upon his. The sympathetic gesture affected Brian almost to tears. Mollie was such a good sort! she understood a fellow. "I should think almost anyone would be happy with you even if you couldn't give them all they wanted," she added consolingly.

"A loaf of bread and me, didn't appeal to Ruth. I don't blame her, mind you; but it makes it darn lonesome especially when she is away."

Why he should be lonely, when she was not at home (inasmuch as she never had left him save when out of town), he did not explain.

"Of course it does! men always want their women folks at home when they get there. It isn't quite fair tho, Brian. You men think you can stay out as much as you please; but none of you want us to do so."

"A woman's place is in her home." He returned so almost savagely that Molly laughed a rippling little laugh and then told him to pay the check and go back to work.

Brian did as he was told. He loved these little domineering ways of Mollie's; so different from Ruth's desire to defer to him. Mollie bossed him so prettily.

"No?"

"That aunt is going to the opera and I have to act as escort," Brian knew that the seats had been sent by Mandel, but he had no intention of taking Mollie into his confidence on that subject.

"My, but you are the swells!" Mollie replied.

"Have to be when the old lady is around." Had the "old lady" heard, she would have had further cause to dislike Brian.

To-morrow—Brian Talks of His Hopes and Disappointments to Mollie.

Hot Water for Sick Headaches

Headache of any kind, is caused by auto-intoxication—which means self-poisoning. Liver and bowel poisons called toxins, sucked into the blood, through the lymph ducts, excite the heart which pumps the blood so fast that it congests in the smaller arteries and veins of the head producing violent, throbbing pain and distress, called headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick feverish and miserable, your meals sour and almost nauseate you. Then you resort to acetanilide, aspirin or the bromides which temporarily relieve but do not rid the blood of these irritating toxins.

A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, drunk before breakfast for awhile will not only wash these poisons from your system and cure you of headache but will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary canal.

Ask your pharmacist for a quarter pound of limestone phosphate. It is inexpensive, harmless as sugar, and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

If you aren't feeling your best, if tongue is coated or you wake up with bad taste, foul breath or have colds, indigestion, biliousness, constipation or sour, acid stomach, begin the phosphated hot water cure to rid your system of toxins and poisons.

Results are quick and it is claimed that those who continue to flush out the stomach, liver and bowels every morning never have any headache or know a miserable moment.

PLUNGED INTO ABYSS.

The Great Moral Collapse of the German People.

To the roof of the world, Switzerland, came last August many leaders from Germany and Austria. Seventy per cent. of the people in Switzerland speak the German language, read German newspapers, during three years were pro-German in sentiment. The rich men of Germany, also, have large investments in Switzerland, and go to Zurich, Berne and Geneva, in summer, to look after their financial interests. Little by little, the Swiss has begun to break with Germany, and for the first time had during the three months prior to the signing of the armistice, begun to talk freely about the leaders, the people and the interior conditions of the fatherland. One had much to say about Germany's forfeiture of influence and standing among the rest of the world. Another said that the entire German people had been debauched by the pan-German party in Prussia, and after years of tutelage, the people of Bavaria and Saxony alike had become as cruel, lawless and tricky as the Prussians. The testimony of another concerned the interior conditions of Germany, so carefully concealed from the Allied nations. Strangely enough, he at once excused and explained the cruelties of the Hun by talking about the Prussian Guard. "The Allies do not seem to realize who our Prussian Guards are, or from whence they came."

"You must remember that they are illegitimate children; this means that they are born generally of powerful and for the moment lawless parents; oftentimes they are of our very best class. At birth illegitimate boy babes are put into the state orphan asylum, and reared to be members of the Prussian Guards. They are trained as Spartan children were trained. Any sort of kindness on the part of the nurse is rigorously forbidden. They are taught that they must protect themselves and get what they want by strength. The way in which they are educated brutalizes them thoroughly." This man claimed that no nation in the world had such a guard as the Kaiser, but he conceded their cruelties in the same breath that he was praising them for their iron Spartan lives. He spoke of them as one would suppose the old Romans would speak of pitiless gladiators. These men stated that the German losses were about 4,500,000; 2,250,000 men dead and about 2,000,000 crippled or permanently invalided, who will never recover a man's strength. But most significant of all was a statement by A Swiss officer in Berne — that volcano where all the agents of all capitals meet, squabble, fight, trade, curse, bribe, where every breath one draws is sulphurous and filled with a deadly gas. Defending the fatherland in one breath, this man exclaimed in the next that there was a crime wave sweeping over the fatherland. He said that little boys have become murderers, and little girls thieves, and young women trickstars, and that he had often heard it said that since the beginning of the war, in Berlin alone, 300,000 illegitimate babes have been placed in charge of the state authorities. In view of the fact that that represented three years of time and several millions of people, he figured over three 90,000 illegitimate babes a year, in order to emphasize the endurance of the German people. The conclusion from many facts, verified by the mouth of many witnesses in Switzerland, is that long before the war began Germany suffered a moral collapse; the people lost the sense of right and wrong; conscience, pity and kindness have been Prussianised. And this is what Mr. Muelhon, former head of the Krupp works, now living in Switzerland, means when he says—published not long ago, he spoke of the Kaiser as shallow, a poseur, selfish, arrogant, treacherous and corrupt, cunning, a liar by nature and a traitor by education. In this connection one recalls Burke's sentiment: "History shows that when men in high places yield to their kaiser impulses, the people, imitating their leader, straightway plunge into the abyss."

Sunday Battles.

Some of the fiercest engagements of the war just ended were fought on Sunday.

The fiercest of the battles in the Wars of the Roses was actually fought on Palm Sunday. This was the battle of Towton in 1461, and ten years later the battle of Barnet was fought on Easter Sunday. Ramillies was fought on Whit Sunday, 1706.

Both Bull's Run and Shiloh, in the American Civil War, were fought on Sunday.

It was on Sunday that Wellington issued that famous order, "Ciudad Rodrigo must be carried by assault this evening."

A glad Sunday for the British Empire was that "loud Sabbath" when Wellington defeated Napoleon at Waterloo in the vain attempt on the part of one man to dominate the world.

The Wedding Ring.

Among several theories as to the origin of the wedding ring is one which is to the effect that before the time of mints and gold coinage the gold money in Egypt was made in the form of a ring, usually worn on the finger as a convenient method of carrying and safe keeping. The men and women therefore had all their gold or wealth made into rings, and for the majority of people these rings were no larger than the plain gold bands of to-day. Thus, when the bridegroom placed the ring on the bride's finger he meant exactly what the modern service makes him say—he did openly endow his bride with all his worldly goods.

Stars Mark Rank.

In both the American and French armies stars mark a general's rank. Thus a French brigadier wears two stars on his sleeve, and a general of division three. A brigadier-general of the United States has one star, a major-general two and a lieutenant-general three.

The North Coast of Norway.

Jonas Lie, a well-known writer, spent his boyhood on the northern coast of Norway, and it is Nordland which he depicts in "The Visionary." So successful was this volume that he was sent at the public expense to Nordland in order to make a study of the manners and characters of the dwellers in the polar zone.

"In Nordland," he says in "The Visionary," "all natural phenomena are intense and appear in colossal contrasts. There is an endless, stony-gray desert as in primeval times, before man dwelt there; but in the midst of this are also endless natural riches. There is sun and glory of summer, the day of which is not twelve hours, but last continuously, day and night, for three months—a warm, bright, fragrance-laden summer, with a wealth of color and changing beauty. Distances of seventy to eighty miles across the mirror of the sea approach, as it were, within earshot. Myriads of birds are singing through the air, like white breakers about the cliffs."

In the harbors typical boats of the north are still to be seen, with high prow and stern, though now they are only used as smaller rowing boats. Not many years ago, however, these were the only kind of fishing boats used, larger, of course, than the rowing boats of to-day, but just as open, and looking very picturesque with their square sail and the clean-built body, reminding one somewhat of the old Viking ships. They were, however, unpractical, the sail having to be lowered when the boat had to "go about," and the boat turned by means of oars. Now motor vessels have replaced them, which of course has meant greater comfort, and increased profit.

THE TANNHAUSER LEGEND.

It Belongs to Italy and Not to Germany.

The great war has proved no less damaging to the pretensions of German scholarship than to the arrogance of Teuton aristocracy. It has brought out, in relief all the stronger because of the exceptional circumstances, the fact that intellectual life, no less than national, has its Alsace-Lorraine and its unredeemed Italy. A striking example of the latter is the current attribution of the famous Tannhauser legend not to Germany, which it has so long found its home, but to Italy. A touch of irony is added to the matter by the knowledge that it was a German who pointed out the Italian origin of the supposedly Greek legend.

The usual view of the legend has been that it was at one time current all over Germany, and that it survived, as late as 1830, in a popular song at Entlibuch. It may be traced back to the fourteenth century, and originally seems to have been associated with the period of Teutonic paganism. "According to some legends," says the Britannica, "the Vennsberg is the Hoselberg or Horselberg, a hill near Eisenach associated with the Teutonic goddess of the nether world, who was known by various names, such as Hulda, Hilda and Hel. Among the attendants of Hulda was the faithful Eckhart, and in the preface to the Heldenbuch he is said to sit before the Vennsberg, and to warn passers-by of the dangers to which they may be exposed if they linger in the neighborhood. The legend has been reproduced by several modern German poets and forms the subject of one of Wagner's operas."

The name Tannhauser (this time with a single n) also belongs to a thirteenth century knight and minnesinger, whose adventures may have been fused with the old legend.

This view of the myth was exploded by a scholar named Dubi in an article published in the Zeitschrift des Vereins fur Volkskunde (Journal of the Folklore Society). It seems that the attribution of the legend itself to Germanic sources was due to the fact of its being connected with the knight just referred to. Dubi, however, shows that the real Mt. Venus of the myth is the Monte delle Sibille; in his researches he discovered that the Germanic Tannhauser story was a translation of the legend, or rather group of legends, that had sprung up about this mountain, which is supposed to have been situated near Norcia. An Italian commentator calls attention to the fifth book of "Guerrino il Meschino," in which Guerrino experiences marvelous adventures on the mount of the sibyls, leaves it, and after various vicissitudes obtains the pardon of the Pope. Similar legends are found in the fifteenth century, but the name of the mountain by this time has become identified with the Greek goddess. A cleric, writing in the fifteenth century, tells the tale of a man who lived for a whole year upon that mountain, a prisoner to the wanton demons, finally liberating himself and receiving full absolution from John XXIII. It is thought that the legends traveled from Italy to Switzerland, and made their way thence into Germany.

As regards the tradition that Mt. Venus was mt. Horsel (the Horselberg referred to above), Dubi points out that this opinion is no older than the nineteenth century.

Changed Name of Dynasty.

On July 17, 1917, King George announced to the Privy Council the new name of the Royal House and family to be "the House of Windsor." The council unanimously indorsed the announcement and the proclamation making it into effect was published the same day.

Silk Worms.

Until the sixth century the silk worm was cultivated only in China, where the precious products and the secret of its cultivation were guarded with vigilant jealousy so as to insure China the monopoly of silk manufacture.

Takes Mud Baths.

Capt. J. A. Lewis, M.C., formerly G.T.R. trainman at Brockville, now bathes daily in the River Jordan, but in Palestine, writes that he takes his does not enjoy it.

FOOD FOR LAYING BIRDS

Most Economical Ration, in View of Conditions, Discussed.

Contagious Abortion Makes Necessary the Sale of Valuable Animals at a Sacrifice — The Disease, However, Will Yield to the Treatment as Explained.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

A PULLET requires more feed than a hen, if it is intended that the pullet produce eggs. A bird to lay well must have a surplus of feed over and above body maintenance. The excess of feed above body maintenance goes either towards growth, fat, or egg production.

Poultry feeds are divided into two classes: one, whole or cracked grains, commonly called scratch feed, and the other, ground grains, commonly called mash.

Scratch feeds are generally fed night and morning and are scattered in straw in order to induce the birds to scratch or take exercise. A mixture of two or more kinds of grain usually gives better results than one single grain, largely because individual birds' appetites vary from day to day. A good mixture for the winter months might contain as much as fifty per cent. good corn, either whole or cracked; if corn could not be had and the birds were accustomed to eating buckwheat, the buckwheat would answer nearly as well, or one could use twenty-five per cent. buckwheat and twenty-five per cent. corn. To the corn or buckwheat could be added twenty-five per cent. of barley, ten per cent. of wheat screenings, and fifteen per cent. of good oats. If one was obliged to do so, almost any of the grains could be fed alone with the exception of oats. There is too much hull or husk on oats to use entirely as a single feed.

At present for a mash feed we are using the standard hog feed. If the ground grains are to be fed moist or mixed with cooked household refuse then the mixture should be one that will mix to a crumbly state, but if fed dry in an open hopper the above is not so important.

The mash feed is the one where the animal meals are generally given. The amounts vary from ten to twenty per cent. of the mixture. The animal meals used are commonly high grade tankage and beef scrap. Where one has plenty of skim milk or buttermilk the other animal feeds are unnecessary. Some use green cut bone; cooked refuse meat, such as livers, lights, beef heads, etc.

A very good mash can be made of one part each by measure of shorts, barley meal, and ground oats. Corn meal could be used in the place of the barley or with it. If one is short of green feed or roots, it would be well to add one part of bran. Perhaps the simplest mash to feed from an open hopper is rolled or crushed oats. We have used this, when the birds had milk to drink, for a number of years with excellent results.

Laying hens require plenty of green feed. Cabbage is one of the best green feeds. Roots are very good, but clover leaves should be within reach as well as the roots. Sprouted oats are used to a large extent on poultry farms. When the birds get accustomed to a green and succulent food it is generally wise to give them all they will eat. A pen of fifteen pullets will eat a fair-sized head of cabbage almost every day or one hundred hens will eat a peck of sprouted oats day after day.

Abortion Should Not Be Neglected.

Some cases of abortion are the result of injury to the dam due to a nasty fall or bad kick. In such cases the trouble is not likely to spread to other members of the herd. With the majority of abortion cases, however, the trouble is due to an infectious disease which is very readily spread to other members of the herd.

The disease apparently is localized almost entirely to the uterus. Here an inflammation is produced which may result in the expulsion of the foetus, dead or alive, at any period of gestation. In most cases of infectious abortion, however, the foetus is expelled dead. A frequent complication of such a case is the retention of the foetal membranes by the dam. If these are not removed after a few hours, death from blood poisoning is almost sure to occur.

The bacilli which cause the disease are present in large numbers in the fluids, foetal membranes and foetus. Consequently, every care is necessary to prevent these from contaminating anything with which other stock is likely to come in contact, either directly or indirectly. All should be gathered up carefully and burned or else buried deeply in quick lime. Then the hands and clothes of those in attendance should be thoroughly wash with a disinfectant, and a strong disinfectant used freely all around the stall, particularly on the floor.

The dam should be kept in a stall by herself, as there will be a fluid discharge from the vulva which may last for weeks. Disinfectants should be freely used in the stalls, and the external genitals, thighs, tail and back of udder should be washed daily with a satisfactory disinfectant solution. For this purpose a two-per cent. solution of lysol is strongly recommended. Strict attention should be paid by the attendant to the thorough disinfection of his hands or other parts of his person or clothes after handling the patient.

The dam should not be bred again until some weeks after all discharge from the vulva has stopped.—Prof. D. H. Jones, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Took Severe Cold ON HIS LUNGS

COUGHED PHLEGM and BLOOD.

On the first appearance of a cough or cold, do not neglect it, but get rid of it at once before it has a chance to grow worse, and gets settled on the lungs, causing bronchitis, pneumonia and other serious lung troubles.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will cure the cough or cold on its first inception and perhaps save you years of suffering.

Mr. G. F. Stratychuk, Canora, Sask., writes: "Last winter I took a most severe cold on my lungs and was coughing up phlegm and blood most of the time. I had the cough for over two months, and took a great deal of different medicines, but found no relief from them. At last a friend advised me to take Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I did, and it gave me great relief in a very short time, and to-day I am enjoying good health again."

The marvellous results that Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup has achieved in its cures of coughs and colds has caused many so-called "pine" preparations to be put on the market, which do not contain any pine whatever. See that you get the genuine when you ask for it.

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Demobilizing Canada's Army

THE actual work of bringing back our soldiers to Canada and getting them out of khaki is in the hands of the Department of Militia and Defence. Complete plans have been made and machinery organized to handle the work. Every detail has been considered. The plan is harmonious and will work smoothly. It is described here. Notice how every contingency has been considered. How the soldier is cared for at every step. How everything is done for his comfort and to inform his waiting relatives and friends.

Peace is not yet signed. The victorious Canadian Corps is still a fighting unit. But as fast as the situation permits the Canadian Corps in France will be returned to Canada by units allotted, as far as possible, to the areas from which they came. These units will be reconstructed so as to include only men desirious of returning to the area to which the unit has been allotted.

The remainder of the Canadian forces overseas will be returned in drafts of 500 men for each area. Married men first, according to length of service. Then single men, according to length of service.

Preparing to Leave England.

Canada has been divided into 22 dispersal areas for demobilization, with a dispersal station for each.

1. The province of Prince Edward Island—Charlottetown.
2. The province of Nova Scotia—Halifax.
3. One half of New Brunswick—Moncton.
4. One half of New Brunswick—St. John.
5. The north country of Quebec down to Three Rivers—Quebec.
6. The remainder of Quebec—Montreal.
7. The Ottawa Valley and Ontario down to the Thousand Islands—Ottawa.
8. The Kingston district west to Oshawa and north to the Madawaska River—Kingston.
9. The Toronto district, north to the French River and the north mining country—Toronto.
10. The Niagara Peninsula—Hamilton.
11. Southern Ontario—London.
12. From White River to the Lake of the Woods—Port Arthur.
13. All of Manitoba except the Brandon territory—Winnipeg.
14. The Brandon territory—Brandon.
15. Southern Saskatchewan—Regina.
16. Northern Saskatchewan—Saskatoon.
17. Southern Alberta—Medicine Hat.
18. From Calgary north to Nordeg—Calgary.
19. Northern Alberta—Edmonton.
20. All of British Columbia except 21 and 22—Vancouver.
21. Vancouver Island and the immediate mainland—Victoria.
22. Cariboo, Kootenay and Gale—Revelstoke.

Each soldier overseas chooses the dispersal area in Canada to which he wishes to go.

As fast as they can be absorbed by the dispersal areas a cable is sent to England for drafts.

In this way arrangements are made to handle the men, to care for them, and to find employment for them.

Before a man leaves England he is medically examined, his discharge papers and other documents are made out. All delay in Canada over these details is avoided.

On the Ship.

The transport staff check the medical and pay documents. The Y.M.C.A. provides recreation and entertainment. Twenty-four hours before arrival in Canada a wireless is sent to the port giving details of any men who are sick and in need of hospital care, and general information that will ensure speedy transport from boat to train.

Wounded Men.

Wounded men are brought back on hospital ships in the care of Army Medical Corps. They are taken on hospital trains to the various military hospitals and are in charge of the military authorities until medical treatment is complete.

In Port.

Halifax and St. John, are the ports of disembarkation in winter. Quebec and Montreal will also be used in summer. Immediately upon arrival of troops, the officer commanding wires a list to the Soldiers' Aid Commission in each province who notify the men's relatives. He also wires the Dispersal Station to prepare to handle a certain number of men. A third wire is sent to the general officer commanding each military district, through whom the dispersal station is again notified. This gives the dispersal station a double check.

Various voluntary organizations and the citizens of Halifax, St. John, Quebec and Montreal all give soldiers every assistance. Canteens and club rooms are open. Coffee and cigarettes are provided. Telegrams are sent for the men.

A permanent transportation committee of [illegible] experts, representing the C[illegible]he G.T.R., and the Canadian National Railways, arrange for special trains to meet every transport.

On the Train.

Troop trains consist of colonist, tourist, commissariat, standard sleeping and dining cars. A Y.M.C.A. representative is on every train.

Should a stop-over or delay become unavoidable, the men are provided for. Barracks and an ample food supply are available at the following divisional points: Halifax, Amherst, St. John, Mount Joli, Levis, Megantic, Quebec, Montreal, Cochrane, North Bay, Port Arthur, Winnipeg, Brandon, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton, Revelstoke, Vancouver.

The principal city in each area is the dispersal station. When the troop train pulls in, the relatives and friends of the men have been notified and are on hand. Voluntary organizations have motor cars at the station. Municipal reception committees are also on hand.

In each city the military have provided every accommodation for men staying overnight—barracks, rations. Out-of-town men who are given overnight leave and do not wish to remain in barracks can find the best of accommodation at hostels provided by voluntary organizations.

The Discharge.

Men taken sick en route are immediately received by the District Depot for medical treatment and receive pay as part of that unit.

All other men are paraded at the dispersal station. The offices here are so arranged that each man can pass quickly from one to the other and get away in the shortest time.

First comes the ordnance office. Here the men turn in their equipment, except steel helmets and clothing, which they are allowed to keep.

Next is the office of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment. Here each man is given advice and information on the many questions relating to his return to civil life—employment, housing, vocational training, medical treatment.

Men who are unfit for their former employment are taken on the strength of the Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment for vocational training. They are paid during this period and their dependents receive separation allowance.

Third is the paymaster's office. Here the men receive their back pay, clothing allowance of $35.00 and first month's War Service Gratuity.

Finally the officer commanding issues each man his discharge certificate, and in the same office is a railway ticket agent who gives each man a ticket to his home town. The man is now a civilian.

Here also is an information and complaint office. All complaints are dealt with and information given by an officer specially chosen for that purpose.

The dispersal station will supply quarters and meals for men until train time.

The Government's care for the soldier does not end when he passes through the dispersal station. The important work of other departments will be covered in reports immediately following this.

GAMBETTA.

"Every page, every line of Leon Gambetta's letters and private despatches vibrates with his love for France and a made desire to sacrifice everything rather than see his fatherland perish — everything, even the young republic, for which its greatest, its most disinterested founder would, however, have given his life. The fatherland and the republic were so inseparable in his mind and in his heart, and seemed so thoroughly knit together, that he considered that every loyal servitor of France deserved to be trusted by the government," P. B. Gheusi writes in "The Life and Letters of Gambetta," translated by Violette M. Montagu.

"In the hour of France's dire misfortunes this young advocate, who was then only thirty-two years of age, suddenly revealed remarkable talent for organization. By his extraordinary eloquence, by riding triumphant over all obstacles, Gambetta electrified the nation and, by his wonderful and happy knack of knowing exactly when to take the initiative, became the very incarnation of the National Defence. It was as if, at the sound of his wonderful voice, twelve bodies of troops, six hundred thousand men, fifteen hundred thousand guns and fourteen hundred cannons had sprung from the soil of France, prepared to defend the fatherland.

"Among Esquiros' papers was found an account of the installation of the new Minister of the Interior, who had arisen from the ruins of the Imperial regime: nothing more poignant or more sublimely simple characterized the events of the revolution.

"'On the very night of Sept. 4,' wrote Esquiros (the siege of Paris began on Sept 19), 'I received these few words from Gambetta: "My dear Esquiros, come; we need your help."

"'The hotel of the Minister of the Interior was guarded by a few blouse-clad volunteers.' No lights were to be seen in any of the windows of the block of buildings situated in a dark, deserted court at the end of a long avenue. One solitary lamp burned before a big glass door. This door led by a stone staircase to the minister's study.

"'Gambetta was seated before a table covered with papers; he was writing some despatches by the light of a lamp. Notwithstanding his delight at having won the day, he seemed grave and anxious. The interview was very brief, then I departed. While crossing the courtyard of the hotel, I met a handcart containing a trunk and a carpetbag; this was the luggage of the new minister who had come to take up his abode within these silent walls.'"

"On becoming Minister of the Interior, Gambetta also became head of the War Office. He had absolute power over everything. To him fell the grand but fatiguing task of pacifying all parties; he had to repel the invader, or at least try to wrest some of his prizes from him, curb the reaction against the new regime, utilise all offers of assistance, encourage the faint-hearted, and finally inspire officials and soldiers with that patriotic ardor which had never ceased to fill the heart of the great orator and which enabled him proudly to swear —'Never has despair dared to look me in the face!'

"Gambetta's private letters and telegrams tell us with what superhuman energy he struggled and fought for his country's good. By turns head of the state, soldier, intendant, and commissary, he dictated and wrote with his own hand his multifarious commands; we know how he sent daily messages to all his prefects so that France might be kept constantly advised as to the enemy's progress. These papers have been published. His friends and biographers all admire and praise the proud trust and confidence which, even in the midst of the most terrible reverses, could still hold out hope to the nation which refused to die, although for one instant it had doubted his ability to rescue it from ruin."

"Ah! Gambetta was really grand in those tragic moments. One of his most clear-sighted enemies, Gen. Colmar von der Goltz, solemnly acknowledged this fact.

"'Gambetta,' wrote he, 'was a great Minister of War. In France he was nicknamed the Carnot of the Defeat. And yet he proved himself to be a worthy successor of Carnot. His armies would have conquered if they had had a Bonaparte at their head, and if they had had to fight against the generals of the coalition of 1814. The attacks or the suspicions with which Gambetta's personal honor was sometimes assailed are beneath our notice. In this respect he only shared the fate of all great people, all heroes who have fallen from their high estate. Pygmies love to trample on the fallen giant, and thus revenge themselves for the fact that they stand no higher than the soles of his boots. They who were able to read this man's character in his benevolent features will say that he was not likely to line his pockets with gold taken from the sinking ship, his fatherland.

"He did what few men had done before him; and few men after him will ever attain to such heights of grandeur. When we feel obliged to say that he was narrow-minded, we only use this term relatively, while judging the dictator with the same standard which he had set up for himself on assuming this colossal task. He who would carry the world on his shoulders must have the strength of an Atlas, or else the crowd will treat him like a pygmy.

"'Gambetta is head and shoulders above the generality of men'."

WHAT ANIMALS EAT.

Some Novel Figures About Their Foods.

An average cow during her life eats 27 tons of dry fodder and produces 2¼ tons of dry human food in the form of milk, veal from her own calves, and cow-meat from her own carcass. Hence, 12 pounds of dry fodder are required to produce 1 pound of dry human food. The cow eats hay and grass and concentrated foods like bran and oilcake.

A pig eats 7 pounds of barley (6 pounds dry weight), and produces 1 pound of pork, containing half its weight in water. Hence, here again it requires 12 pounds of dry fodder to produce 1 pound of dry human food; but the pig consumes a product which can be made into barley bread, and hence competes with man for a precious bread-making grain.

A fowl eats 100 pounds of corn and meal during 18 months, and produces 180 eggs and 4½ pounds of food when killed. The relation between dry fodder and dry human food is 14 to 1.

A sheep eats 600 pounds of dry fodder in a year and produces 28 pounds of meat. Here 24 pounds of dry fodder produce 1 pound of dry human food. But a sheep also yields 10 pounds of wool, which is invaluable and is supplementary to the food value of the animal.

Finally, a fat ox eats 8 tons of dry fodder during three years of life, and produces 800 pounds of beef, or 250 pounds of dry human food. The astonishing value of 64 pounds of dry fodder for the production of 1 pound of dry human food is revealed. To produce the roast beef of old England requires more than five times the quantity of fodder that is required to product the same food value in the form of milk, veal, and cow-meat. A fattened ox is indeed a costly product. For example, if a steer weighs at the start 1,016 pounds, at the end of three months of fattening he may weigh 1,226 pounds, and if during the period he has eaten 196 pounds of fodder weekly, the dried fodder used in the production of 1 pound of human food will amount to 55 pounds. But if the process of fattening be continued, as is usually the case, then at the end of another three months the animal may weight 1,275 pounds. If the fodder during this interval has amounted to 224 pounds weekly, it may be calculated that 106 pounds of dry fodder yielded only 1 additional pound of dry human food. It was evident that the fat ox was too extravagant a product for England to maintain.—Scribner.

Rebellious Sons.

The King of Roumania was recently reported to have condemned his son, the Crown Prince, to seventy-five days' imprisonment on account of a little affair of the heart and a marriage outside the ring of royal affections. If the story be true the Roumanian monarch and his son have merely added a new chapter to an old story and a long story.

Kings and their heirs have often showed a tendency to differ. Henry II. had a rebellious brood of sons. Henry V. was a wild and naughty prince in his youth; the heir to the throne in Hanoverian days was usually on the worst terms with his father. Russia has always been a land of extremes, and in Russia this little tale of disagreement between the royal father and the princely son was carried to its fullest extent. Peter the Great executed his own son. But Peter was probably a Bolshevist at heart; he believed in sentences of death as the cure for most of the troubles of life.—The Sun.

Gathering Beechnuts in Switzerland.

The Central Control, of Grenses organized last autumn the gatherings of beechnuts, says the Tribune de Geneva. The gathering of nuts was made by the school children under the direction of forest authorities. From these nuts they were able to prepare 1,100,000 pounds of edible oil.

The long and white almond contained in the beechnut has a taste very much like that of hazelnuts. It furnishes a flour which may be converted into bread, and a soft oil which has the advantage of not becoming rancid.

The French 75's.

There is no known 75-centimetre gun. If there were its bore would be more than 29 inches. The famous French 75-millimetre gun has a bore a little less in size than the American 3-inch field gun, being approximately 2.95275 inches; the German 77-millimetre is a little larger than the American, being approximately 3.03149 inches.

Women Workers.

Figures compiled before the war showed that Austria had a greater percentage of women workers than any other country in Europe. To every 100 workmen in Austria there were 42 women; France, 34; Italy, 32; Germany, 30; Switzerland, 29, and Sweden, 21.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

"Fit As a Fiddle"

By GEORGE ELMER COBB

"Ready to go—and able?" questioned Isaac Downing.

"Fit as a fiddle, yes!" answered Silas Green with vim, and drawing himself up straight as a poker.

"At midnight. That's the program."

"Good! Secret as the grave, you know. Mum's the word," and Silas pressed a significant finger to his lips, while Isaac looked mysteriously tragic and impressive. Then the latter winked significantly and Silas blinked with a knowing air and the remark: "Now don't oversleep yourself, Isaac."

"Not likely," was the prompt retort, "as I'm now too stirred up to sleep at all. Be sure to be at the rendezvous at midnight, sharp."

"Trust me," vaunted old Silas. "Don't forget the drum."

"Oh, I pleated that in an old haystack before daylight this morning. And how about the horn, Silas?"

"Up on a shelf in the woodshed. Dunno, but it may take me a few days to get the rust of the horn."

The two old men parted. Isaac lived with an old maid cousin in an humble way on his pension and interest from an investment left him by a brother. Silas lived with his son-in-law. He had once a home of his own, had borrowed two thousand dollars on it, had paid it off, had given the receipt for the money to his wife and had thought no more about it. Before Silas had got the notes and a release from him, the mortgagee died, and soon thereafter the wife of Silas. The mortgagee's lawyer found the uncanceled notes and demanded payment. Silas searched for his receipt, could not find it, and lost his home.

And now, a month after the entrance of their country into the European war, Isaac and Silas, veterans of the sixties, had their patriotic fervor aroused to fever heat.

"It's true, we're old and crippled, but we want to fight again!" was their ardent sentiment, and they mourned that the army could find no use for men over seventy.

"There must be some place for willing patriots like us," insisted Isaac. "I'll wager down at Prescott, where the cantonment is, they'd find some odd war corner to fit us into."

And out of the thought came a grand scheme that the veterans were about to put into execution. Plainly, they decided to run away from home. Like two truant boys they discussed their wonderful plan. While the cousin of Isaac and the daughter of Silas and one mildly slept serenely, the two old fellows were silently trudging down the road leading to Prescott.

They had one man in mind—Colonel Davegal. It was at his office at headquarters that they applied about noon the next day. The adjutant who questioned them as to their mission smiled quietly as they proffered their request. He reported to his superior officer.

"Both of them say they fought under your father in the Civil war," he stated.

Never was there such a welcome reception as that with which the colonel received his honored guests. He invited them to dinner, he showed them all over the camp, he started them back home, pleased and satisfied.

"Gentlemen," he told them on parting, "you want to do your bit, and you can do it best at home. I am going to obtain for you a regular commission to do duty in the line of encouraging enlistment. I want you to get up a home guard company at Acton. With your noble example, and drum and horn, and mass meetings, you sure will shame slackers and encourage many a wavering young man to enlist."

He sent them home in his own automobile. The story got about, and two evenings later twenty of the older men of the town inaugurated the home guard movement. Isaac and Silas, as "chiefs," began to feel that they were quite in military service again.

It was in the parades that were to be a feature of the campaign that the two veterans expected to shine. So far, Silas had not had opportunity or occasion to display his skill on the cornet.

"I'm coming over to your house tomorrow afternoon to practice," observed Isaac.

"I'll be ready for you," promised Silas, and Mrs. Dunne, daughter and her two children were in the garden when Isaac arrived with his drum. Silas had produced the time-worn case containing the cornet. It had been shut so long that he had to disarrange the lock to get it open.

"Here we are," he announced, taking out the tarnished thing of brass and ivory-headed valves. "You get the music ready while I shine her up. Wough! there's dust for you!"

He blew through the mouthpiece and a cloud of dust from the bell end of the instrument and a yellow, cobwebbed paper came out.

"Wonder a nest of mice don't come next!" laughed Silas.

"Why! Hey! See here!"

The old man had unfolded the paper with a good deal of excitement. He passed it to Silas. The latter stared. Then he yelled out to his daughter.

"Nellie, the mortgage receipt! Just where your ma hid it in the old horn years ago! The old house back again!"

"Oh, we're rich! We're rich."

"And all through Silas and I running away from home to join the army!" ended old Isaac ecstatically.

"Yes," replied the patient diner—"fifteen minutes ago. If it isn't too late, though, I'd like to change it."

"Yes. If you don't mind I'll change it to an entreaty."—Boston Transcript.

IN THE CAUCASUS.

Another Racial Problem That Victors Must Solve.

Until the withdrawal of the Russian troops from the two Caucasian fronts, that of Persia and that of Erzeroom, in the December of 1917, the Caucasian problem had nothing in it to distinguish it from the general problem of Greater Russia in relation to the war. Throughout the period when the temporary Russian government under Kerenski was endeavoring to secure a stiffening of Russian efforts against Germany, the Caucasian fronts remained strong and unbroken, and even at their weakest moment in the late autumn of 1917, when Bolshevikism was making its inroads among the troops, the military power which the armies on these fronts represented was sufficient to warn off any ambitious attempts of the Turks. It was when Bolshevikism had gained control in the centre of Russia itself, and the influence of Kerenski had vanished, that the Russian troops, gathering up all that they could bear away with them, strode back to Russia and left the Caucasus with its few included nations to take care of itself. Till that time the Caucasus had been Russia; but from the moment of that desertion the Caucasians became an entity by itself with problems of its own and a danger of its own.

In the Great War, however, no European peoples can be entirely isolated. The fact that the Caucasus had in itself a particular value for both the Allied powers and Germany brought its own problem into the general problem which belonged to both sides in the world struggle.

The individual problem of the Caucasus was racial. Within the mountainous area of the country live the three jarring races of Armenians and Georgians, both Christian, and the Tartar Mohammedans. Religious differences here immediately laid open a certainty of internal division, given the absence of any external force to regulate affairs; while the political jealousies between the two Christian peoples added a more petty, though very definite, likelihood of a lack of unity between Armenian and Georgian in face of the Tartar opposition to both.

Dandruff Soon Ruins The Hair.

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

SEND-OFF GIVEN 5,000 CANADIANS

LONDON, Jan. 13.—A civil send-off was given at Southampton to five thousand Canadian troops leaving for Halifax on the liner Olympic. Thousands assembled at the quayside, and scenes of great enthusiasm and much cheering, both from the ship and shore, occurred. The Mayor made a megaphone speech, praising the troops for their courage and rejoicing in their wonderful victories. He wished them "Godspeed."

Voice of Home Ever Calling.

The man in uniform looks back upon his prior life with a mixture of emotions. It is not unfair to admit that there is a large element of sentiment in this. The soldier has a strong sentimental side to his nature. With the increase of physical and mental stamina there is a corresponding enlargement of purely personal feelings. I recall going through the barracks out in the Philippines as a mere boy, and having the men show me their belongings. Each one had a little box at the foot of his cot wherein were stored the pitiful stock of his treasures. There were pictures of the family, perhaps a mother, sister, or other relative, and more often of some girl. Added to these were small packages of letters, which they read over and over again, and keepsakes of various kinds. The same holds true in every nook of military life. The soldier clings like a big child to such mementoes. It would be wrong to underestimate their importance. Around them hovers his entire mental picture of those at home.

We are not prone to discuss these things much in the army, so it is said, but a confession is good for the soul; we do. Even among the officers there is an omnipresent discussion of sweethearts, mothers, relations, friends. Men would go mad from the monotony of their existence without some outlet for emotion. Even such a casual study as this cannot except the warmth of men's feelings. To play upon the one string unendingly would be tiresome, ridiculous. Out and beyond the surge of work that goes on from reveille to taps, there lurks always the voice of home like the refrain of a remembered tune. It comes out at the most unexpected moments.

Autos In Norway.

Automobiles are being experimentally operated in Norway by acetylene gas instead of gasoline, and the innovation promises to become the general practice, as the supply of carbide is very plentiful in that country, where it is made at the hydro-electric plants. In some instances it is utilized as a gas delivered in tanks and in some other instances it is generated on the car from the carbide.

SICK HEADACHE and CONSTIPATION

CURED BY

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills.

When your liver becomes sluggish and inactive, the bowels become constipated, the tongue becomes coated, the breath bad, and the stomach all out of order.

Then come those terrible sick headaches. They take out every bit of life and ambition, bring on depression, and often end in complete mental and physical prostration.

To keep the liver active, and your bowels moving regularly, is the only way to get rid of the constipation and the distressing sick headaches. Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will do this for you by stimulating the sluggish liver into manufacturing sufficient bile to act properly on the bowels, thus making them active and regular.

Mrs. Winslow McKay, Jordan Branch, N.S., writes: "I have been sick for a number of years with sick headache and constipation. I tried all kinds of doctors' medicines, but none did me any good. I tried Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and after using four vials I am completely cured. I would heartily recommend them to all sufferers."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are small and easy to take; and do not gripe, weaken or sicken as so many pills do. Price 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Embargo on Export Shipment

Canadian Trade Will be Held Up in the Meantime.

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, Jan. 13.—Arresting of almost the entire export shipments of Canada has been practically effected by an order from the Canadian Railway War Board recently issued. At least eighty per cent of this huge trade, amounting to something like half a million tons per month, will thus be backed up in Canadian warehouses, elevators and mills.

"The embargo has been placed because the British and French ports have at present more traffic than they can handle. British Ministry of Shipping has advised us that ships cannot be accepted," says the Board.

The length of time the embargo will remain in force depends on how soon European ports are cleared up.

New Protection for Ford Owners

THERE are now over 160,000 Ford cars in actual use in Canada.

The demand for service on these 160,000 cars has created a big business in repair parts.

The Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, is responsible not only for the cars that bear the Ford name, but for the Ford parts it manufactures and Supplies.

It and its authorized representatives alone have the right to sell genuine Ford parts.

Yet inferior repair parts not made by the Ford Company are being offered to the public as "Ford Parts"—or "Parts for Ford Cars."

The makers of these "spurious" parts have no interest—such as we have—in the performance of the Ford car. They are not under obligation—as we are—to serve Ford owners well.

The result is what might be expected.

Whereas parts made by the Ford Company are made to give Ford service, the inferior parts are simply "made to sell." Genuine Ford parts are made under rigid inspection in the Ford plant from Vanadium and other high-grade steels. The inferior parts, most of them, are cheaply made from low-carbon steel.

The Ford owner, who allows any but genuine Ford parts to be used in his car, suffers more than the actual loss on the inferior parts. Other parts in his car are liable to damage from the inferior parts, and, of course, the Ford warranty behind his car becomes void! There is also the dissatisfaction arising from poor service and repeated breakage.

To protect Ford owners in this situation—

To make authorized Ford Service available to every Ford owner—

To give the widest possible distribution to genuine Ford parts—

The Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, has adopted a new policy.

Hereafter we will supply genuine Ford parts, not only to our regular Ford dealers, but to every reliable garage which is rendering service on Ford Cars. Such garages will become authorized Ford Service Stations, They will display the Ford Service sign.

The result of this change of policy will be an immediate benefit to Ford Owners.

Authorized Ford Service will be available everywhere.

Instead of 800 Ford Dealers—heretofore the most complete service offered on any automobile manufactured in Canada—there will be approximately 3000 Ford Service Stations.

To get genuine Ford parts and the Ford service expected from those parts—Ford owners will have only to look for the familiar Ford sign or the new Ford Service Signal.

Ford
Ford Authorized Service Station
— using —
Genuine Ford Parts

When the Ford Service Sign is displayed it indicates that the garage owner has been authorized by this Company to render Ford service, and has agreed to supply only genuine Ford Parts.

It will prove more than a convenience to Ford owners.

It will be a protection against the damage and expense he might incur through the use of inferior parts in his Ford.

Presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ball

Instructive Address by the Rev. Mr. Craw.

Over a hundred friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Ball on Wednesday evening last and surprised them by presenting them with an address and a handsome reading table. Mr. Ball has sold his farm and is retiring. He has purchased a home in Millbrook and has the agency for the Massey-Harris implements and machinery for that district.

Mr. F. E. Wilson presided as chairman. Mr. Bert Sanderson read the address and Mr. S. L. Connell and Mr. D. W. Tulley made the presentation.

Mr. Ball made a very suitable reply and on behalf of himself and wife and daughter, thanked their many friends for their unexpected kindness and recalled some of the pleasant memories during the past eleven years residing in their midst.

Rev. I. Craw gave a very instructive address, and on behalf of the community, expressed the regret in loosing such a valued neighbour and resident. A short programme of songs, recitations and speeches was given followed by an oyster supper, which made the occasion a very pleasant one.

The Address.

The address read as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Ball and Miss Thelma:

We, your friends and neighbours, have learned with regret that you are about to leave our community in which you have spent so many years, and to retire from farming. You have been very efficient and progressive in your occupation and have shown to us many examples along the lines of agricultural interests.

The long and faithful service that you have given has been recognized by the public. As citizens, you have given freely in time and thought, not only in the affairs of the township, but also, you have given valued assistance to the work of the church. You have been valued members of Springville Presbyterian Church, which has been a credit to yourselves and a benefit to the community.

Your many personal friendships, gained during the past eleven years with us, we hope will ever remain to you a pleasant memory, as it will to us.

May the friendly relationship ever exist in the future, as it has in the past, is our fondest wish.

As you leave our midst, your many friends desire that you will accept from them these words, and they wish you also to accept this reading table as a small token of our esteem, and with it goes, hearty wishes of long life and happiness in your new duties which lie before you.

Signed by the committee,
S. L. CONNELL,
A. E. ANDERSON,
D. W. TULLY.

GRAIN MARKET

The sentiment of the corn market has definitely changed to the bear side since the removal of restrictions to imports of Argentine. The latter can now be put down in New York at $1.27, plus 5c. insurance. Chicago prices of American corn appear to be gradually gravitating towards the Argentine level. ## THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro phosphate, which is inexpensive and sold by McDermid & Jury in Peterboro and most all druggists under a guarantee of entire satisfaction or your money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:— Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards— Receipts, 907 cars, with 3,511 cattle, 246 calves, 2,568 hogs, and 2,075 sheep and lambs.

A little easier tone at the close of the market reflected the slowness of trade generally, though at the opening there was a good demand for the best butcher cattle, and prices for these held good and steady with last week. There was a heavy run of medium quality offering, and before the market closed prices had begun to sag a little.

Calves were steady.

Sheep and lambs steady.

There was something like consternation in the hog market when it was discovered that, with a big run offering, there was practically no bidding for them. The packers for the time being seemed to be clean out of the market, and nobody wanted hogs. Guesses as to prices were all at sea, and at a late hour there were practically no reliable quotations. A report that the British Government has stopped all further orders for bacon accounts for the sudden falling out of the bottom of the market.

To Quickly Remove Ugly Hairs From Face

(Beauty Notes.)

Beauty-destroying hairs are soon banished from the skin with the aid of a delatone paste made by mixing some water with a little plain powdered delatone. This is spread upon the hairy surface for two or three minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed to remove the remaining delatone. This simple treatment banishes every trace of hair and leaves the skin without a blemish. Caution should be used to be certain that it is delatone you buy.

Council Rejected Labour Man for Library Board

Divided Evenly on Choice Between Mr. F. Sollitt and Mr. T. Ogilvie, Who Had Been Recommended by the Trades and Labour Council—Ald. Taylor Cast Deciding Vote.

MR. SOLLITT WAS RE-APPOINTED

Labour tested its strength in the Council at the first regular meeting last night and lost. A by-law was introduced to appoint a member of the Public Library Board. Ald. Turner moved, seconded by Ald. Hamilton, that Mr. Frank Sollitt, whose term of three years expires on February 1st, be re-appointed.

Ald. Gainey moved in amendment, seconded by Ald. [illegible], that Thomas Ogilvie, who had been recommended by the Trades and Labour Council for the next vacancy, be appointed to succeed Mr. Sollitt.

The division came on during the second reading of the by-law with Ald. Taylor in the chair, and resulted in a tie. The members supporting the amendment were Aldermen Morrison, Gainey, Murray, Garside and McIntyre, and those who voted against it were Aldermen Turner, Hamilton, Phelan, Edgar and Mayor Duncan.

It fell to Ald. Taylor to cast the decisive vote. "I don't think I should have to decide this. I don't know either of these men."

The Aldermen laughed at his predicament, and the twenty or more citizens who watched the new Council in action caught it up.

Mayor Duncan remarked that Mr. Sollitt had given every satisfaction on the Library Board, the members of which appreciated his services.

"Who is Mr. Ogilvie," Ald. Edgar enquired.

Ald. Gainey replied that Mr. Ogilvie was a member of the Trades and Labour Council, that he was well versed in Labour matters, and also that the Trades Council felt that they were not represented on the Public Library Board.

Ald. Phelan and Ald. Turner explained that they were voting for Mr. Sollitt because of the assurance that he had given good service on the Library Board.

Ald. Morrison remarked that both men were gentlemen. He had nothing to say against Mr. Sollitt personally.

Ald. Gainey—The idea is that the honours should be passed around.

It was explained that the Council appoints three representatives on the Board, one each year for a three-year term. Mr. E. H. D. Hall and Mr. R. H. Kenner are the two other appointees.

Ald. Murray—Give the decision to the man who is entitled to it, Mr. Chairman.

Ald. Taylor—If I have to decide this now, I will give it to Mr. Sollitt, because he has been on the Board.

City Clerk Armstrong—What becomes of the amendment?

Ald. Taylor—The amendment is lost.

The Board of Education's demand of $194,800 for this year's estimated expenses was referred to the Finance committee. Mayor Duncan pointed out that this sum represented an increase of $13,000 over last year's appropriation.

Ald. Turner expressed the hope that the Board had made provision for the maintenance of playgrounds.

Public Library Needs $6,000.

The Public Library's financial statement submitted by Mr. F. M. Delafosse, showed that the estimated expenses for 1919 were $7,100, and the sum required from the Council was $6,000.

A communication notified the Council that Peck, Kerr and McElderry solicitors for the Quaker Oats Company, were appealing to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board against Judge Hoyle's decision upholding the Court of Revision's approval of the new assessment on the company for school taxes.

Ald. Edgar moved, seconded by Ald. Gainey, that the City Solicitor be authorized to represent the city before the Municipal Board and if necessary to engage whatever additional help he required.

Mayor Duncan advised that this question be referred to the Legal committee for discussion in order that the new members of the Council might become familiar with the details.

Ald. Taylor moved an amendment seconded by Ald. Gainey, that this matter be sent on to the committee and on this vote the Mayor supported the amendment which therewith carried.

Grant to Poultry Association.

The annual grant of $75 to the Poultry Association was passed with instructions that it be paid forthwith.

Board of Health Appointments.

Messrs. James Murty, W. H. Bailey and Harry Morgan were reappointed members of the Board of Health.

Mr. Thos. E. Quinn succeeds Alderman Murray as the Trades and Labour Council's candidate for the Fire Committee.

Ald. Taylor was appointed a member of the Foley Estate committee for two years, succeeding ex-Ald. Strutt.

COUNT KAROLYI FORMER PREMIER HAS BEEN ELECTED

Authority Turned Over to a Popular Government—The Elections in Germany.

Special to The Examiner:

BASLE, Jan. 14.—Count Karolyi, former premier, has been elected Provisional President of the Hungarian Republic, a Budapest despatch reported to-day. The despatch said that the National Council had turned over all authority to a "popular government."

Despatches yesterday announced the resignation of the Hungarian Ministry and predicted that Karolyi would be elected President. The formation of a Socialist Cabinet was also forecast.

CONTINUE IN POWER.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 14. — No matter which party obtains a majority in the National Assembly of Germany as a result of the elections, the Workmen's and Soldiers' Councils will continue in power, Hugo Haase, Socialist, declared in an interview with the "Express," published here to-day. The Soviets, he said, control the factories because of their close understanding with the workers, who have organized political units in opposition to the Bourgeoise party.

The elections, Haase asserted, will be held as scheduled.

Funeral Took Place Yesterday

The funeral of the late Ada Lillian Hunter took place yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence, 220 Boswell avenue.

A short service was held at the home by the Rev. Mr. Pogue. The Rev. Mr. Jull, of Lakefield conducted the service at the cemetery.

The cortege proceeded to Lakefield cemetery for interment in the family plot, the pallbearers being Messrs. H. White, K. Sheehy, L. Gillespie and F. Bowness.

The deceased was of a bright and cheerful disposition and was loved by all who knew her, and was a member of St. Andrew's church. She leaves to mourn her loss a sorrowing mother and father, one sister (not two sisters as was stated yesterday), Mrs. P. J. Gilbert of Fairmount, Sask., and two brothers, Bert and Roland of this city.

One more sweet angel in heaven,
A bright star in our dear Saviour's crown,
Help us, our Father, to whisper
Not my will, but Thy will be done.

Former Kaiser Said to Suffer From Brainstorm

(Special to The Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, January 14. — William Hohenzollern is on the verge of becoming a helpless lunatic, according to information brought here to-day by a prominent Hollander, who has just left Count Bentinck's castle, where he was a guest. He declared the former Emperor talks continually. His conversation is rambling and erratic. He cannot sleep at night, and the guardians of the Bentinck estate frequently see him walking in the park before dawn. Recently he announced his intention of returning to Berlin and was with great difficulty persuaded not to do so. He also is determined at times to surrender to the British.

The Peace Conference

The Representatation of the Smaller Nations Has Been Decided Upon.

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Jan. 14.—A movement was under way to-day to reduce proportionate representation of small nations at the Peace Conference, in order to make the Congress less unwieldy.

Under the original scheme, proposed by France, delegates were apportioned according to the importance of the role their nations played in the war. This apparently has been changed so various powers will be represented according to the importance of their peace interests.

This would not affect five great nations—the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan, each of which would retain five delegates. The other nations would vary between one and three representatives, with a tendency toward reducing the number for the smallest Allies. The British dominions may each have their own voice in the conference, on the ground that each is a separate nation and sent its own expeditionary force to France.

Diplomats who drew up the orginal plan are understood to have no opposition to these changes, who already have been discussed at the Quai D'Orsay.

Has Been Decided.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Jan. 4.—France, Great Britain, United States, Italy and Japan will each have five representatives in the Peace Congress. This was decided upon yesterday by the Supreme Council engaged in the preliminary work of organizing peace procedure. British dominions, it was decided, will be represented apart from Great Britain. Canada, Australia, South Africa and India will have two representatives each and New Zealand will have one delegate. Discussion of the question of Russian representation was postponed. The size of the representation of each nation was decided upon, not as proposed by the French plan, in accordance with part played by nation in the war, but following the American and British plan, in proportion to the extent of interest of each nation in the peace settlement.

Congratulations to Rev. J. R. Webb

ENTERS UPON HIS TWELFTH YEAR AS PASTOR OF MURRAY STREET CHURCH.

On Sunday morning a matter of more than ordinary interest occurred at the Murray street Baptist church. Before the text of the morning had been announced by the pastor, Rev. J. R. Webb, Dr. W. D. Scott stepped to the platform, and said that he had been requested to represent the members of the church in expressing congratulations to the pastor and thanksgiving that this day marked the commencement of his twelfth year as pastor of the congregation. The doctor after speaking of the progress during these years, said that the people are hoping that Mr. Webb will be spared for many years, not only for the Christian ministry but to minister to the Murray street church.

The pastor was taken completely by surprise, not having any idea of the plan of his people. However, he responded in well chosen words, expressing his gratitude, and speaking of the pleasure that he had always experienced in working with the membership of the Murray street church.

The Ex-Kaiser is Growing a Beard

Ear is Affected by Dutch Climate—Still Walks in the Garden Wearing a Fur Coat.

AMERONGEN, Holland, Jan. 14.—Wm. Hohenzollern, the former German Emperor, is growing a beard to protect his ear, which was recently operated upon. The former Emperor's facial appearance, therefore, is undergoing a radical change. Herr Hohenzollern's affected ear is badly influenced by the climate here. His beard is from grey in colour, and while it is still quite short, it makes Herr Hohenzollern look considerably older. The distinguished fugitive shows an improvement in health, and is able to continue his walks in the garden of the chateau where he is living. While strolling he wears a fur great-coat.

The Prince as a Two-Stepper

American Nurses Reported to Have Had the Time of Their Lives.

By Webb Miller.
(United Press.)

AMERICAN HEADQUARTERS IN GERMANY, Jan. 12.— (Delayed.) — The Prince of Wales, not being an American follower of the syncopated Jazz, can hardly be expected to foxtrot in the class of a second lieutenant just out of West Point or some training school.

However, take the word of American girls who should know, the Prince is some two-stepper, even if he is a bit bashful and does blush. A dozen American nurses had the royal time of their lives here last night when the Prince, who was a guest of the Third Army, proposed a bit of a dance. One nurse, however, said she did not want to dance, even with the man who expects to be King of England some of these days, and she didn't.

"The Prince is awfully nice," remarked one of the girls, "but he is bashful and blushes frequently. He blushed especially when second lieutenants in a (highway robbery) dance came along and took his partner, leaving him stranded in the middle of the floor."

Another nurse pointed out that the Prince is not familiar with American jazz tunes and suffered thereby. Others declared the son of King George to be just like an American boy, only much more quiet.

Faux Trial Resumed To-day

Prisoner Describes Methods Employed to Combat the Drought.

This morning, at the resumption of the Faux case, in which Emmet Faux is charged with selling liquor, Faux, who was put in the witness-box, said he first met Bourgan at Calcutt's Brewery before the Temperance Act was in force.

On Friday, December 27, while delivering meat for Jopling's store, he met Bourgan on the Monaghan Road. They had a short talk on the scarcity of liquor, and Bourgan told Faux of the Columbian spirits.

"That is the first that I ever heard about it," said the prisoner. He told Faux to buy some of it, and what nice stuff they could make of it. The recipe was simple. A pint of Columbian spirits with an equal amount of water. Faux did not bring any that evening, but the next day he again met Bourgan on Monaghan Road and obtained $3 from him to buy the spirits. Bourgan said that he would not get the spirits himself because he was caught once making whiskey, and Detectives Meaghe and Newhall were watching him. He got the first bottle of Columbian spirits on Saturday morning, December 28, about ten o'clock. He had the misfortune to break this "flask," and bought another one at 4 o'clock in the afternoon exclusively for his own use. The third bottle he bought in the same drug store for Bourgan, and mixed it half and half with a bottle of ginger wine which he purchased in a local hotel. He took the bottle to the home of Bourgan that evening, who told him that it was too weak. Faux went up town again in a motor car and purchased another bottle of Columbian spirits, but this time he put only a mouthful of water in it and no wine. This bottle, the inquest jury found, caused the death of Bourgan. The contents of the same bottle were analysed by the Government Analyst and found to contain over 73 per cent. proof spirits, yet Faux declares in his evidence that there was nothing but Columbia spirits and water in the bottle, and Columbian spirits is not proof spirit but a product of sawdust.

Argument was heard on both sides and judgment reserved until Saturday.

THE FIGHTING HAS CEASED

There Has Been No Real Fighting in Berlin Since Sunday—Will Arrest Liebknecht.

REVOLT DYING OUT

(Special to Examiner.)

BERNE, Jan. 14. — There has been no real fighting in Berlin since Sunday afternoon, the German despatches reported to-day.

The government was said to have ordered the arrest of Karl Liebknecht, Rosa Luxemburg, Karl Nader, and Police President Eichorn. A number of Czech and Russian agitators have been captured.

The above despatch directly refutes a report circulated yesterday and credited to the Taglishche Nundschau, that Liebknecht was reported killed in street fighting. It is evident that he not only is alive, but still directing what remains of the Spartacan revolt.

Demands That the Allies March Straight to Berlin

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 14 — The "Express" to-day demanded that the Allied armies "march straight to Berlin if the armistice terms are not fully carried out." Anything else it declared, will be but a half measure. The newspaper announced the belief that Germany is neither willing nor able to go through with its agreements as set forth in the text of the armistice, and points to the failure to deliver the promised supplies.

Books Removed From the Shelves

Peterboro Library is Free From Prohibited Literature.

Mr. F. M. Delafosse, the librarian of the Public Library, stated this morning that no literature under the ban is to be found in the library shelves. He recently received the lists and went carefully over the books, removing not only those banned, but two he considered might well be placed on the list.

The public may now rest assured the books on the shelves are absolutely safe.

A step further than removing objectionable literature was taken when the Department was notified, through the Peterboro Library, of books which might bear investigation. The Librarian received the thanks of the Department and the suggested literature was carefully gone over.

One of the few books of a Socialistic nature in the Peterborough Library that has been placed on the banned list and removed, is "History of Canadian Wealth," by Myers. This book was mentioned in the Toronto police court a few days ago in connection with the case of a Toronto workingman charged with possessing Socialistic literature.

President Wilson Plans to Tour the Country

Will Shatter Another Precedent in Effort to Swing Public Opinion in Favour of His Peace Policy.

RETURN TO FRANCE

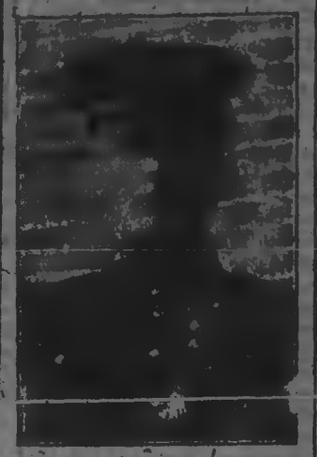
(By Robert J. Bender, United Press Staff Correspondent.)
(Copyright.)

PARIS, January 14. — President Wilson is expected to go before the American people after the peace treaty is signed to urge its ratification and solidify the support of the new world thought it symbolizes.

[illegible] would put the President would put the verdict of endorsement of the peace settlement up to public opinion, rather than to a possibly hostile congress, it was pointed out.

The belief was expressed by friends to-day that Wilson will tour the country late this fall, taking the opportunity to urge new domestic policies that lead themselves to changing international ideals. He is expected to give the key of his policy when he addresses Congress after his return from Europe. His course after that will be determined largely by the attitude in Washington.

That the President will return to France to be present at the actual consummation of peace, seems to be a foregone conclusion. Much of his future domestic policy will rest on the final details of the peace settlement. He hopes that peace will insure the possibility of a new kind of trade relations, built upon friendship, rather than upon treaties and jealousies.



DRIVER JAMES CRUIKSHANKS.

The following letter has been received from Driver James Cruikshanks, who enlisted in the spring of 1915 with the 20th Battery. He was wounded a year ago last May, and has been through all the heavy fighting participated in by the Canadians. His wife and four children reside at 184 Dublin Street:

Mons, Belgium,
Saturday, December 28.

My dear Wife,—I hope that you don't get the flu. I have heard that it is raging in Canada as well as over here. I put in my name to take a course in agriculture and also to learn the French language, but I don't know when school starts. It is better here than before for the troops and we get a comfortable bed, but sometimes we have to hit the floor.

GOVERNMENT MAY SUPPRESS THE SINN FEIN ORGANIZATION

Sober-minded Men Take a Gloomy View of the Situation—Speculation Over the Result.

COUNCIL MEETING

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The intention to forcibly suppress the Sinn Fein organization is attributed to the British government in certain quarters in Ireland, according to a Dublin despatch.

Moderates in Ireland, the correspondent says, are speculating anxiously as to what developments may be expected from a meeting of the Council, which the Governor-General called Monday night at Dublin castle. The correspondent adds:

"Sober-minded, responsible men take a very gloomy view of the situation. It is feared that the government is about to embark on a new campaign of repression, which may include the forcible suppression of Sinn Fein, with such results as are to be expected when the government takes up an armed conflict with seventy-five per cent of the population."

The writer traces this fear to the Tory successes in the recent elections in England which, he says, are regarded as having given "Coercionists" the predominating influence in the state and have created the belief that Ulster will be supreme in determining the British treatment of Irish affairs. Viscount French, governor-general, is also credited with the intention of exercising his authority in accordance with military rather than political considerations.

Ebert Disarms the Spartacans

CITIES ADJACENT TO BERLIN ARE QUIET.

Bolsheviki Are Completely Subdued—Several Leaders Killed.

Special to the Examiner:

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—Order has been completely restored in the cities on side of Berlin, where the Spartacan had established themselves, according to reports received here to-day. Spandau, which has been placed under martial law, is quiet. Fifty-five Bolshevists have been arrested, one of their leaders killed and several wounded. All have been disarmed.

Spartacan leaders at Hamburg have been arrested by the military police who had difficulty in protecting them from the infuriated citizens. The situation there, however, is still tense. Spartacan leaders at Dresden when arrested, admitted that they had intended to forcibly prevent the elections to the National Assembly.

Canadian Troops Reach Russia

BIG BRITISH TROOPSHIP IS REPORTED IN DISTRESS.

(Canadian Press.)

VLADIVOSTOCK, January 14. — A big British troopship, the "Protesilaus," has sent out wireless appeals for assistance. The British cruiser, Kent, has hurried to her assistance, and the Brooklyn of the American navy, is ready to leave if further aid is necessary. The "Protesilaus" broke her propellor, but later reports said that all on board were safe. The first report said that the "Protesilaus" was limping back to this port. It later was reported that the steamer might make necessary repairs and continue to Japan for permanent repairs.

With a total contingent of 900 officers and men the steamer "Teesta" has arrived here. She had on board two companies of Canadian infantry, and machine gun unit, under the command of Colonel Swift.

St. Paul's Young People Organize

A meeting was held in the Guild-Room of St. Paul's Church last evening for the purpose of organizing a Young People's Society. The officers elected were:

Sweetheart's Voice Restores Hearing of Deaf Soldier

Former Cried "Antonio!" and Shell-shocked, Blind and Dumb Veteran Sees and Speaks.

NEW YORK.—An old woman, who leaned on the arm of a younger one, emerged one morning from a tenement at 50 Mott Street. They scanned eagerly the faces of all who passed them as they hesitated for a moment on the steps. The light of confidence as well as that of anxiety was in their eyes; for they had spent the greater part of the night in prayer, and their sanguine Italian spirits told them that to-day, on the eve of Epiphany, that which they sought should be revealed.

From a house almost opposite, at 47 Mott Street, another figure emerged. It wore the gray green uniform of Italy's Alpini, and the slouch hat pulled low over the eyes could not disguise the attentive inclinations of the head this way and that as the sounds of the Sabbath morning in little Italy, the sonorous clanging of the bell in the Church of the Transfiguration a few doors away, came to his ears. The man was blind.

With deliberate step he turned and proceeded northward, away from the sound of the church bells, his gray-tipped stick unobtrusively indicating a clear course. The couple on the opposite side of the street crossed and hastened churchward. The blind soldier and the two women came face to face.

Cried "I See! I See!"

"Antonio!" shrieked the younger woman as they were about to pass.

"Margherita!" cried the soldier, raising his head and looking into the dark eyes that confronted him and then, in a voice that trembled: "I see! I see!"

He was Antonio Spinelli, who last had seen the light on the Carso Plateau more than two years ago, when Italy's victorious armies were wheeling onward toward Trieste. Not, since that moment, when the inarticulate roar of battle had been silenced by an Austrian grenade had Antonio Spinelli spoken.

Sight and speech returned to him under the keen wintry sky of another land, when his sweetheart, Margherita De Luria on his mother's arm, found him in the shadow of the Church of the Transfiguration on the eve of Epiphany.

Called It Miracle.

All the shell shock alienists of the world could not convince Little Italy that it was not a miracle of divine origin. Mott Street had seen it. From the sidewalks, from stoops, from doorways and from windows the inhabitants of that southernmost Italian colony had seen sight given to blind and speech to the dumb. They had seen a dark-haired girl, a grey-haired woman and a man in the uniform of the Alpini drop with one accord to their knees on the cold sidewalk and give thanks.

The story of the miraculous occurrence spread to every Italian centre in the city and was the chief topic of conservation. Antonio's friends vowed that they would contract with a candle maker for an enormous candle, to burn two years, which they will place and light in a church as a token of their gratitude. Wine shops, coffee houses and "gelati" shops were free to those who came with new details of the story or with ready ears for the details furnished by the proprietor.

Antonio, who is thirty-four years old, and an American citizen, had a wine shop in San Francisco and was engaged to Margherita when Italy declared war. Nevertheless, he promptly turned over the business to his widowed mother and returned to his native land, where he enlisted in the Alpini.

For more than a year he fought where the fighting was hottest and bullets, grenades and shells passed him by. Then, in August, 1916, when Cadorna's forces were sweeping to apparent victory on the Carso Plateau, an Austrian grenadier hurled a missile from where he was lying, feigning death. It burst just over Antonio's head and he fell unconscious.

Best Surgeons Puzzled.

The shock had an effect which puzzled the best physicians in the Italian military hospitals. For many months they expended their skill on Antonio without avail. He could neither see nor speak. Surgeons in Rome, Milan and Florence examined him, kept him under observation and re-examined him, but to no purpose. They could only shake their heads and give hope that time or some great shock might effect a cure.

Eventually Antonio was mustered out of service and sent back to New York. This added to his perplexities, for throughout his long siege of silence and darkness he had despatched letters, written by nurses, to his mother and to Margherita, in which he made light of his injuries, leading them to believe that he was virtually well and enjoying a holiday at the expense of the Royal Italian Government.

How to inform them that he was coming home blind and dumb he did not know. So he did not tell them, trusting that some gentle method of breaking the news would occur to him.

But, although definite news of the nature of Antonio's injuries had not reached his mother and Margherita, an official message telling of his honorable discharge and departure for New York did reach them.

Days passed and weeks and brought no further message. They resolved to make the long journey to New York and inquire of the Italian Consul. They arrived and went to the home of friends at 50 Mott Street. All unknown to them, Antonio was staying with other friends at 47 Mott Street.

When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. ## Lavelock Wilson Says Huns Have Violated the Faith of Mariners Handed Down From Early Times.

Every living sailor on any sea has at his call such renown as has Joseph Havelock Wilson, declares Current Opinion. Gaunt, prophetic, hoarse and dominant, the trade unionist and member of the House of Commons, who put the mariner into politics is perhaps the real hero of the British labour union war against the Kaiser, and the curse of this ancient marines is loud and deep upon the submarine. To-day he is a sort of Jingo hero in Great Britain, most bitter of "bitter enders," even to those conservative dailies like the London Post, which once denounced him as a violent demagogue with little respect for law.

Lends Reality.

Wilson is just the type that Marryat and Cooper drew, the very figure realized by Cooper in the poem. He might have stepped out of the tales of Jenkins Hains or sailed with long John Silver. He lends reality by his mere existence to Moby Dick and the Flying Dutchman. Mr. Micawber, Easy would recognise Havelock Wilson by the way he leans against a door, or tosses down a drink, or thrusts his hands into his pockets. His fiery spirit has communicated itself to all the world's marines in the grimmest hunt through endless seas for the lurking submarine—a contemporary version of the pursuit of the white whale. According to Wilson, the German on the high seas has violated the faith handed down among mariners from the times of the Vikings and observed after a fashion by even the buccaneer.

He has an indescribable deference of manner—at times—and he can be as rude as he pleases in a crisis, says the London Mail. He conveys no impression of complexity, either. In fact his simplicity is wonderful, not only as regards appearance, but mentality. He is unconscious of his own uniqueness. He combines the overwhelming and unexpected youth of the bully of the old forecastle, with the authority and dignity conveyed by years and experience. It is this physical as well as temperamental trait which accounts for his leadership. In the House of Commons he has revealed himself as the most bizarre member of that collection of oddly-assorted types. He is the representative of the seaman, of the mariner, of the stoker, of him who is the especial victim of the skipper and owner. He got the Seamen's Union going, which, the London Post remarks, is the supreme achievement of his career.

ARMISTICE EXTENSION

(Canadian Press.)

PARIS, Jan. 14. — The economic terms approved by yesterday's session of the supreme war council to be imposed for the extension of the armistice with Germany, provides that Germany shall hand over to the Allies all her cargo steamers in German and other ports to enable the allies to revictual Germany and such adjacent countries as may be decided upon.

The terms also require the restitution of all manufacturing machinery taken from the invaded regions.

The financial clauses concern gold reserve of the Reichsbank and the issue of money by Germany. Guarantees will be required regarding any removal of Reichsbank gold from Berlin in view of the Bolsheviki activities. Naval conditions demand a strict compliance with the requirements of the original armistice, concerning handing over of the submarines, which have not yet been complied with.

No question was raised regarding the occupation of German ports by the Allies as had been reported. Examination into the question of allied intervention in Poland against Bolsheviki was postponed.

The armistice question thus being settled Marshal Foch left for Treves where the German delegates will be received.

A load of liquor merely adds to a man's load of trouble.

"THE WANDERER."

"The Wanderer," which is here for three nights, made its opening debut last evening in the Grand Opera House. The initial performance in this city of this magnificent play brought out a large house and judging by the repeated and enthusiastic applause it was well received by an appreciative audience. "The Wanderer" is a Biblical play by Maurice V. Samuels, and the scenes presented go back a thousand years, before the birth of Christ. Staged by David Belasco, the show lacks nothing that the art of stagecraft could give it, and the result is wonderfully realistic and adaptable to the theme of the play.

The story is based on the Biblical story of the "Prodigal Son," and is presented in three acts. The first act opens with the appearance on the stage of a flock of sheep, suggesting one of the industries of the time.

Jether, a son of Jesse, tires of the duties that bind him to the parental roof and its associations, and demanding his portion, sets out to visit Jerusalem, in company with a merchant of doubtful character. The next scene shows Jether in the Palace of Nadina, in the ancient city, amid surroundings that are in strange contrast to those which he left behind. Jether is not in Jerusalem very long before he realizes his inability to withstand the many evils with which he is surrounded, and which is fostered by the voluptuous maidens who live in the palace. He takes many false steps and finally with his money all gone, and convicted by his fellow companions of dishonesty in a gambling game, is forced to leave the palace where he had hoped to secure a place in the sun. His return home follows and in spite of his dissipated appearance and sinful admissions, finds his mother willing to receive him back into the home which he had left but a few months previous.

The return of the Prodigal Son arouses hostility in the heart of his brother Gaal, and the situation that follows before Jether is finally and wholeheartedly received back into the family circle, calls for a dramatic piece of acting that is capably and cleverly handled by the principals in this particular scene.

"The Wanderer" is one of the biggest theatrical productions ever shown in Peterboro. It contains everything necessary to properly interpret the various parts and is adequately supported by a galaxy of artists whose dramatic ability finds expression in the many heavy parts with which the play is impregnated.

The play will be presented to-night and to-morrow night and it is expected the citizens of Peterboro will avail themselves of the opportunity to witness one of the best theatrical productions ever brought to Peterboro in a complete form.

Eye trouble does not always mean poor eyesight. On the contrary, some of the most serious troubles occur where the sight is exceedingly keen.

Some of the indications of latent or hidden defects are—

- Distressing Headaches.
- Sharp pains in the eyeballs.
- A pressure on top of the head.
- When the eyes smart and burn.
- Inclined to Dizzy Spells.

Bid Farewell to Secretary Whatley

War Veterans Met Last Evening—New Members Added to Association.

At last night's meeting of the Great War Veterans, seven new members were allowed membership in the local branch, which now has a membership of 368. A larger number were out at the meeting than is usual to do honour to the retiring secretary, Comrade Sidney Whatley, who has been appointed Field Secretary of the Association for the Province. In a brief speech Comrade Whatley gave an outline of the land settlement scheme which is of vital interest to returning soldiers. It was also brought to the notice of the Association that former members who had been dropped or account of arrears of dues were using their G.W.V.A. badge for commercial purposes, and a resolution will be sent to the Dominion Executive asking that authority be given to the various branches to demand from any man wearing the badge their due books to see that they are in good standing.

Farewell Address.

Comrade Whatley, who has been local secretary for the past eighteen months, delivered his farewell address before assuming his new duties. He pointed to the great future of the local branch and strongly urged all members to come out in force to the meetings and make them a big success. He stated that the Peterborough branch was one of the finest in the Dominion and that the Dominion General Secretary had more than once commended the work which it had accomplished. It was on a sound financial basis, but more accommodation was needed for the growing membership.

A vote of thanks to Comrade Whatley was moved by Comrade Staunton Past President, and was tendered by the president to the retiring secretary.

The singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and the auctioning of of a box of cigars and a box of gum by Dr. E. Wood, Vice-President, concluded the meeting.

LOCAL RECEPTION TO EX-PRES. TAFT ON JANUARY 23rd.

Representing the Local Council of Women, under whose auspices ex-President William Howard Taft will give an address at the Grand Opera House on Thursday, January 23rd, Mr. R. R. Hall and Mr. Arthur Stevenson invited the Council last night, officially to assist in offering an adequate welcome to the distinguished lecturer. Mr. Hall reminded the Council that Mr. Taft had always shown a keen and friendly interest in Canada, that he was not only one of the most prominent statesmen in the United States, but he was also a great citizen of the world.

It is proposed that the American friends of Mr. Taft will be his hosts during the afternoon of his visit, and at five o'clock he will be presented with an address of welcome by the Bar Association. An informal dinner will be held in his honour at the Empress at six o'clock, and Mr. Hall requested that the Council accept the invitation from the committee of the Women's Council.

Mr. Stevenson intimated that the Council of Women would be glad if the City Council would assume the reception of Mr. Taft.

Ald. McIntyre moved, seconded by Ald. Garside, that the invitation be accepted and referred to the Reception Committee.

Attendance at Public Schools

The Members of Teaching Staff Are All on Duty.

Since the re-opening of school on January 6th, the attendance of pupils at the various Public schools of the city has been good.

Precautions to prevent the recurrence of Influenza are being continued, and pupils having colds are being sent home until they recover.

The members of the teaching staff are all on duty.

Pupils returning to school, after recovering from an infectious or contagious disease, or coming from a home where such a disease exists, must furnish a doctor's certificate in order to be admitted to school.

PROTECTED DAUGHTER FROM INSANE FATHER

Wife of "Emperor of the Sahara," Jacques Lebaudy, Tells of Life of Terror.

MINEOLA, N.Y., Jan. 13.—A mother's determination to protect her thirteen-year-old daughter from an "insane" father, was declared here by counsel for Mrs. Jacques Lebaudy, now in jail, to be the reason she killed her husband, the millionaire "Emperor of Sahara," in their home at West Burg, Long Island, last Saturday night.

The lawyer, Harry W. Moore, said Mrs. Lebaudy had told him that her husband had tired of her and had menaced the happiness of Jacqueline, their daughter. To protect herself and the girl, the widow said, she had had heavy chain locks placed upon the doors of her own and her daughter's rooms.

Life of Misery.

Wealthy neighbours of Mrs. Lebaudy told of the life of misery they said she had been quietly enduring for years. From a period of ease, during which she spent $5,000 monthly in a palace in Paris, Mrs. Lebaudy they declared was reduced by her millionaire husband to absolute want at times.

Mrs. Chas. A. H. DeSaulles, sister-in-law of Bianca de Saulles, declared Lebaury was a maniac.

"I've been living in a fear for weeks she said. "Recently he wildly drove an automobile through my estate at midnight."

Several women from mansions adjoining that of Lebaudy, called at the Lodge to give words of cheer and encouragement to Mrs. Lebaudy.

Little Jacqueline, the child sought by her father, told the United Press she was afraid of him.

"We never spoke of Papa," she whispered.

The child has never been given an education of any kind, but she is exceptionally keen and petite.

Only four of the mansion's fifty rooms have any furniture. All the rest of the handsome pieces, according to what could be learned, were destroyed by Lebaudy. The water has been disconnected. There was only a hand pump in the basement. The hot water system was wrecked early in the winter.

A NECESSITY IN THE HOUSE.

Most of the common ills of life arise from a torpid, sluggish condition of the liver, Kidneys or Bowels, and because they act on each of these organs in a direct and specific way Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills overcome serious and painful diseases over which ordinary medicines have no control.

Owen Sound Pastor Weds Former Sweetheart in England.

OWEN SOUND, Jan. 13.—A wedding of considerable interest and of an exceptionally romantic character took place in North Buxton on December 17 last, when the Rev. E. M. Lewis, pastor of the P. M. E. Church, Owen Sound, was married to Mrs. Elizabeth Harding.

It was just sixty years ago since this couple were first engaged, but circumstances prevented the wedding at that time. They became separated through time and both married. Sixty years rolled by and they met again, and the romance commenced sixty years ago culminated in their marriage. The newly married but aged couple will reside in Owen Sound.

Germans in the Terrorist Service

FRANKFURTER ZEITUNG DENOUNCES WORK OF LEGATION IN SWITZERLAND.

Further evidence of the character of the 1,000 employees still in the service of the German legation at Berne as late as the middle of September, according to a statement made by Theodor Wolff in the Berliner Tageblatt, and quoted in a special Berlin cable despatch, is found in an article appearing in the Frankfurter Zeitung of November 23, reported as follows by the London Times:

"The trials in connection with the discovery of bombs at Zurich have led to the discovery of a 'terrorist service' of the German General Staff, Switzerland. With the support of diplomatic and consular couriers, explosives and bacilli cultures were supplied, especially to the Italian and French anarchists, in order that they might practice sabotage in their own countries and spread disease among the army horses.

"Of course the German employees in the 'terrorist service' had not the slightest guarantee against the direct employment of these methods in Switzerland itself. In some Swiss newspapers the opinion is expressed that the German authorities would not have been displeased at the outbreak of disorders in Switzerland itself, because they hoped for consequent infection of neighboring countries—of course, with the exception of Germany, which they held to be absolutely immune.

"This terrorist service was not any mere work of the subordinates; quite definite accusations are made against the former Imperial Chancellor, Prince Bulow. Hitherto, in similar cases the German public has been permitted to learn only half the truth; now when the barriers have fallen and speech is free, we can give Switzerland the assurance that this incendiary diplomacy is not judged otherwise in Germany than in the countries which have in the first place to bear its evil consequences."

On November 28th, a Berne despatch said that the new German government was about to remove Baron von Romberg as Minister to Switzerland, and replace him with Conrad Haussmann, a democratic Reichstag leader, as well as cut down the personnel. On Jan. 7th, a Berne despatch referred to Count Max von Montgelas as having succeeded Baron Romberg.

SARNIA, Jan. 13.—When Simon Walker, an Indian living on the Sarnia Reserve, went to fetch a pail of water from the river he was shocked to find a body embedded in the ice and sand.

The police here were immediately notified and the body brought back to Sarnia and placed in Phillip's morgue for identification. A watch and a pocket book were found on the body which served to identify it as that of Arthur Harold, who lost his life in the river, November 30, 1917, when he was engaged as a pile driver at the Port Huron ferry slip. His father John, lives in Sarnia, and a brother Walter at Courtright.

The Annual Vestry Meeting of St. John's Congregation

Financial Report Proved a Fruitful Topic of Conversation—The Retiring Wardens.

The annual vestry meeting of St. John's Congregation was held in the Guild Room last night. The Rev. Canon Davidson presided supported by Dr. E. S. Cameron and Mr. J. A. Aylmer, Wardens and Mr. W. H. Walkey, clerk. The financial statement proved a fruitful topic of discussion and was finally passed on the motion of the wardens after an hours' debate. Hearty thanks of the vestry were given to the retiring wardens for their efforts during the past year, and Canon Davidson at once announced that he had asked Dr. Cameron to again accept office as his warden. On the motion of Mr. Mills, seconded by Mr. Fair, Mr. J. A. Aylmer was unanimously re-elected, Peoples' Warden.

An interesting report of the Sunday School was read by the Superintendent, Mr. R. J. Devey, who appealed for the very best teaching help that was to be found in the parish. A financial report prepared by the Treasurer, Mr. Amus Conway was also read, and it was suggested that it be audited and printed with the general statement for the future. On the motion of Dr. Cameron it was unanimously resolved that the heart thanks of the vestry be sent to the Superintendents, Mr. Devey and Miss English for the splendid work of themselves and their staff of officers and teachers. The support of the congregation was asked for the Sunday School project of raising $200 for the Indian work of the M.S.C.C.

Work of the Choir

A report of the work of the choir was presented by the Choirmaster and Mr. Harry Long in moving a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Devey and the choir, stated that their faithful attendance in such large numbers no matter what the weather might be, and their beautiful rendering of the church services was an inspiration to him and to all who attended St. John's. Mr. George Lenton, seconded and the motion was carried.

The new Synod regulation that a special committee be in charge of all matters pertaining to Missions was brought before the meeting by the Rector and a committee formed to appoint a chairman for this important work. Dr. Cameron introduced the subject of a war memorial for those members of the congregation who had fallen in the war, and after considerable discussion it was arranged that a special vestry meeting should be called to deal with such an important matter.

Hearty thanks were accorded to Mr. A. W. Turner for the unique display of flags at the Christmas decorations.

The Sunday School Executive acknowledged with hearty thanks, gifts of cash or books for the prizes from: the Rector, Miss Hall, Mrs. Ryerson Ritchie, Miss Doris Clegg, Mr. George Lenton, Mr. A. W. Turner, Mr. C. E. Jamieson and Mr. Harry Long.

Mr. Fair was re-appointed to the Nicholls Hospital as representative of St. John's and Miss Archer in a similar capacity to the Board of the Protestant Home.

Council Rejects Labour Man

the corner of Reid and Brock streets, near St. Peter's school, be removed to make room for Norway maples that had been planted to displace them and which were now crowded by the basswoods, was referred to the City Engineer with power to act, on motion of Ald. Edgar, seconded by Ald. Murray.

Damage Claim For Horse.

J. Angleasy, 149 Rubidge street, forwarded a bill for $92.35 for injuries to his horse which, he wrote, was injured on December 23rd by stepping into an excavation at the corner of Dongal and London streets. The claim was sent on to the Local committee.

Mayor Duncan stated that City Engineer Parsons had investigated this matter and had reported that the horse wasn't worth more than $10 according to information he received.

No Reconstruction Committee.

A request that the municipality make a survey of deferred public works, the construction of which will likely be begun this year, was received from Sir John Willison, of the Canadian Reconstruction committee. It was received, evidently because there was no special committee to which it could be referred. The Association sought co-operation assistance by Canadian municipalities to provide work for the large number of men who have been thrown out of employment since Nov. 11th.

Applies For Assistant.

W. J. Henry, caretaker, asked for permission to appoint an assistant in the young lady clerk who had resigned.

Mayor Duncan explained that Mr. Henry wished to secure a man as an assistant.—Referred to the Finance committee.

Rinks For Schools.

16,000 Obsolete Shell Boxes Will Be Given to the Poor

Imperial Munitions Board Turned Them Over to Local Committee for Distribution, Forbidding Their Sale Unless the Proceeds Reverted to the Crown.

FIRST COUNCIL MEETING

Sixteen thousand shell boxes, representing the Imperial Munitions Board's surplus stock in Peterborough was given to the local Patriotic Fund for distribution as fuel among needy citizens. The boxes were in turn transferred to the Fuel Commission, and were inventoried by a committee composed of Mayor Duncan, Mr. F. H. Dobbin and Mr. F. W. Miller. In a letter to the Council last night, ex-Ald. Dobbin wrote that there were 8,000 small boxes for 18-pound shells at the Renfrew Manufacturing Company's factory, which he said were of no use except as fire wood. The distribution of them is under the direction of Mr. Miller, the city's Relief Officer. They are being sent out in lots of seventy-five to persons who have been receiving wood from the city.

The larger boxes for six-inch shells, Mr. Dobbin reported, could be used by the citizens in the disposal of refuse, and for other household purposes. By the Imperial Munitions Board's order none of the boxes may be sold unless the money is returned to the Crown, and the committee concluded that their fuel value was less than the cost of disposing of them.

Mr. Dobbin recommended that the larger boxes be distributed without charge to citizens. They were stout, reinforced boxes, made of the best wood and equipped with rope handles and would have many uses in the average home.

It was stated that the hardware stores would have bought some of the smaller boxes as containers for nuts and bolts.

The Council decided to carry out the intentions of the Imperial Munitions Board. Thus the entire 16,000 boxes, large and small, will be given to the poor under Mr. Miller's direction. The contract price of the large boxes was slightly more than a dollar, and for the 18-pounders about 85 cents.

New papers at Head of List

LONDON, Jan. 13.—A striking fact [illegible] with recruiting is mentioned in a recent speech of Sir Auckland Geddes. Of ten thousand men and boys employed by London newspaper offices five thousand joined the army, and at the moment of the armistice, being signed there were not thirty men fit for general service in all the London newspaper offices. That was a record, said Sir Auckland, which placed the press at the head of every trade group in the matter of recruiting.

Every Woman's Ambition For Rosy Cheeks Now Easily Satisfied

But rosy cheeks, clear skin, and bright eyes, give them to a woman and she is happy.

The woman who attracts, whose fresh, dainty complexion compels admiration, is always careful of her health, particularly of her blood condition. Bad complexion always means bad blood.

Girls, don't let your blood grow thin or watery. To do so brings on haggard looks and declining strength.

Many a woman who has allowed herself to run-down, to develop that tired, worried look has built up again in this simple way. Why don't you try it?

At the close of every meal, just take two small chocolate-coated Ferrozone Tablets—any person can do this in a minute. The action of Ferrozone is apparent at once. It sets you up, makes you feel good, starts up your appetite, aids digestion, brings that old-time feeling of youth into the system again.

Ferrozone puts you on the right road—the one leading to health.

Not a man, woman or child needing blood, vigor, endurance — not a person who is weak, nervous or sickly, not a person in ill-health who won't receive immediate help from Ferrozone.

As a tonic and restorative, as a health-bringer and body-builder, Ferrozone is unrivalled. It cures because it feeds and nourishes, because it contains the elements that build up and strengthen. For better looks and better health try Ferrozone yourself, sold everywhere, 50c per box, 6 boxes for $2.50, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

EX-KAISER'S GUARDS KEEP CLOSE WATCH

All Arrivals in Village Closely Interrogated By Detectives.

AMERONGEN, Jan. 13.—Since the recent illness of William Hohenzollern, the former German Emperor, most stringent precautions have been taken against the approach of strangers to Amerongen Castle. Guards maintain a close watch around the castle. All arrivals in the village are immediately interrogated by detectives, who meet all incoming suffice cars.

When Herr Hohenzollern took advantage of a sudden burst of sunshine Friday to walk in the rose garden with an aide, the apertures in the wall which had been open up till Friday were covered with thick screen curtains to prevent anyone from looking in.

From a point of vantage, however, the correspondent saw the former Emperor walking about briskly. He was dressed in a long grey coat. He remained in the open air more than an hour and talked to his aide while making rapid gestures.

What is your worst fault? What is mine? Are you going to reform with the New Year.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Will Give An Address To-night

Tariff May Become One the Issues of the Day—A New Election Act.

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 14.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier will make his first speech since the London convention, to-night. In his speech at the latter gathering the leader of the Opposition touched but lightly on tariff, and in fact is said to have somewhat disappointed his friends because of the lack of definiteness in the policies which he did lay down. Since then, however, two things have happened. In the first place the Canadian Council of Agriculture set forth a highly radical platform on tariff and other matters at Winnipeg; and in the second place the United Farmers of Ontario pretty well declared themselves for free trade at Toronto. Both bodies also declared themselves as favouring the repeal of "the iniquitious" war-times Election Act.

As a matter of fact, so far as tariff is concerned, the stand of the Canadian Council of Agriculture is pretty well along the lines advertised by Sir Wilfrid in 1911, and in various resolutions in the House since then. It therefore is not surprising that the chief resolution set forth for approval by the Eastern Ontario Liberal Association is a resolution which sets forth at length Liberal Budgets from 1896 to 1911, the reciprocity agreement, the various tariff resolutions of the Liberals in opposition, ended up with the omnibus Oliver-Carvell resolution of the session of 1915.

Gives Its Approval.

To all these the Association gives its approval and the resolution may be said to constitute opposition to the tariff election policy for the next campaign. It is expected that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will to-night declare his approval of the policy set forth, since the resolutions were all submitted for his approval before being put before the committee.

Much speculation exists as to whether Sir Wilfrid will have the resolution above mentioned introduced in Parliament next session. If he does it is fully recognized that an awkward situation must arise and that from the Government side it must be dealt with as a lack of confidence motion just the same as the titles resolution was dealt with last session.

May Bludgeon Bill.

For whatever tariff revision the Government has in view, it does not contemplate anything like the degree of revision set forth in this resolution. Whether there would be any considerable bolt on the part of Union Liberals remain to be seen, though it is somewhat significant that R. C. Hendie, M.P. for Macdonald, and himself a prominent Manitoba grain grower, recently declined to pledge himself to the complete support of the platform of the Council of Agriculture at the coming session, preferring to keep his hands free.

In the matter of the War-times Election Act, this measure in any case expires on demobilization, and no election will be held till after demobilization, but a new election act will be introduced next session. To any disfranchising features the West appear to be strongly opposed, but the Opposition has a further objection. They are opposed to the Dominion laying down the qualification for voters, and favour the retention of the provincial list system.

To-night Sir Wilfrid will practically be the only speaker of the evening.

FARM HAND SUICIDES

Body Was Found Hanging in a Barn.

Charles Crees, a farm hand on the McKay farm, situated on the south road from Allen's Corners in Otonabee Township, committed suicide this morning or last night by knotting a stout rope round his neck and hanging himself to a beam in the barn. The body was found this morning with the rope placed around his neck and directly behind his ears. He was a young man, only 30 years of age. No motive can be attributed for the deed.

The Coroner, Dr. T. N. Greer, is investigating and will decide whether it is necessary to hold an inquest.

Peterboro Intermediates Won Handily From Lindsay Team

Petes Were Always in Front and Were 11 to 6 to the Good When Final Whistle Sounded—Team Showed Great Improvement Over Whitby Form.

TOOK AN EARLY LEAD

The Peterboro intermediates had not much difficulty in earning the decision in their O.H.A. fixture at Lindsay last night beating the Scugog team by 11 goals to 6. The Petes were always in front leading by 4 to 1 at the end of the first period and 8 to 3 at the finish of the second and the result of the game was never in doubt. The winners had too much speed and cleverness for the Lindsay aggregation, although the latter worked hard and never stopped trying.

The Petes showed much improvement over their form in the game with Whitby last week. Their stick handling and skating were both immediately better than in their engagement with the soldiers and they looked all around a much better team. The three regular forwards Rose, Jackson and Evans all displayed fine form individually and at times combined very effectively, while Grover Halpin who is rapidly rounding into his old time form, rushed in splendid style and figured considerably in the scoring. Schultz played a very useful game on the defence and Legros was never better in the nets. Lindsay did a lot of long range sniping and he handled their drives in great style. Kenneally and Lowes were used frequently and both did good work.

The Lindsay bunch although they have had very little practice together put up a stiff argument and were going better in the last period than at any time in the game. With another week's practice and a couple of contemplated changes in the line up they are liable to keep the Petes busy when they play the return game next Monday night. Three of the Scugog team have been Peterboro residents and "Tip" Lipsett who played a fine game at right wing for Lindsay still calls this his home. Nelson Wettlaufer, who formerly played for the Bell Telephone team in the Peterboro Mercantile League and McPhee, the Fenelon Falls boy, who once upon a time wore the uniform of the Peterboro T. A. S. both figured on the line-up, the former being Lindsay's best scorer. "Chuck" Carew did good work at centre and Richman and Metheral on the defence were a hard working pair who ploughed into the man with the puck in a manner that made the path to the nets far from easy. Dennis the goaler stopped a host of shots many of them at close range.

Jim Marsh handled the bill and the teams were as follows:

The Petes pressed from the go in but could not find thenets. Evans was chased for tripping but there was no damage done while he was off. Rose got a clip over the eye and retired for repairs, Kenneally replacing him. After 5 minutes playing Jackson slipped down the side and passed to Evans who found the nets.

Richman was substituted for Lipsett on the Lindsay line-up. Schultz upset Richman in a scrimmage around the Lindsay nets and was chased. From the face off that followed Rose scored with a quick shot.

Lindsay got that back in quick order, Rickman secured the rubber from the face off and going up alone fooled Legros with a nice drive from outside.

Then Halpin got away in one of his old time rushes and working inside after some neat stick-handling easily beat Dennis and the score was 4 to 1.

The figures remained unchanged for the rest of the period.

Early in the second session Jackson stickhandled through the Lindsay defence in one of the prettiest rushes of the night and scored from close in.

A minute later Rose made it 6 to 1 when he tore down the side in a rink-length rush and took Dennis measure with an accurate drive from the boards.

It was pretty well all Peterboro at this stage. The Petes were breaking fast and working well together and they had a decided edge on the play. Their lead was increased when Halpin rushed and passed to Rose who did the trick.

Then Lindsay took a hand in the scoring. On a three man rush which Wettlaufer received the final pass from Richman the former slammed a quick goal past Legros.

Back came the Blue Shirts with another. A combination rush took them inside and although their first shot was wide Chuck Carew scored in the scrimmage that followed.

Richman drew a penalty for tripping. Just before the period ended Halpin went up alone and shooting from outside the defence followed in fast and hammered in a rebound past Dennis. That made it 8 to 3 and the session ended with the score unchanged.

The Petes opened thelast period at top speed. Within the first minute Rose tore off a pretty rush and scored. Schultz drew a penalty for chopping and Chuck Carew following him to the penalty line, Jackson made it 10 to 3 when he drove home a nice shot from the side.

Lipsett and Wettlaufer came on the stage and made things interesting. Metheral broke away with a nice rush and handed the rubber to Carew who scored neatly.

That made it 10 to 4 and Wettlaufer came back with another five minutes later on a shot from the side.

When Wettlaufer repeated the feat after a rush by Richman the Lindsay fans began to see a chance for a garrison finish but Halpin went the length of the ice for a beautiful goal and the bell sounded a moment later.

The summary:

Hellenics Won Two of the Games

Peter Lakis was high man for the Hellenics with a score of 586; while A. Stewart was high for the George Street with a score of 495. The following are the scores of the teams:

25 Rinks Entered the Neill Trophy Bonspiel Here To-day

The first games in the Neill trophy district bonspiel were played this morning, with a draw of twenty-five rinks. Sixteen of the local scheduled rinks were entered, and the remainder were from neighboring towns, as follows: Hastings, one; Millbrook, two; Keene, two; Lakefield, two; and Norwood, two.

This was a highly successful beginning of an annual competition which Mr. Neill hoped to foster together with a closer association and a better understanding among the curling clubs that are neighbours of Peterboro. The ice was a trifle moist but otherwise was in fine condition.

The first draw resulted as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| R. M. Waddell | 15 |
| W. J. Oke | 6 |
| Tom Finlay (Norwood) | 7 |
| J. W. McDermid | 15 |
| J. H. Connal | 12 |
| L. Kelly (Hastings) | 11 |
| W. G. Morrow | 11 |
| J. Allen (Millbrook) | 7 |
| A. W. Archibald | 8 |
| Alex. Kay | 14 |
| W. D. Campbell | 9 |
| Dr. Wightman | 7 |
| W. G. Read | 2 |
| Sayles (Millbrook) | 15 |

The second round was begun this afternoon and it is scarcely likely that the bonspiel will be finished today.

Kelly of Hastings was 3 up on Connal coming home in the 12th end, but Mr. Connal came through with 4, and won out by one shot.

Toronto Bowlers Here To-night

At the Water street alleys the Toronto Bowlers will play a five man team double and singles.

The line up for Toronto will be: Will Stoddard, Bill Bloomfield, Courtright, Church, Hammond.

East Lawn Bowlers Won Two Games

Last night at the Water street alleys in 3-pin League in the B Class, the East Lawn Bowlers took two out of three games from the Shamrocks. Sullivan was high man with 638 for losers. Everett was high with 586 for E. L. Bowlers.

Post Office Inspector Investigates Complaints

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 — Although baseball fans are not enthusiastic concerning the outlook for the sport in France, there may be an honest-to-goodness professional in the game, if Jean [illegible] next season. George Stallings, manager of the Boston Braves, received a letter from Hank Gowdy, the big catcher now in France with the army of occupation, notifying him that he is going to bring with him to this country, Lieut. He will be tried by the Braves next season.

The grain markets continue on the down grade for the coarse grains. # Kept List of Girls He Met

Brian Smith Entertained Young Women, Then Put Them in His Book of "Wild Women."

FORT WILLIAM, Jan. 14.—Young Brian Smith, the eighteen-year-old lad who was sentenced to a term in Stoney Mountain Prison for breaking into Rutledge and Jackson's store, confessed before leaving for the penetentiary to having stolen 11 out of 13 cars that were stolen for joy-riding purposes during last summer. He had one his person a diary and this contained a list of the cars taken under the caption, "Friends Whose Autos I Have Borrowed." He had also another waiting list of cars he intended to steal under the heading, "Friends Cars Which I Intend to Borrow." In another portion of the book is quite a formidable list of local young girls' names under the caption: "Wild Women I Have Known." In this portion of his "memoirs" he gives descriptions of the young women, their traits and just how they entertained him when he took them out for joyrides in the cars he "borrowed." There would possibly be a blushing contest if the young women whose names appear on Smith's list could read the personal observations he made about them.

The pessimist delights in derision of the good resolutions which mark the celebration of New Year in the minds of many people. Shame upon the man or woman who would dull the bright ambitions and desires for the better of any human being! But there is little time to give to habitual mourners and augurs of evil. The new year will be what we make it, so far as our individual lives are concerned, and the man or woman who resolves to be happy in a healthful or selfish way, is taking the first road toward happiness.

RUSSIA WILL HAVE VOICE IN THE PEACE CONFERENCE

Charter of Representation to Be Decided at Next Meeting—League Business to Get Precedence—A Discussion in French.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—Russia may be represented, together with all the other nations that were engaged in the war against Germany, at the first formal meeting of the peace conference. Whether Russia will have present at the time a delegation of prominent Russians, irrespective of party, or other spokesmen, if any, probably will be decided at the next meeting preliminary to the congress. This will be held to-day, because of the opening of the session of the French Parliament yesterday. All the delegations, with the exception of the French, which will be occupied with parliamentary affairs, will employ their time in preparations for to-day's meeting.

The first question to come up before the actual peace conference will be that of the proposed league of nations, and it was made known here that it had been planned for the conferes to devote twelve hours daily to this work, if necessary, until it is on the way to completion. There is some reason for believing that the first plans for the structure of a league of nations to be laid before the conference probably will be somewhat composite, representative of a consensus of opinion on the part of the American, British and French statesmen, who have been discussing the subject. It will not purport to be a finished product, but is intended to serve as a starting point for development.

Foch En Route to Treves.

Marshal Foch, the allied commander-in-chief, is on the way to his headquarters at Treves to meet the German delegates and lay down terms for the extension of the armistice. There was some disposition during Monday's conference to make the terms of the extension more drastic than had at first been proposed, but this was not carried out. The extension, however, provides for the turning over of the German commercial fleet to transport troops, in exchange for food, for the restitution of material taken from France and Belgium and for full compliance with the terms of the orginal armistice.

A start has been made on the machinery through which the American public will learn of the doings of the peace conference. Hitherto the French and the British press had access to much more information than the press representatives from America. The British and French had also been issuing their own official communiques regarding the meetings. It has now been decided to issue a joint communique, prepared by a committee representing all the nations, this to be the sole official outgiving. President Wilson has also decided to communicate with the representatives of the American newspapers of which there are more than 100 in Paris, through the madium of a publicity agent. Ray Stannard Baker, a former magazine writer, has been selected as the agent.

Discussion in French.

An interesting feature of the meeting as also of Sunday's, was that more than two hours of the discussion was conducted in French, of which neither President Wilson nor Secretary of State Lansing has a conversational knowledge and which David Lloyd George, the British Premier, understands to only a limited extent. All the conversations concerning the renewal of the armistice were conducted in French.

The Figaro says that when the question of the publicity of treaties and secret diplomacy was discussed, President Wilson, while supporting the majority in favour of secrecy, expressed the opinion that treaties should be public, although the negotiations leading up to them called for the exercise of a certain discretion.

Those present at the session included Premier Lloyd George and Foreign Secretary Balfour for Great Britain; President Wilson, Secretary Lansing, General Bliss and Herbert C. Hoover, for the United States; Premier Clemenceau, Foreign Minister Pichon, Finance Minister Klotz, Minister of Commerce Clementel, Minister of Reconstruction Loucheur, Marshal Foch, Major-General Weygand, and Admiral De Bon for France; Foreign Minister Sonnino for Italy, and Viscount Chinda and Ambassador Matsui for Japan.

All the members of the Versailles War Council also attended, including General Sir Henry Wilson, the British member.

FOR BABY'S TENDER SKIN.

A child's skin is tender as well as beautiful and eczema may be caused by chafing of clothing, the use of poor soap, exposure to cold or sudden change of temperature. Probably no treatment for eczema has ever proven so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this applies particularly to baby eczema. This ointment is delightfully soothing, stops the itching and consequently prevents scratching. Gradually the sores are healed up and the skin is left soft and velvety.

A Libel on Doctors.

Once the King of the Ghosts lay ill. In all his Ghost Kingdom there was no Good Doctor, so he called in a servant and commanded:

"Go out into the World and get me a Good Doctor—and don't be many days on the way."

"Well and good, Sire, but how am I to know a Good Doctor?"

"To be sure, you look behind the man. Following every doctor are the spirits of the men killed by his treatments. Fetch me the doctor, therefore, who has a small following."

The servant went forth and spent many long days in search. Doctors he found a plenty, but they all had followings as long as the tail of a comet. He was afraid to return to his master.

But at length he found a doctor with only one spirit following. He hastened back to the Kingdom of the Ghosts and presented the doctor.

"How long have you been practicing medicine?" asked the King of the Ghosts.

"I began my profession yesterday!"

We always keep this medicine in the house now ready for use and find that it soon cures coughs and colds."

"THE WIFE"

Brian Talks of His Hopes and Disappointments to Mollie.

CHAPTER LXXXVII

Things did not work out entirely to Mrs. Clayborne's satisfaction. This was principally due to the fact that Ruth did not lend herself in any way to the schemes her aunt had planned. Of course Mrs. Clayborne had said nothing of them; she was far too shrewd to make a faux pas of that kind. But whenever possible she advocated accepting Mandel's invitations, and was tactfully effusive when speaking of him to Ruth.

But Ruth was in love with Brian. Her work done, she was far happier with him than to be at the opera or anywhere else with others. So she managed to evade most of the things Mandel proposed, and to do it in such a way he could but accede.

Brian had tried his best to be natural before Ruth's aunt; but always there was a little constraint in their intercourse a forced pleasantry that was obvious to both of them—and to Ruth.

"Don't act afraid of Auntie!" she said to Brian, one day, "She won't eat you."

"I'm not afraid of her, but someway I feel all the time that she blames me for your going to work; that she disapproves of me as a husband for her neice," putting his feelings into words for the first time in many weeks.

"Nonsense! I don't deny Aunt Louisa felt so at first. You remember her letters. But she's all over it now that she sees what my work is, how happy I am in doing it; how cozy we are, and how nicely we are getting along. Then too, dear, Auntie knows that I love you, that we are happy together. I think she never quite knew how much I cared before." Ruth blushed as she confessed her love for her husband. She was naturally diffident where her affections were concerned, and not often did she say as much.

"Just the same she doesn't like me. It would have pleased her better if you had a married a man like Mandel. She's gone daffy about him, by the way she talks."

"It isn't that, Brian," Ruth patiently explained. "It is because he is so kind to me—makes my work so pleasant. Aunt had an idea that all employers were regular slave-drivers. And that employees were terribly overworked and so miserable. She's found out she was wrong. I am so happy that she has, and that when she goes home she will feel differently about us and about my working." Then, "I wish while she is here you would come over to the shop with her. It seems strange that you never have met my boss," she finished with a smile.

"I don't know why I should meet him! He'd most likely patronize me—or try to."

"Oh, no he wouldn't, Brian. He isn't that kind. Really he isn't dear," as she saw disbelief on Brian's face. "Then I want to show you my desk. The nice, quiet corner where I can keep to myself."

"Perhaps—some day I'll drop in," he returned, and Ruth had to be contented. He would make no further concession.

It had been two weeks since Mrs Clayborne arrived, and she was beginning to talk of going home. While she had not been able to do as she wished about throwing Ruth with Mandel, she was not at all disheartened.

"Time, fate, and propinquity have been known to accomplish wonders," she said to herself. "They are much together. he loves her. He'll not give up easily."

Unfortunately, on the very day that Mrs. Clayborne left for home, Ruth was once more sent out of town on a commission. Brian at once flew to Mollie King for sympathy.

"I've had to be on my good behavior all the time Mrs. Clayborne was with us, then just as I might be comfortable again off Ruth goes and leaves me alone with Rachel. It isn't fair to a fellow!" he stormed.

"Of course it isn't! Is Ruth going to stay long this time?"

"How do I know! two days or two weeks! It's all one to her, so long as she is puttering over that decorating business! I tell you, Mollie, it has got to stop! I want a home, my wife's society when I go home, and—I might as well say it—I want children like other men. Honest, Mollie, I don't care a rap for fancy things, for all the fuss about eating and the house. I just want to be comfortable and feel well—like I do with you. And I don't! I can't eat when I think that Ruth is working, that she is away. These decorations and working for that firm mean more to her than I do! I suppose I shouldn't have asked her to marry me until I had gone further in my profession. At least until I had made more money! But I did, and that part can't be helped. But I'd rather have a little three room flat down here in the village, with Ruth fussing up messes in a kitchenette like yours, and a kiddie running to meet me, than to live as we do." He laughed a little, then said, "There, I feel better! I've got that out of my system. Now come on, we'll go out to dinner."

That evening Mollie was more gentle, more sympathetic, than ever before. Brian's talk of a home and kiddies had affected her more than he perhaps had either realized or intended.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the same troublesome task of gathering the sage and the nursey mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

A QUICK LEAP TO FAME

HOW KURT EISNER BECAME DICTATOR OF BAVARIA.

Story of Fall of Autocracy and Establishment of Republic In the Powerful Teutonic State Has Strong Flavor of Romance—Leader of Revolution Had Worked for Years In Obscurity.

AMONG the new men in Germany, Kurt Eisner, the dictator of Bavaria, could win the medal for the quickest leap from obscurity into world-wide fame. Before he toppled over the throne of the Wittelsmachers the night of Nov. 7 and made himself master of Bavaria he had been heard of in Canada only by the very few who had been well informed about German Socialism. On the next morning Eisner, like Byron, awoke to find himself famous.

In Germany itself Eisner was much better known, but he was by no means one of the prominent men of the Socialist party. He was never a member of the Reichstag, and apparently had never held any office before he succeeded King Ludwig at Munich. Nor was he one of the prominent debaters at the annual conventions of the Socialist party. He was known only as a writer of books, and still better as an editor. Born of Jewish parentage at Berlin in 1867 (according to one version he is a Galician Jew), he published his first book in 1892. It was on "Nietzsche and the Apostles of the Future," being a study in what he called "spiritual psychopathy."

For seven years after this he published nothing; but from 1899 to 1902 he put out ten books, all on political subjects and making for Socialist propaganda. Meanwhile he had become one of the leading editors of the well-known "Vorwaerts," the official organ of the Social Democracy. At that time he inclined toward moderate views, a fact which would hardly be suspected by persons who have watched his recent course as Bavarian dictator. He then belonged to the so-called Revisionist group of the party, of which Eduard Bergstein was the leader, a group which sought to tone down some of the stern dogmas of Karl Marx. Five who edited [illegible] "Vorwaerts" were of the Revisionist school.

The editorial work of these men finally gave such offence in the party that they were forced out some years before the war.

After that event Eisner settled in Munich, where he is now speaking for Bavaria with all the ardor of a native born. But after he left the editorial tripod at Berlin he was much less heard of. About a year ago, however, he came into prominence again through a conflict with the authorities and was sentenced to a term in prison. He thus shared with Dr. Liebknecht the honor of having been liberated from jail by the new order of things in Germany.

Eisner seems to have drifted into the revolution of which he suddenly became the leader. Soon after quitting jail he was nominated by the Independent Socialists of Munich for the Reichstag in a special election to fill a vacancy. Against him the regular Socialist organization put up Eberhard Auer, and the two candidates were engaged in a contest of some bitterness when the political wind suddenly veered and revolutionary clouds filled the air.

On Monday, Nov. 4, the Socialists of Munich held two great meetings to discuss plans for healing the breach between the independents and the regulars. It adopted resolutions calling for the abdication of the Kaiser, swearing the troops to fidelity to the constitution instead of the monarch, and other reforms. It also appointed a joint commission to begun the consolidation of the two Socialist parties. Eisner was the leading spirit in all this.

Meanwhile the Bavarian Government was undergoing a reconstruction to make it conform to the new liberal spirit that was emerging out of the political agitation of the day.

On Wednesday evening the Minister of the Interior issued an old-fashioned decree appealing to peaceloving men and women to see that order was maintained; serious trouble would interrupt the food supply, and famine would be inevitable.

Thursday afternoon there were great Socialist mass meetings on the Theresa Meadows. Hot speeches, but no distinct enunciation of plans. After the day had waned, however, Eisner gave out the slogan. It was "Revolution; depose the King and establish a republic!"

Then in a few hours the whole plan was carried out. Soldiers and workmen proceeded swiftly and quietly to occupy all the barracks, ministries, other public buildings, and the leading centres of traffic. Arms and ammunition were distributed among them, but apparently none were used because none were needed. A Soldiers' Council was meanwhile organized in the Matheser brewery (how all life in Munich runs to breweries!), and the chief of police promptly placed himself and all his force at its disposal. All newspapers were suspended, except the Neueste Nachrichten," which appeared next morning with Eisner's proclamation, beginning with the words: "Bavaria is henceforth a free state." It announced that the Wittelsbach dynasty had been deposed and a republic established.

On Friday Eisner announced his cabinet. The composition of it showed considerable breadth of view and oleance toward political opponents. The Ministry of the Interior was given to Auer, hitherto his sharpest political foe. Several important ministerial positions were given to Progressives, and one or more to the Peasants' League, which supported the revolution. But the Clerical party, which has ruled Bavaria from time immemorial, was excluded, except that two men already in positions were left there to help handle the food problem.

Hugo's Prophecy.

When in 1871 France lay bleeding on the ground, and her provinces, Alsace and Lorraine, were torn from her side, the great poet, Victor Hugo, arose in the National Assembly on March 1, 1871, and said:

"Oh, the hour will strike—we feel it come—this marvelous act of restitution. You will see France arise again you will see her take back Lorraine, take back Alsace. And then, will that be all? No, she will take back Treves, Mayence, Cologne, Coblentz and the whole left bank of the Rhine. And you will hear France shout, 'Now is my turn.' Here I am, Germany! Am I your enemy? No, I am your sister. [illegible] frankly all and [illegible] under

Health and Happiness

Women of today seem to listen to every call of duty except the supreme one that tells them to guard their health. Home duties, church duties, war activities, and the hundred-and-one calls for charitable enterprises soon lead women to overdo. Nervousness, headaches, backaches and female troubles are the inevitable result.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which, added to my weak condition, kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness. Health and happiness? Yes, I have both now."—Mrs. J. WORTHLINE, 1643 North Taylor Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The majority of women nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down nervous condition with headaches, backache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. Avoid them by taking in this

A ROMANCE-FILLED SEA.

Surely nowhere else in the world, writes F. B. Bradley-Birt in "Through Persia," is there an arm of the sea so fraught with historic memories as that which guards the approach to Persia on the south. Quitting India at Karachi, one sails straight out into another world, a world of Oriental despotism and old romance.

Even at the outset, as one crosses the Arabian Sea, historic memories crowd thick upon one. This way from the Indus, at whose mouth lies Karachi, sailed Nearchus, admiral of the great Alexander, in the fourth century before Christ, leaving so careful a record of his voyage that its course along the northern shores can still be traced to-day.

From the opposite end of the gulf, from Busrah in Arabia, 12 centuries later, came Sinbad the Sailor, of wide renown, on his seven voyages of far-famed adventure to furnish nursery tales for all time to come.

Early in the sixteenth century there suddenly appeared upon the scene the high-pooped vessels of the Portuguese, first of European nations here as elsewhere in the rush for empire in the new worlds, east and west.

Then at the beginning of the seventeenth century there followed in the wake of the Portuguese the British and the Dutch, eager to rob the earliest pioneers of their hard-won laurels and wrest from them the empire of the seas. From time to time the French appeared like meteors amidst the lash of warring elements, making spasmodic efforts to share the spoil and plunder of this new world of wealth, the fame of which, magnified a hundredfold in Oriental flower of speech, had spread far and wide over the West.

Throughout the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries this coveted arm of the sea was the constant scene of strife from end to end. With varying fortunes, the Portuguese, clinging with dogged tenacity to the first footholds they had won, held their own for 150 years. For a time the Dutchmen swept the seas. Then the British succeeded to the supremacy of the gulf.

The first port of call is the most picturesque spot along all these coasts. Barren, rocky, inhospitable, the Arabian coast line looms into view, rising abruptly out of the sea. Its huge, frowning masses of range on range of hills, destitute of all sign of life or vegetation, stretch gloomy and forbidding as far as the eye can reach. In this long, dead wall of coast there is something strikingly impressive. And behind it lies Arabia, that land of legend and romance whose secrets these towering walls of cliff that stand between it and the sea guard well with all the tenacity and suspicion of the East.

Iron is red blood food—it helps put strength and energy into the veins of men and roses into the cheeks of women.

A prominent New York Surgeon and former Adjunct Professor of the New York Post Graduate Medical School and Hospital, Dr. Kenneth K. MacAlpine, says: "If people would only realize that iron is just as indispensable to the blood as is the air to the lungs and be just as particular about keeping up a sufficient supply at all times there would, in my opinion, be far less disease resulting from anaemic, weakened conditions. In my opinion, Nuxated Iron is the most valuable tonic, strength and blood builder any physician can prescribe."

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE: Nuxated Iron, which has been prescribed and recommended by physicians and which is used by over three million people annually is not a secret remedy, but one which is well-known to druggists everywhere. ## A True Prophet

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE

They were a strange coterie—three men, a young woman and her mother. He of the group who won care and attention, sympathy and gentleness, was Adrian Warne. He had rescued Burton Grey from a burning hotel, overcome by flame and smoke, and that had endeared him to the Greys, Luella and her mother.

The fifth and unobtrusive member of the quintette was Dayton-Rolfe. He had known Warne before the Greys had ever heard of him. A struggling artist, full of gout and ambition, but not prodigal of speech. Rolfe had fitted into the circle of friends modestly, unostentatiously, and the first time he had met Luella Grey he had loved her.

Rolfe had lived with Warne not far from the Grey home, and after the fire episode they became veritable members of the Grey family group. Warne was somewhat of a mystery, even to Rolfe. He seemed to have a small income. There were days, however, when Warne shut himself in his room and wrote for hours. He never revealed to Rolfe the character of this intense application. He was of frail physique. Often, even, when a visitor at the Grey home, he would be overcome by sudden weakness and would be obliged to lie down on a couch.

On such occasions Burton would look distressed and anxious and Luella would hang over the sick man with gentle and helpful solicitude. The gratitude she felt towards Warne for all he had done for Burton inspired her to do for his rescuer as she would for her own brother.

In this, mistakenly, Rolfe read the blossoming of a mutual love.

One day Burton gravely announced to Rolfe that he and Warne were going away. "There may be no occasion for alarm," he said, "but I have consulted a specialist, who says that Warne must rough it in the open air up among the far Canadian pineries. Warne has consented to go, and I am to accompany him. Rolfe, you love this man as I do, you are a true friend of our little family. Mother suggests that you take a room in the house. You will look after mother and sister while I am gone?"

"I covet the trust, and thank you for choosing me," responded Rolfe with feeling.

"Rolfe," said Warne later, "you have heard that I am going north, chasing health. When you move to the Grey home I want you to take charge of that little trunk I have always kept in my room. Should anything happen to me, I make you my legatee. Its contents will interest you, and may benefit you."

"Don't talk of all this," pleaded Rolfe with sincere emotion. "You are going to come back, rugged and well."

"And if I do," said Warne, "I feel sure that by that time you will have reached your goal with your new picture. It was an inspiration on your adapting Luella as your model."

Warne spoke of Miss Grey so familiarly that Rolfe doubted not they were engaged. Rolfe had not met with much success with his pictures in the past; now he had chosen a strong theme in which the counterfeit presentment of Luella was the central figure.

Then there began the ordeal of a man, strong of heart in fidelity and service in behalf of those he cherished, yet daily suffering poignantly because of his chosen environment.

At the end of six months there came terrible news. A newspaper telegram announced the death of a party of overlanders lost in a landslide, and the names of Adrian Warne and Burton Grey were in the list. Now came the test of the true man for Rolfe. He was sure to the anguished mother, brother to the bereaved sister. His treasured picture promised popularity and value. He sold it for half its price to carry along the family.

One day he opened the old trunk Warne had intrusted to his care. Within he found nearly a dozen manuscripts. They were the result of Warne's secret labors, novels of a high order. Within a month a willing publisher was found. Within 180 the name of Adrian Warne was familiar to a vast reading clientele.

It was nearly a year to a day when into the Grey home, bronzed, bearing signs of hardships and deprivations, Warne and Burton entered. There were hours of wild joy, of stories of marvelous escapes, of restored health for Warne, who had come back to civilization to be greeted by both fortune and fame.

"I am going away," he told Rolfe later; "but I shall never forget you, dear, loyal friend, or these others who have given me love and service. I am going back to my wife."

"Your wife!" gasped Rolfe.

"Yes. Her purse-proud father, who spited us because I was poor and an idler and an invalid, is dead. She has written me she is proud of my fame, and surely happiness beckons me on my way."

"And—did Miss Grey know of this?" inquired Rolfe.

"Always! Why, man! I see it all. You thought I was interested in that direction? Absurd! If you had a little more confidence in your innate nerd, you would have seen that she owns you all along. Do you doubt it? Go and ask her."

Which Dayton Rolfe did, and found Adrian Warne to be a true prophet!

Some of our Canadian women are borne down physically and mentally, by the weaknesses of their sex. They suffer from backache, dragging sensation, very nervous and pain in top of head. Weak women should try it now. Don't wait! Begin today. This woman's tonic and nerve will bring vim, vigor and vitality. Send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10c for trial pkg., tablets.

Paris, Ont.—"About three years ago I was ill in bed and suffered severe pain. The doctor said I had gall stones, but his medicine did not help me. A neighbor had been taking 'Favorite Prescription' and it had benefited her so much that she urged me to try some of hers, and that first dose helped me so much that I sent at once for a bottle. I was very much surprised at the prompt relief this medicine gave to me after the doctor had failed, and I have never had such a spell since, for whenever I feel the least bit run-down or in need of a tonic I take the 'Favorite Prescription' again for a few days. It has never failed to restore me to perfect health."—Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, P. O. Box 733.

Knew the Anecdote

Dr. Harrison Allan, treasurer of the Bible Society of America, said in an address recently: "We find a deplorable ignorance of the Bible even among the higher classes. When, now and then, we meet some one who possesses a little biblical knowledge, he or she is apt to be ridiculously proud about it. A young millionaire and his wife were once talking to me about a visit they had made to the famous picture gallery of the Prado in Spain. 'What did you like best in the Prado?' I asked. 'T Correggio,' said the husband—'a Correggio of Adam and Eve in the garden, with the apple and the serpent.' Then the young wife looked at me with a superior air and added: 'Yes, that interested us especially because, you see, we knew the anecdote'."

BERLIN DANCING MAD.

Germans Who Survived War Trying to Forget

The correspondent in Berlin of the Daily Express, dealing with the return of the German army says the scenes of enthusiasm marking the homecoming of the troops are tending.

"Men have been coming home at the rate of 10,000 a day," says the correspondent. "Every day Herr Ebert, the Chancellor, takes his place on a rostrum opposite the French Embassy. He addresses the homecoming men and the bands play martial music, while the crowds cheer and wave their handkerchiefs.

"'Deutschland uber Alles' brought me into the street this morning. To my amazement—and the apparent amazement of the French officers grouped in the window of the Embassy—a regiment was passing the Brandenburg Gate to the old tune. Later, I heard it played continuously as cavalry, infantry and artillery swept by. Regimental flags were crowned with laurel wreaths. The men were evergreens around their steel helmets and their tunics and guns were covered with flowers.

"What particularly struck me was the attitude of the homecoming officers. Those I have seen in the Berlin garrison were quick men, many of whom had removed their marks of rank. They seldom were saluted by their men. On the other hand the troops just returned from the front are well disciplined and salute as of old. The officers themselves are unchanged. They exhibit themselves, monocled and tight waisted, to the population, who cheer them loudly.

"Berlin is dancing mad. There are about 50 cabarets in the city and dancing goes on all the afternoon and until 4 o'clock at night. In a week's time the edict closing dancing halls at 9 o'clock will be removed and dancing then will continue all night. Berliners are looking forward to this.

"It is a remarkable sight to see cabarets packed to suffocation with women in expensive toilettes and both soldiers and civilians dancing and drinking wine costing $10 a bottle. Seats at the theatres can only be booked two days ahead. 'We are trying to forget,' said a Berliner to me to-day."

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS MAY BE OVERCOME

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head and ear noises, or are growing hard of hearing, go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

You Just Try NR For That Indigestion

Get your organs of digestion, assimilation and elimination working in harmony and watch your trouble disappear. NR does it or money back.

One Day's Test Proves NR Best

The stomach only partly digests the food we eat. The process is finished in the intestines where the food is mixed with bile from the liver.

It must be plain to any sensible person who realizes this, that the stomach, liver and bowels must work in harmony if digestive troubles are to be avoided or overcome.

This fact also explains why sufferers from indigestion, also suffer more or less from headaches, biliousness and constipation.

If you are one of the many unfortunate persons who cannot eat without suffering afterward, if you are constipated, have bilious spells, headaches, coated tongue, bad breath, variable appetite, are nervous, losing energy and feel your health slipping away, take this advice and get a box of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) right today and start taking it.

Give it a trial for a week or two and just see how much better you feel. See how quickly your sluggish bowels will become as regular as clock work, how your coated tongue clears up and your good, old-time appetite returns. See how splendidly your food will digest and how your energy, "pep" and "ginger" revive.

Just try it.

You take no risk whatever for Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) is only 25c a box, enough to last twenty-five days, and it must help and benefit you to your entire satisfaction, or money returned.

Five million boxes are used every year,—one million NR Tablets are taken by ailing people every day—that's the best proof of its merits. Nature's Remedy is the best and safest thing you can take for biliousness, constipation, indigestion, and similar complaints. It is sold, guaranteed and recommended by your druggist.

"PLAYING DEAD."

Strategy of Animals Is Hard to Explain.

Old Possum is playing dead. Why does he do it? Of course, it is a piece of deep strategy peculiar to the sagacious intellect of the beast. The scientist, however, is a very sceptical person, and he questions even the subtle brains of the possum, although it is perfectly certain that the worthy animal does lie mute and motionless until a convenient time arrives for a getaway.

Dr. Etienne Rabaud, Maitre des Conferences of the Sernonne, writing in the Scientific American, denies any "playing dead" or "lie still" theories on the part of animals.

When one suddenly seizes a cetinoid insect it immediately folds its legs against its body, draws down its head and its antennae and remains motionless. Other arthropoids (crustaceans, spiders, myriapods, insects) behave in a very similar fashion.

This has suggested comparison with death, and it is a common saying that the animals are "Playing Dead." A phenomenon which is superficially similar has been observed among vertebrates. Some observers agree with Darwin that the immobility leads the enemy astray, that they appear not to attack dead creatures. Moreover, the attitude and the coloration, together with entire immobility, often render the animal completely invisible, hence it can more readily escape.

In birds and mammals immobilization can be occasioned at will. In the seventh century Kircher immobilized fowls merely by turning them upon their backs. The experiment can be successfully made with any kind of bird. I have performed it with sparrows, with a wryneck and with the finch immediately after their capture, thus excluding all idea of training. The same result can be obtained with various mammals, especially with mice.

What is the nature of this immobility? Some naturalists—there are few nowadays to be sure—still think that this action is both voluntary and conscious. The majority, however, following Darwin and Romanes, recognize that it is scarcely reasonable to attribute it to any idea of death which would be the simulation of a state which is unknown to the animal simulating it.

In the presence of either real or imaginary danger the animals may experience an intense and paralyzing terror. Whether they remain unseen or whether their corpse-like appearance deceives the enemy, those who remain perfectly motionless for the longest time would have the best chance to escape. Having thus survived, their descendants would inherit the faculty of remaining motionless in the presence of danger so that by the operation of the natural law of selection the so-called instinct would be developed little by little.

This is the explanation most generally adopted. What real advantage could an animal derive from immobility? Naturalists have accepted the hypothesis that the appearance of death would drive away predatory creatures since these do not care for corpses; but on the one hand many animals, far from being repelled by dead flesh, are especially attracted by it; and on the other hand the mere absence of movement is not sufficient to impart to any organism all the properties of a cadaver. In particular the odor is lacking, and this is far more important than the external aspect, so far as predatory animals are concerned.

An insect in catalepsy, for one has only immediately finds itself paralyzed and delivered up defenseless to the enemy. By retaining the possibility of biting or struggling it might be able to liberate itself; perhaps the immobilizing reflex deprives it of all chance of this.

Immobilization, in fact, whether or not it resembles death, fails to play any essential part in the life of an animal. It is a property of the nervous system very widespread.

As to its nature we still possess very incomplete data. Various authorities have spoken of hypnotism, but this term offers no solution, since it itself designates a phenomenon which is far from being well understood. At the present time we can do nothing more than set forth the features without undertaking to extract from them an explanation which will respond exactly to all cases.

Shock Left Her Weak and Nervous

COULD NOT SLEEP

When the system receives a shock of any kind, the heart becomes weakened, the nerves unstrung, the appetite poor, faint and weak feelings come over you, you can't sleep at night, and you wonder if life is worth living.

To all those who suffer from nervous shock we would recommend Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as the best remedy to tone up the entire system and strengthen the weakened organs.

Mrs. J. J. Bunyan, Pilot Butte, Sask., writes:—"I have used Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills after having suffered from a terrible shock to my whole system. I was so utterly weak, and nervous I could not sleep at night, and my appetite was very poor. I could not walk across the floor without trembling all over.

I had hot flushes and fainting spells. When I was on the second box of your Heart and Nerve Pills, I began to feel that they were doing me good, so I kept on until I had used six boxes, when I felt like a different person.

I am never without them in the house, and highly recommend them to all who suffer with their heart."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 14.—In the arrest of five young women Saturday the police believe they have broken up an organized shoplifting ring, whose operations in various local stores are alleged to have netted a haul of more than $3,000 worth of goods. They are being held for trial, without bail.

Easy to Make This Fine Cough Remedy

Thousands of families prize it for the prompt results. Inexpensive, and saves about $2.

You know that pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several peculiar elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest.

Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, get 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a pint bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make 16 ounces—more than you can buy ready-made for $2.50. It is pure, good and very pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be accompanied by loose phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this pine and syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is unsurpassed by the world over for its prompt effect upon coughs.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with Directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take a Glass of Salts Before Breakfast If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

MILITARY MEDAL FOR BOMBARDIER MARTIN.

Word has been received that Bombardier Charles Martin, whose home is at 104 Aylmer Street, is on his way home. Bombardier Martin has been awarded the Military Medal. He was gassed about two months ago in one of the last big engagements of the war. His brother Clayton Martin who is at present overseas, was gassed the next day. Bombardier Martin enlisted in the 36th Battery early in 1917.

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Cardinal Mercier.

Cardinal Mercier, Archbishop of Malines, Belgium, was not actually imprisoned by the Germans, but his freedom was restricted. His offense was the issuing of a pastoral letter to his people in January, 1915, in which he said: "I have gone through most of the places in my diocese which have been wasted. What I have seen of the ruins and the ashes passes anything that, in spite of my most acute fears, I could ever have imagined. Churches, schools, charitable institutions, hospitals, convents, to a considerable number, are unfit for use or are in ruins. Whole villages have almost disappeared. God will save Belgium, my brothers, we can not doubt it. Let us say, rather, He is saving her. Is there a single patriot who does not feel that glory has come to Belgium? Which of us would have the courage to tear out the last page of our history? Which of us can look without pride on the splendor of the glory that our murdered country has won?"

ARAB HORSE IS COMING BACK.

Renewal of Interest Predicted in the Once Famous Steed.

Now that Arabia is going to be a country and a kingdom on its own account, with a king at Mecca and war taxes, and very likely a Controller of Dates, interest in the Arab horse is likely to be revived. The Arab kingdom is a kind of holy thing, based on Mohammed and the Koaha and the Koran, and to the Arab the horse is holy. It was Mohammed himself who said (or at least so the Manchester Guardian tells us), "The money that one spends on horses is, in the eyes of God an alms that one makes at one's own cost." There is something rather mystical about this saying. At first glance it seems to mean, "He who buys horses is lending money to the Lord." There may be, however, a sort of joker in the phrase, implying that he who buys horses impoverishes himself, and therefore acquires the merit of him who gives away all his money. But there is a clue to Mohammed's meaning in another utterance of his which is this: "Weal is in the forelock of horses until the Day of Judgment."

The eastern world and a great part of Africa could never have been converted to Islam if it had not been for the Arab horse. On his back the Arab rode to conquest in the name of the Prophet, through Syria, Persia, Egypt, all North Africa and most of Spain, so that within a hundred years after the Prophet's death half the known world was Mussulman. The Arab horse might well be numbered among the apostles of Islam, and upon his maintenance in swiftness and strength depended, no doubt, the future fate of the Arab kingdom and caliphate. It was only when Europe had horses as good as those of Arabia that Christianity began to make headway against Mohammedanism.

And yet it is funny—the Arab horse was not an original Arabian product. In the days before Christ the Arabs traveled exclusively on camels. The horse now called Arabian is supposed to have originated on the Libyan desert, in North Africa, from which it passed to Egypt and eventually to Arabia. Europe always had horses in some shape, but they were very stocky, logy, lumbering creatures, fit to draw iron chariots, which were the tanks of the ancient wars, but not fit for a gentleman or a first-class bandit to ride. It took the sandy deserts to breed that kind of a horse, and somehow Libya managed to do it. It must be confessed that the horse of that type, as we know him now, has got the hot, sandy desert out of his blood very well. The Morgan horse of Vermont is only a slight modification of the Arab horse—so slight that Homer Davenport's stallion, Haleb, brought straight from the Syrian desert, took the prize at the Vermont State Fair as the animal nearest in all lines to the typical Morgan.

The Arab horse and his various offspring the descendants possess more virtues, probably, than any other breed of horses. The big, hulking horses that we have developed for heavy tasks, or to pull coaches, are often surly, tricky and mean-spirited. They are the kickers, biters, halter-pullers and balkers. The Nomad never heard of any of these vices in any of the Morgan horses among whom he was brought up. The Nomad has never been in Arabia, but he enjoyed a thorough quaintance with the stud of Arab horses that Homer Davenport brought from Aleppo. They are gentle though under the saddle or the harness they will caracole and sometimes rear, they do this only for show, and are easily controlled. They have a keen interest in the doings and disposition of the humans about them, and are quick and responsive in their sympathy. It is an old saying that it takes a mean man to make a mean horse. Really it doesn't always, for horses vary in their natural dispositions as men do, though without descending to human depths. But one thing must be clear—the character of the Arab horse speaks well for the character of the Arab of the desert. —The Nomad in Boston Transcript.

War-time Improvements.

There are not a few things, which the war has brought about, that might remain after the war without causing general regret. Among these, to name only two at the present time, were the anti-loafing law and the interdiction against the unlimited use of electric signs. The reappearance of the street corner loafer and the dazzling, and often otherwise objectionable, sign will hardly be accepted by the judicious, as evidence that the war completely cleaned up the old situation.

CONTRACTOR SAYS IT BEATS ANYTHING

Karnes Says Tanlac Relieved Him of Terrible Rheumatism—Gained Ten Pounds in Weight.

"One bottle of Tanlac has got me over one of the worst cases of rheumatism a man ever had, and I have gained ten pounds, besides," said John A. Karnes, a well-known contracting plasterer, living at 303 Uriel Street, Nashville, Tenn.

"I've had rheumatism off and on for several years, especially in damp weather, and I would ache in every joint in my body almost like a sore tooth. My suffering was so great at times that I could hardly bear it, and it seemed like the more I suffered, the worse I got until I finally had to lay off from work for a whole month on account of it.

"It just beats anything I ever saw how Tanlac begun to relieve my troubles right from the start. Almost every symptom of rheumatism has gone, my appetite is fine, I sleep like a log at night and have gained ten pounds in weight. My own experience proves to me that Tanlac is one of the greatest medicines ever made, and I recommend it to others."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tannier Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Farm Workers Buried Alive

FORT WILLIAM, Jan. 14.—Mike Moore and Mike Solosky, two men who were serving time at the industrial farm, met their death by being suffocated in a gravel pit on the farm.

At the point where the men were at work in the pit there was an overhanging ledge of frozen gravel extending about six feet, and although the men were instructed to not work so far under the ledge, they persisted, with the result that the ledge fell on them, and both of them died of suffocation before they could be rescued. Every effort was made to save the men but the amount of gravel in the ledge was so great that there was no possibility of this being done, it is claimed. Both of the men were quite young, about 20 or 22 years of age.

A coroner's jury is holding an inquest at Henderson and Company's undertaking parlours, where the remains are being prepared for burial.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Don't Sleep After Meals.

It is good to sleep any time of the day or night except after a substantial meal, and then it is sheer madness. Rest after dinner is a physical necessity, particularly if you are over thirty. But even violent exercise is better than a nap.

In sleep every organ is at its lowest state of activity. And though the stomach works automatically, it needs nervous energy. This energy is supplied from the sympathetic system at the direction of the brain during our waking moments. But when the brain becomes somnolent the stomach becomes less active, the meal is not properly digested, and all manner of injurious gases and acids are developed.

Be lazy after a meal. It is good for you, but don't sleep. Even elderly people would do well to postpone their beloved "forty winks" for a couple of hours.

When people of nervous temperament retire for the night and cannot sleep it is usually because their brains are still active and refuse to part with the blood which should properly travel elsewhere.

How to Kill Dandruff So It Won't Return

By a Specialist.

That the dandruff germ is responsible for nearly all the diseases to which the scalp is heir, as well as for baldness and premature gray hair, is a well known fact, but when we realize that it is also indirectly responsible for many other diseases as well, we appreciate the importance of any agent that will destroy its power. We are therefore, particularly pleased to give herewith the prescription which a famous scalp specialist states he has found after repeated tests, to completely destroy the dandruff germ in from one to three applications. It will also almost immediately stop falling hair and it has in numerous cases produced a new hair-growth after years of partial baldness. This prescription can be made up at home, or any druggist will put it up for you: 6 ounces Bay Rum, 2 ounces Lavona de Composee, one half drachm Menthol Crystals. Mix thoroughly, and after standing an hour it is ready for use. Apply night and morning, rubbing into the scalp with the finger tips. If you wish it perfumed, add 1 drachm of your favourite perfume. While this preparation is not a dye it is unequalled for restoring gray hair to its original colour.

Later the police raided the offices of Nationality, the chief organ of the Sinn Fein.

THOUGHT IT WAS A BOIL

Doctor Said Abscess.

Mr. Gleason R. Young, Kingscroft, N.B., under date of Feb. 9th, 1918, writes us as follows: "About five months ago, a lump came on my jawbone. I thought it was a boil, and after it had been there quite a while it began to get larger. I went to a doctor and he said it was an abscess, and lanced it. He gave me a wash for it, so I went by his directions until it healed up, but it commenced coming again, and in about three weeks it broke itself. I thought it would get better, but it didn't. A neighbour advised me to get a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, so I sent and got a bottle, and by the time it was all gone, the abscess had disappeared, and now it is all better."

Burdock Blood Bitters will heal and dry up sores, ulcers, and abscesses, no matter how large or of how long standing. If you have never applied it to a cut, wound, sore or ulcer, just try it and see what soothing, healing, cleansing power it possesses. It takes out itching, stinging and burning, and promotes the growth of healthy flesh. So, too, when taken internally, by its power of eliminating all impurities from the blood and making that vital fluid rich, red and pure, it cuts off the origin and source of the foul matter that goes to make boils, pimples, sores, ulcers, abscesses and the like, and at the same time the purified and enriched blood creates healthy tissue where there was formerly, perhaps, a sore full of pus.

Ambitions of von Tirpitz Included the Wild Scheme Of Sea Power for Germany

WHO is to blame for the war? is now the great question in Germany. Had things turned out differently the question would have been, To whom shall we attribute the chief glory for the war? In that case, of course, the Kaiser would have hogged the principal honors, but there would have been other claimants. But in the view of some authorities the man responsible for the war and for what has happened to Germany is Grand Admiral Alfred P. T. von Tirpitz. Tirpitz is now reported to be a fugitive. He has a notion, which may develop into a mania, that before all accounts are squared he will be haled before a court of justice, either German or international, and be made to answer charges growing out of the activities of the German submarines. As head of the German fleet he cannot evade responsibility for the submarine warfare.

It would appear from stories that have come out of Germany in the past ten years that von Tirpitz was one German who was able to impose his views upon the Kaiser, to even bulldoze the All Highest. That he was a man of tremendous force of character there is no disputing, and that he has a bigger brain than the former King of Prussia is also plain enough. It is therefore easy to believe that he might by force of intellect compel William Hohenzollern to take a course of action to which he might object, or at least to have a free hand in matters on which he could claim to be an authority. There is nothing unreasonable in the supposition that the submarine campaign was designed and carried through by von Tirpitz, and that the Hohenzollerns accepted it, not through any liking, but because they believed von Tirpitz when he told them that this was the infallible means of winning the war.

Von Tirpitz was one of the few Germans who rose to high rank under the Kaiser's patronage who was not of gentle birth. His great energy and his fixity of purpose made him a force in the country, and on one occasion when the German aristocrats protested against his uncouthness and brutality the Kaiser is reported to have said: "You will have to get along with him as best you can. That's what I have to do." Von Tirpitz's father was a lawyer in an inland town, and the boy entered the German navy at the age of 16, when the German navy was a small affair, and chiefly valuable as providing lucrative employment for sons of broken-down Prussian noblemen.

The idea of Germany having a great navy, in fact the greatest in the world, was von Tirpitz's idea. When this idea crystallized in his mind we may say that he became insane. The notion of an overmastering German navy had been suggested to Bismarck, who discarded it, and also to Moltke. Both of them were willing that the British should retain command of the seas. Their ambition was for a great German army. They argued that if battles were necessary to acquire colonies, they would be fought in Europe. Neither of them contemplated fighting with Great Britain.

Tirpitz had another idea. He contemplated the possibility of war with Great Britain, and, through his inexhaustible energy and enthusiasm, he kindled a fire in Germany that supported him in his great naval programs. At first he thought that Germany should concentrate upon destroyers, admitting that to overtake the British Empire in capital ships would be almost an impossibility. Later on he concluded that by the use of submarines the preponderating strength of the British navy might be overcome. He had as great hopes from the submarines as Zeppelin had of dirigible airships. Unlike Zeppelin, he was able to make a fine showing, and therefore to persuade the War Lord, if he needed persuading, that by intensifying the activities of the U-boats the war might be brought to a victorious conclusion. So, as a result, the United States entered the war, taking the place and more than the place of staggering Russia, and contributing the final ounce of energy needed for the knock-out punch. With this introduction, Grand Admiral Alfred P. T. von Tirpitz is nominated for the role of Chief German Goat.

Discovered.

He is the interpreter attached to a roaming brigade of Field Artillery, a little French soldier named Bouchette.

Their regard for him, however, grew mightily the night of the brigade's entry into the fight up Montfoucon way. They had noticed that he had a genius for knowing which kitchen in the outfit would serve the best dinner on any given night and for dropping in there casually at mess time.

They suspected him of an instinct for nourishment, but how great his talents were in that respect they never discovered until this particular night, when eight of the officers appealed to him to use his French to get them a decent meal. At the word, he collected seven francs from each man, vanished into the countryside, came back with a basket full of supplies, and with his own hands prepared such a luscious and wonderful six-course dinner as they had never encountered in all their days.

Fish, with a celestial sauce, eggs transformed past recognition, a salad for the gods—it was a feast unbelievable. There were inquiries, and, when cornered, M. Bouchette admitted that, prior to the war, he had been head chef for the late Alfred Vanderbilt. Now he is trying desperately hard to retain his rank and status as an interpreter.

Turkey Not Reformable.

"In Constantinople," says Henry Morgenthau in the World's Work, "I became acquainted with an American doctor who had traveled extensively in the East and who had the most intimate knowledge of conditions in the Ottoman Empire. He told me that Herr von Gwinner, the manager of the Deutsche Bank, whom he had visited in Berlin, had asked him to spend an entire evening discussing Turkish affairs. When my friend went to keep his appointment, he began this way:

"'You have set aside this whole evening to discuss the Ottoman Empire. We do not need all that time. I can tell you the whole story in just four words: Turkey is not reformable!'

"'You have summed up the whole situation perfectly,' replied Herr Gwinner.

"That is the fundamental fact which we must constantly bear in mind while discussing the [illegible]

Let home stand before all other things. No matter how high your ambition may transcend its duties, no matter how far your talents or your influence may reach beyond its doors, before everything else build a true home! Then from its walls shall come forth the true woman and the true man, who shall together rule and bless the land. Is this an overwrought picture? We think not. What honor can be greater than to found such a home? What dignity higher than to reign its undisputed mistress? What is the ability to speak from a public platform to large intelligent audiences, or the wisdom that may command a seat on the judge's bench, compared to that which can insure and preside over a true home, that husband and children "rise and call her blessed?" To be the guiding star, the ruling spirit in such a position is higher honor than to rule an empire.

THIN, NERVOUS PEOPLE NEED BITRO-PHOSPHATE

Guaranteed to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Weak, thin people—men or women—are nearly always nervous wrecks; thus conclusively proving that thinness, weakness, debility and neurasthenia are almost invariably due to nerve starvation. Feed your nerves and all these symtoms due to nerve starvation will disappear.

Eminent specialists state that the best nerve food is an organic phosphate known among druggists as Bitro-Phosphate, a five-grain tablet of which should be taken with each meal. Being a genuine nerve builder and not a stimulant or habit-forming drug, Bitro-Phosphate can be safely taken by the weakest and most delicate sufferer, and the results following its use are often simply astonishing.

Weak, tired people sag in strength and vigour; thinness and angularity give way to plumpness and curves; sleep returns to the sleepless; confidence and cheerfulness replace debility and gloom; dull eyes become bright; and pale, sunken cheeks regain the pink glow of health. Bitro-Phosphate, the use of which is inexpensive, also wonderfully promotes the assimilation of food, so much so that many people report marked gains of weight in a few weeks.

It is sold by McDermid & Jury in Peterborough and most all good druggists.

CAUTION:—Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE

Russia's Status Will Likely be Determined at To-day's Session.

A COMMISSION

(United Press.)
(By Lowell Mellett.)

PARIS, January 15. — Representation for Russia at the peace conference was expected to be definitely determined upon at to-day's session of the inter-allied war council.

The associated powers have reached the obvious conclusion that the discussion of peace would be absolutely futile without the vast population of Russia being considered. They are also understood to realize that the Russian problem cannot be settled without constant co-operation of the people themselves.

A Commission.

A programme for the official investigation of actual conditions in Russia was to be fully discussed today. This it was believed will result in a commission being sent to that country, which would report directly back to the conference. Upon this report would be based some form of recognition for the Soviet government and other factions, that they might send accredited representatives to Versailles.

Formal action was also to be taken to-day on the question of granting representation to the British Dominions. This not only carries out the League of Nations idea, but it is significant as bringing additional western thought into the conferece.

provisional agreement has already been reached regarding the delegates for the British Dominions. It on remains for this agreement to be confirmed.

Under the present scheme, Great Britain and her colonies would vote separately ,the latter being drawn in only when questions directly affecting them are discussed, thereby eliminating the very remote danger of a "packed convention."

The only countries, in fact, whose representation has not been at least tentatively fixed are the two which made separate peace settlements with the Central Powers, Russia and Rumania. There seems to be no obstacle in the way of granting delegates to the latter ,the number being the chief matter under consideration. The Russian representation obviously will take more time and discussion.

The feeling prevails now that foreign minister Pichon's bitter opposition to even a partial recognition of the Russian Soviet government, based on a suggestion of the British government favoring such recognition, need not be considered as final.

In this connection it was authoritatively stated to-day that there is nothing mysterious in the fact that the American delegation knew nothing of the British proposal until Pichon's published statement.

When the Supreme Council of Peace Congress resumed its sessions at 10.30 o'clock to-day, those in attendance were Premier Clemenceau and Foreign Minister Pinchon for France, President Wilson and Secretary of State Lansing for the United States, Premier Lloyd George and Secretary Balfour for Great Britain, Foreign Minister Sonnino for Italy and Viscount Chita and Baron Matsui for Japan.

League of Nations.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—The League of Nations will be seen in actual operation during the peace conference, if the idea expressed to American newspapers by Lord Robert Cecil, British Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, is carried out.

There seemed to be every likelihood to-day that Cecil's plan would be promptly endorsed by the Associated Powers.

Cecil suggested that certain territories and cities shall be turned over to the custody of the League of Nations in case the Peace Congress finds this disposition difficult. He mentioned Palestine and Constantinople as examples. In another sense, the League would become receivers for certain bankrupt nations, delegates finding it hard to arrive at a decision.

The significance of Cecil's scheme is that it would make the League far more than a "scrap of paper." It would become a vital force in world affairs at once.

Three Questions Dominate the Conference Programme Which Opens To-morrow

Preliminary Sessions Are Being Held To-day—Bulk of Work Will be Conducted by Committees.

OPEN SESSIONS

By William P. Simms.
(United Press.)

PARIS, Jan. 15.— Three questions dominated the general discussion of the Conference programme to-day, as the time approached for the first full session of the Peace Congress, set for Thursday afternoon. They were as follows:

Will the session be open or secret?

Will the Bolshevik problem or the League of Nations come up first?

Will Premier Clemenceau or President Wilson preside?

Minor Puzzles.

These, together with a score of minor puzzles, are solved or unsolved as fast as one newspaper editor succeeds another or a correspondent meets one of the conferees.

Nothing authoritative whatever could be obtained to-day as to whether the Conference will be open.

As to the question of what subject will be broached first, Clemenceau is already pledged to bring up the League of Nations at the outset. The Bolshevik problem probably will be next. It is understood that the situation of Poland and similar questions will be taken up in a general Russian discussion.

A Chairmanship.

It is generally agreed that Clemenceau probably will be given chairmanship through a diplomatic precedent. President Wilson does not take precedence over Clemenceau, because he merelyacts as his own Premier, hanging the mantle of Presidency on the same peg with his hat and overcoat as he entered the Council Chamber. Invitations have been addressed to representatives of associated nations, big and small, to attend the open session in the Quai D'Orsay Saturday afternoon, the time being definitely set for 2.30. This was done through the secretarys of five big powers after the initial meeting. It is understood the work of the five principal nations will be conducted largely by committees, all debates being entirely informal. The minor nations will be called into the conference then as committees complete their studies on matters directly concerning them.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—There is a prospect that Secretary of War Baker will retire from President Wilson's Cabinet, according to persistent rumours here to-day. If he does he will return to Cleveland and re-establish his law practice. His reason for resigning would be a financial one, say those in touch with him.

Hindenburg Will Take Command

Canadian Press:

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 15.—Field Marshal Von Hindenburg will soon take command of German troops opposing Polish forces in Eastern Germany, according to advices received here from Bromberg.

With Spartacan elements suppressed the German government is meeting regularly to arrange for the National Assembly meeting and peace conference.

Civilians to Have Charge

If Germans Fail to Agree to This Plan of Feeding Germany Marshal Foch Will Dictate Terms.

(Robt. J. Bender, United Press.)

PARIS, Jan. 15.—President Wilson is determined, so far as possible, that civilian representatives shall control the machinery for feeding Germany, but if the Germans fail to agree to the proposition advanced by civilians, Marshal Foch will dictate terms. When the question came up at the conferences of the Associated Powers, the President maintained that the best results could be obtained by putting the execution of the plan in the hands of civilians instead of military officials. He obtained sufficient supoprt, particularly from Great Britain, to carry his point, one of principal American objectives just now is to get American soldiers back home, Wilson hopes to obtain German acquiescence to all its proposals so that German ships will relieve present transportatiov burden.

Sukloff's Urgent Cash Sale

Stock Is Being Converted Into Cash —Follow the Crowd.

The big excitement on George Street this week is at Sukloff's Urgent Cash Realization Sale, which started this morning. This is a hurry call to turn a large part of a good staple stock into cash, and, judging by the very reckless price cutting, as seen in the big advertisement on the front page, it will not be long accomplishing its design. Most shoppers know the regular prices of the goods listed, and a comparison with the sale prices at Sukloff's reveals an unexpectedly good opportunity to save money, on items of every day use in every home. Mr. Sukloff says he has not hesitated to make big sacrifices when the necessity arose, and the result is a buying chance that thrifty shoppers will not overlook.

LEGAL AID

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, Jan. 15.—Next week the United Farmers are going to get out "The United Farmer of Ontario," and in the meantime Charles Nixon is going to continue the publication of his "United Farmer." From statements of both sides the probabilities are that both parties will then seek legal aid to restrain the other from using the term, "United Farmer." If possession is nine parts of the law, Editor Nixon has a good running start on the farmers' organization, for he has the name registered. On the other hand, Secretary J. J. Morrison, of the United Farmers, describes Nixon's action as "moral misappropriation," and hopes that the law will take cognizance of the fact that his organization is the originator of the idea of the new farmers' weekly.

OCCUPATION OF GERMANY

Food Difficulties Largely Responsible for Spread of Bolshevism.

(Special to Examiner.)

PARIS, January 15. — The fear that a further occupation of Germany would be necessary if a serious food shortage developed, prompted the allied food council to permit the importation of supplies into that country, the United Press is able to state authoritatively to-day.

Bolsheviki industrial centres, such as Berlin, are based upon food difficulties, it was established. It was further established that while Germany's supplies are sufficient for the moment the people are rapidly consuming their stocks and would face actual starvation before the spring.

It was upon the representations of the allied military authorities that the council decided it was vital to permit Germany to import food stuffs and this would insure the establishment of a stable government, it was declared, and prevent the necessity for further encroachment by the allied armies upon German territory.

Hague Convention.

Under the provisions of the Hague convention the provisioning of the people will depend upon the armies of occupation, when the Germans own supplies are exhausted. If it were necessary to occupy additional territory the obligation naturally would increase. In view of the conditions revealed by the allied military investigation, it is pointed out that if Germany succumbs to anarchy she will be unable to make peace, and restitution and indemnities would be impossible. Germany however must pay for every pound of food imported to save herself from dissolution. The allies, it was learned to-day, have instructed Marshal Foch to enforce all the provisions of the new terms included in the armistice in connection with its prolongation.

No haggling, such as Germany has been showing a marked tendency to indulge in will be permitted. The new terms also include the transfer of all gold in the Reichsbank in Berlin to Frankrot, where it will be placed under allied control.

Commission Appointed

Special to The Examiner:

BERNE, Jan. 15.—A German Commission appointed to determine the former Kaiser's responsibility for the war, has officially recommended that he be brought to trial, according to information received from Berlin today. The recommendation was announced by Herr Kantey, who was appointed by the present German government to direct the examination of documents in the archives of the Foreign Office. "Marginal notes in the Kaiser's own handwriting on the most imortant papers in the Foreign Office, prove he was one of the principal war makers," Kantsky reported. "It is necessary to bring him before a tribunal."

Fighting was resumed in Berlin yesterday, despatches from German sources reported to-day.

VITAL QUESTIONS SETTLED.

Peace Conference in Harmony—Sessions Continue.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Jan. 15.— The Inter-Allied Peace Conference is again in session to-day. Vital questions were discussed and settled. Conference is acting with remarkable unanimity.

BOLSHEVISTS FAIL IN EFFORTS TO REVIVE REIGN OF TERROR

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, January 15.—Berlin's long week of Bolshevism is finally ended. Here and there scattered desperadoes, mostly youths, still fire occasionally from some house top and during the night attempts are made by small bands of the followers of Dr. Karl Leibnecht to revive a reign of terror. They are insignificant, however, compared with what has passed. Dr. Liebnecht's sister was arrested yesterday and several hundred rebels are locked up awaiting trial, which, inasmuch as martial law was not proclaimed, must be left to regular courts. Losses inflicted on each side during the past week are as yet estimated only roughly, but it is believed that they will greatly exceed two hundred dead and a thousand wounded. The overwhelming majority of these are Bolshevists.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Fears Liberalism Has Little Chance

The Story of the Lady and the Tiger—Eastern Ontario Convention—The Returning Soldiers.

THE FRANCHISE ACT

OTTAWA, Jan. 15. — Sir Wilfrid Laurier's address before the Eastern Ontario Liberal Association last night followed mainly the lines of resolutions already presented and accepted by the convention in that he attacked the Union Government on the grounds that it governed by order in Council, that it had failed to make proper provision for returning soldiers, and that it was making a reactionary step in arranging for a Federal voters' list in place of the pre-war franchise based on Provincial lists.

He referred to the Union Government as predominatingly "Tory," and the Liberals in it he compared to the smiling lady once going for a ride on a tiger, the latter returning with the lady inside and the smile on the face of the tiger. Yet later in his address he held out the olive branch to Liberals who had joined the Union Government, claiming that conscription was now a thing of the past, since Lloyd George had pledged himself and the British people to securing the abolition of it everywhere.

Has a "Kick" Left in Him.

He referred towards the end of his speech to his own leadership and his increasing age, stating his readiness to hand over the lead to younger hands and to serve in the ranks, but concluding amid applause: "Though my health is not as good as it was at one time, God, I believe, has left in me a kick which I can . . . ." and the rest was indistinguishable in applause and cheers.

"I am conscious that I have made a great many mistakes," said Sir Wilfrid in the course of his personal statement. "There were times when I had to disappoint some of my friends, but if anybody had been in my place, knowing this country as I know it from one end of Canada to the other, knowing all its component elements, as I claim I do, better perhaps than any other Canadian, he would understand that after all my aim had been to win the war and that the method I took was the best method, so far as I was concerned, to win it. At the same time I realized that it was the privilege of every Liberal to have his own opinions."

"Let the Past Be Forgotten."

Farther on he said: "I have the confidence of the Liberal party as much as any leader of the party ever had in this country. (Applause.) But there is not a man in the party who can say that I ever tried to influence his conscience. Upon everything I told him it was for himself to judge, and, if against me, he would continue to be my friend just the same as if he were with me. That is my policy still. If we have differed in the recent past on a question which is not to rise again, because Lloyd George pledged himself a while ago to end conscription, let the past be forgotten, and let us all be Liberals again. ("Hear, hear," and applause.) If a man comes to me and tells me: 'Well, I was a Unionist at the last election,' I will tell him: 'My friend, I will not rebuke you for it. You have rebuked yourself already sufficiently. Come, put your hand in mine; we will not look back to the past; we will look to the future. There is the only horizon for us.'"

Further Conventions Announced.

Sir Wilfrid said that some time next week there would be a meeting to organize a Central Ontario Liberal Association, and this would be followed by conventions to organize Liberal associations from Vancouver Island in the West to Prince Edward Island in the West to Prince Edward

The Unionist press had expressed great surprise that Liberals should show such energy in organizing before peace had been declared. The Unionists had professed great surprised at the audacity which took no stock of the fact that there was already a so-called Unionist party, composed of former Liberals and permanent Conservatives.

Will Maintain Small Army

United States Congress Will Demand Certain Limitations.

(By L. C. Martin, United Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The smallest army compatible with national safety is to be the demand of congress when it takes up the army reorganization plan just submitted to the House and Senate leaders by Secretary Baker.

Senator Chamberlain and representative Dent, chairman of the Senate and House Military Committee said to-day, "they were studying the draft of a peace time army plan which Baker submitted confidentially yesterday. No hint of the details of this plan has been allowed to reach Congress generally.

GENERAL WILLIAMS TO VISIT PETERBORO

Brigadier General Williams, the new general officer commanding the 3rd Military district of which Peterboro forms a part, will visit Peterboro some time this month. While here Gen. Williams will meet the officers of the garrison, returned soldiers and veterans and especially those who have in any way been effected by losses suffered as a result of the war. Arrangements are not yet complete but the public will be informed of the final arrangements.

Ingersoll Boy Is Killed On Transport

On Siberian Transport, Falls Into Hold—Lack of Railroads Hinders Canadian Trade in Siberia.

Canadian Press:

VLADIVOSTOCK, Jan. 15.— C. F. Just, of the Canadian Economic Commission to Siberia, is here awaiting the arrival of his fellow commissioners. Competent authorities here say vast trade possibilities for Canada in Siberia are at present unavailable owing to the lack of transportation to the Interior. The railway situation is the dominating factor.

Rifleman Joseph Kay, son of Mrs. Desmond, of Ingersoll, Ont., fell into the hold of the ship "Teesta" on the voyage here from Vancouver and was killed.

MILLERS ARE IN SESSION

The Miller's Want the Milling Restrictions Removed—Questions of Importance.

THE SEED MEN

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, Jan. 15.—A special meeting of the Millers' Committee of the Board of Grain Supervisors is to be held at Ottawa toward the end of the week to discuss questions of importance with regard to Canadian mills. The millers demand that the milling restrictions which have been in force during the latter years of the war shall be removed. In the first place, it is pointed out that the fixed price on Canadian bran and shorts is from 10 to 15 dollars a ton lower than prevails in the United States, where the price is not controlled, that the fixing of prices be removed, is demanded. A further discrimination is claimed in the arrangements regarding the manufacture of standard flour and generally regulating the milling business. It was understood that Canada should supply Newfoundland and the West Indies markets, while the United States should cater to Scandinavian and other markets.

Canadian Flour.

Canadian flour in former years had secured a sound footing in Newfoundland and the West Indies, and it is desired that these markets be retained. But the United States has just lifted the restriction requiring the manufacture of standard flour, and Canadian millers fear that if similar Canadian restrictions are not removed and they are not permitted to manufacture pure brand flour, the United States will invade their old-established markets. There would appear to be a strong probability that their demand will be acceded to.

Want an Elevator.

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, Jan. 15.—A deputation consisting of representatives of the United Farmers of Ontario, headed by Manley Doherty, of the Grain Dealers, and of the seedmen, all introduced by Hon. George Henry, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, waited upon Hon. A. K. Maclean, Acting Minister of Trade and Commerce, to-day, and requested the erection in Toronto of an interior government elevator similar to those built and in operation at Saskatoon, Moose Jaw and other Western points. The deputation urged the necessity of such a structure for the purposes of establishing grades and rates of dockage and of providing facilities for cleaning. The Government promised consideration.

MEETING IN THE COUNCIL CHAMBER

Progress of the Salvation Army Campaign.

Thursday evening a meeting will be held in the interests of the Red Shield Drive of the Salvation Army to raise, locally, a share of the million dollar fund for welcome and reconstruction work. The Mayor will preside at the meeting. Speakers will address the gathering and explain the objects and bespeak all assistance.

Thursday evening, 16th, is the date. Commences at eight o'clock. The Army has not made an general appeal to the country or to the Canadian public for assistance in its work for the war. It has depended on voluntary offerings and small collections and has lent its full strength to assist the appeals of other organizations. Today, seeing the need to be as great as ever, although different, the Salvation Army appeals to the generosity of the people of Canada to put them in funds to provide for such of the men returning and their families as are in need.

Come to the meeting and hear the appeal.

THRIFT FROM WANT.

The world has learned thrift from want, and the result is a pronounced, far-reaching change in many of our habits of life and business. Thrift is a woman's element and to her credit is due, as she is always saving and conserving, and for this reason she looks on with favour a system that will bring about an economical distribution of foods, such as The Groceteria at the old market arcade offers.

NOTICE TO RED CROSS SUBSCRIBERS

For the present the policy of the Local Red Cross Society will be to discontinue the collecting from subscribers, pending the receipt of more definite information from headquarters to the disbursement of the funds.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 15TH, 1919.

THE CANADIAN CLUB

The announcement of the Canadian Club of Peterboro that it has been successful in securing Senator G. D. Robertson, the new Minister of Labour as its speaker for to-morrow evening's dinner at the Empress Hotel emphasizes the importance of citizens generally identifying themselves with the Canadian Club and its activities. The organization provides a means of bringing to Peterboro men who are prominent in Canadian life, well-known speakers who would seldom be heard here were it not for the medium provided by the Canadian Club. The membership of the latter is open to all citizens and a cordial invitation is extended to residents of Peterboro generally to become members and take advantage of the opportunity of hearing a splendid series of address on topics that are of supreme importance at the present time.

THE PETERBORO EXHIBITION

Citizens are again reminded of the annual meeting of the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition in the city council chambers on Friday afternoon and at the invitation of the directors to citizens of Peterboro generally to show their interest in the success of the exhibition by attending. The Peterboro Exhibition is an institution of which the people of this city may well be an honest pride. During recent years it has made vast strides, and its reputation is spreading as the event itself develops in size and importance. The directors have adopted a policy of progress and advance that is rapidly bearing fruit and the time is not far distant when the Peterboro Exhibition will be continued for a whole week and will have grounds and buildings second to none in the smaller cities of the Dominion. The citizens of Peterboro can do much to make this vision a reality by taking an active interest in the Exhibition and they should begin by turning out in large numbers at the annual meeting which promises to be of an unusually interesting nature. The reports for the year will be given at this meeting and plans for the 1919 Exhibition discussed and all citizens are cordially invited to be present.

AN EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.

In dealing with the problem of the repatriation of returned soldiers, Peterboro might do well to consider the example that has been set in Windsor, where a practical plan to assist the Border City service men to find employment, has been set in operation.

In Windsor the principle has been adopted that a returned man is the best possible individual to look after returned soldiers, it being realized that the men who come back from overseas have more confidence in a comrade who has been through the big adventure himself than they have in a civilian.

The Windsor Board of Trade has interested itself in this important matter, and with a view to carrying out the principle of having a returned soldier look after the needs of his comrades, has appointed a Repatriation Committee, which has been successful in raising $2500 to open an employment bureau. This has been placed in charge of a returned soldier whose duty it is to endeavor to find employment for ex-service men generally. The Repatriation Committee of the Board will of course assist the employment bureau in every way possible, and it is expected that the plan adopted will be a most successful method of solving the problem.

So far there has been very little done locally to meet the situation, and the number of returned soldiers who are unable to find employment is increasing daily.

BE A RE-PATRIOT.

Repatriation is a word Canadians are hearing much about these days. It is a Johnsonian word, for which there is no equivalent in the Anglo-Saxon language, just as there is no precedent in Canada for conditions that have followed the European war.

Repatriation means bringing Canadian soldiers home; it involves the return of their wives and children; it embraces the discharging of returned men from the Army, and their absorption into useful, congenial and self-respecting employment.

Repatriation has to do with employment is now available in the East ties for employment, their expansion and mobility. It foresees that if employment is not availale in the East, it may be in the West, and aims at the movement of the worker to the work, wherever it may be.

Repatriation never leaves the returned man. It is a constant buckler for him. Under its command is the Pension System of Canada, that extends to the returned man as a right his country's tangible gratitude, as a moiety of his deserts.

Repatriation contemplates the readjustment of commercial and industrial conditions; within its purview are war workers and others.

Its busies itself with the possibilities of the expansion of domestic and foreign trade, that new and greater chances for employment may be opened up.

Repatriation has a humanitarian side; Canada must be made a better place to live and work in, befitting the glory won by Canadian arms in Flanders. Those who had to stay at home must join hands with those who went overseas, and are now, thank God, returning, in making Canada safe for democracy.

Repatriation is a task for each individual citizen in Canada. He is the happy Canadian who busies himself in finding out his duty regarding repatriation, and does it;—he dare not avoid it and call himself a Canadian.

Repatriation demands the best endeavor of every citizen.

A POLYGLOT BOARDING HOUSE.

That was a terse expression which the late ex-President Roosevelt used when he asked if the United States should be "a polyglot boarding house." He meant, of course, that English should be the predominant language in his country, and he was never tired of saying, that this was the great means of turning aliens into real Americans.

It will be well for Canadians to be asking themselves the same question as applied to the Dominion and to be taking every opportunity to impress upon the Government that they will not allow Canada to be not only a boarding house for aliens, but one in which they can live while making money out of the country to the detriment of its own population. The Toronto Globe has been dealing with what it calls "Alien Assurance, which in popular language would be called "Alien Cell." The Globe points out that a convention of Ukrainians held in Saskatoon a few days ago passed several resolutions which showed a good deal of assurance. The convention expressed its strong "disapproval" of educational amendments "by which the 68,000 Ukrainian people of Saskatchewan are being discriminated against as one particular nationality". It protested "most strongly" against the appointment of Dr. T. M. Anderson as Director of Education for the non-English settlements in Saskatchewan because of "his marked hostility to the Ukrainian citizens of Canada." It demanded the "immediate repeal" of the Order-in-Council prohibiting the publication of Ukrainian books and newspapers without the required English translation in parallel columns.

This is proof positive that these people want to turn Canada into a polyglot boarding house. Fortunately Saskatchewan has decided that English shall be the language of that Province and the medium of instruction in its schools; so as far as that Province is concerned the aims of the people there who would seek to oppose Canadianizing influences will be brought to nought. The Globe agrees with most Canadians that the proper course of dealing with those aliens who desire to have their own languages, and segregate themselves, is to deport them. Very truly, it says: "The return of peace by removing transportation difficulties will give dissatisfied aliens an opportunity to return to their native lands. Russian malcontents will surely jump at the chance of going to the political, social, and industrial Utopia into which they tell us Messrs. Lenin and Trotsky have converted their country. Every facility ought to be provided for their speedy exit from Canada. It will be a deliverance for them if what they say is true, and it will be a relief to Canadians."—Kingston Standard.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

General Sir Sam Hughes' suggestion that a Federal memorial plan should be adopted by the Dominion Government will have many supporters throughout Canada.

The Dominion Parliament has been called on February 20th. There is every probability of a lively session.

Annual Meeting of the Parents' Circle

Officers Elected for the Year—Will Hold Regular Monthly Meetings.

The Parents' Circle of Queen Mary School held their annual meeting on Monday afternoon, in the school.

The officers of the previous year were elected by acclamation and are as follows:

President, Mrs. S. T. Medd.
Vice-President—Mrs. Connelly.
Secretary—Mrs. E. W. Borbridge.
Treasurer—Mrs. Blade.
Treas. of Flower Fund—Mrs. M. McCullough.
Convenor of Visiting Committee—Mrs. W. Waugh.
Convenor of Reception Committee—Mrs. Edmiston.
Convenor of Programme Committee—Mrs. C. Adair.
Convenor of Sewing Classes—Mrs. C. Clemence.
Representatives to Local Council of Women—Mrs. W. Waugh, Mrs. E. Borbridge and Miss McKay.

A standing vote of thanks to the president and executive for their services during the past year was moved by Mrs. M. A. Morrison and heartily responded to by those present.

It was decided to hold the regular monthly meeting on the first Friday in every month. The Sewing Classes to be held every Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the school.

Miss Caldwell delighted those present with a piano selection, after which the annual report was read.

Although the Circle has been greatly handicapped in their several undertakings during the past term owing to the recent epidemic, still much has been accomplished.

Last spring it was decided to raise funds to provide for a first aid kit and flower fund for the school.

Through the generosity of Mrs. M. A. Morrison, who kindly offered her home for the occasion, an afternoon tea and musical was given, at which a silver collection was taken and a sum sufficient to meet the required demands was realized.

We have to thank the Engineers' Club of the city, assisted by the executive and members of the Circle, for the very instructive moving picture production of the waterways of Canada, produced at the Empire Theatre in April last, to which all the pupils of the third and fourth classes of the public and separate schools were invited.

In May an open night was given at the school, which took the form of an impromptu concert, to which the general public was invited. The splendid programme was entirely in the hands of the pupils, who without any special preparation or practice, carried it through with wonderful success. The numbers consisted of chorus work, violin, piano and orchestra selections. A silver collection was taken, the proceeds of which were given to the Red Cross Society.

Annual Picnic.

In June, the annual picnic was held in Jackson Park, and as usual proved to be a very enjoyable affair, an unusually large number attending.

The Sewing Classes organized by Mrs. Clemence, assisted by members of the Circle, and which met with such success during the early part of last winter, had to be discontinued owing to the fuel situation. It is sincerely to be hoped that with the better conditions prevailing this winter these classes may be continued.

At the last regular monthly meeting it was moved by Mrs. McCullough, seconded by Mrs. Connelly, that "The Parents' Circle of Queen Mary School place themselves on record as approving the motion of the Renfrew Branch of the Woman's Council, to place the subjects, sewing, cooking, home nursing, etc., on the curriculum for senior classes in public schools, but further suggest that these subjects be extended to the curriculum in the lower classes."

Gifted Cast Surrounds Star in "$5,000 an Hour"

"Five Thousand an Hour," the Metro play starring Hale Hamilton, which will appear at The Grand Theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, shows distinguished talent from all angles of the production—in the acting, authorship and direction.

Mr. Hamilton, who is seen as the star, is an actor of note and distinction both here and abroad and is known internationally for his famous presentation of the role of Wallingford in "Get-rich-quick Wallingford," which created such furore in England that it was caused, by Royal Command, to be presented before the King and Queen at Windsor Castle. Lucille Lee Stewart, who is seen in the leading feminine role of Constance Joy, is famous throughout the country for her beauty and charming personality and splendid screen work. Others of the cast, too numerous to mention, are all well known in the theatrical world.

The play was taken from the clever novel of the same name written by George Randolph Chester, the eminent novelist and playwright, who was also the author of 'Get-rich-quick Wallingford."

The production was made by Director Ralph W. Ince, one of the most distinguished of screen directors in America who has produced many famous productions both here and abroad.

Another distinguished member of the cast of "Five Thousand an Hour," worthy of note, is Hannibal, the beautiful chestnut horse, winner of the Saratoga Special. Hannibal is

Orders-in-Council Being Reviewed By Dominion Cabinet

OTTAWA, Jan. 13.—A review is being made by the cabinet of the various orders-in-council which were passed under the authority of the War Measures Act. Some will be wiped out, some will be modified, an other will be held pending ratifying legislation. Among those which will likely disappear is the one prohibiting betting on race tracks which temporarily put an end to racing. The order provided that it should last six months after the close of the war, mut officially the war is not over. The racing men would like action taken immediately, so that racing could be resumed at the spring meet.

Two important orders which will either disappear or be modified are the anti-loafing order and the order regarding sedftious and revoluntionary literature.

The anti-loafing law is not being enforced now that the Military Service Act is no longer being enforced and will undoubtedly be repealed. It was enacted originally to compel aliens in the country who were not subject to military call at least to work. As regards the order about literature, strong representations are being made that it should be repealed, as it was only a war measure. On the other hand it is pointed out that the Government should have authority to prevent the spread of Bolshevik and anarchistic ideas by means of literature.

It is probable that the order will be modified to meet the changed conditions due to the end of the war.

German Parties Arrange Truce

Spartacans and Ebert Forces Cease Hostilities—Twelve Hours' Notice Required.

Specail to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 15.—"Peace negotiations" have begun between the Spartacans and the government troops according to Berlin despatches received to-day. The Government Spartacans are said to have arranged an armistice Friday, whereby neither faction would resume fighting without twelve hours' notice.

INQUEST OPENED LAST NIGHT INTO CHAS. CREES' DEATH

An inquiry into the death of Chas. Crees, whose body was found hanging yesterday in the barn of his employer, H. McKay, of Otonabee, was opened last night at Comstock's. The jury was empanelled as follows: George Elliott, foreman; F. W. Miller, James Graham, J. Knox, W. G. Morrison, Wm. Brown, George Baird, John Watt, T. Sproat and Clarence Snider. Coroner Greer presided.

After viewing the body, which had been brought to Comstock's undertaking rooms, the inquest was adjourned until Tuesday, January 21st.

High County Constable Moore made a preliminary investigation of Crees' death. He was about 39 years old, had worked for McKay two years, and for McKay's father six years previously.

From the information received, Crees had evidently set a ladder against a beam high up in the barn. He had provided himself with a length of plow rope, one end of which he fastened to the beam, and the other he looped about his neck, and then threw himself from the ladder.

The McKay farm is several miles south of Pallin's Corners.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—Through Premier Venizelos, the Greek Goyernment has presented to the Peace Congress its claims representing the Hellenic nation of eight million people. # Information Concerning the Death of Peterboro Soldier

Bert Chrow Was Well Liked by His Associates—Influenza Was the Cause of Death.

Mr. W. Chrow, 43 Sophia street, East City, has received the following information concerning the death of his son, which occurred while with the troops in the British West Indies. The letter follows:

Virgir, St. Lucia, B.W.I.,
December 16th, 1918.

From Sgt.-Major Bethune R.
R.C.E., St. Lucia,

To Mr. W. Chrow,
43 Sophia St.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Mr. Chrow,—I extend to you my deepest sympathy in your recent very sad bereavement, for in dear old Bert you have lost a son, of which any father could be justly proud. I have known him very intimately for considerably over three years and in that time there has developed a liking and a sympathy seldom found amongst men. We have shared each others' confidences and fellowship. He has endeared himself to my wife and family and now that he has gone he has left behind him memories for for those that remain that will be life long in their duration.

In the army it has been my lot to meet and have dealings with many kinds of men for it is only in such an institution the veil is taken off the humah mind and the inner man acts as his nature dictates. In Bert I find a true man built up with sincerity of purpose seldom met and to me the words of Colonel Harris to-day when he was sympathizing with me for having lost my friend, "A good boy; solid through and through." Captain Mikhell's on Saturday morning when I informed him of the dreadful news was, "A genuine man; the boy we can least afford." From these expressions of heartfelt sympathy from his commanding officers you can imagine the feelings that are in the garrison at the present time; everybody knew Bert; he was everybody's boy and endeared himself to many as a comrade and friend.

A Premonition.

Just a week before the date of his death, he wasn't feeling well and he came to my house as was his usual to spend the afteronon and evening. He was sitting on the verandah with Mrs. Bethune and then he seemed to have a premonition of something going to happen him, for he commenced speaking of the likelihood of his funeral going down the Palm Grove before the week was out. Of course nobody took the matter seriously and tried to change his mind from such thoughts. However, late in the evening Sgt. McInnes found him lying in his hammock crying; he must have had thoughts then, though afterwards he seemed to cheer up and took a little nourishment. On Sunday there was little difference and he stayed with me the whole day, his appetite having completely gone. On Monday morning he felt quite a bit better and tried to go to work. He however had to quit it and go to bed, and on the same night we noticed that he had a big rise in temperature, so we took him to the hospital at about 8 p.m. He was admitted, suffering from influenza. On Tuesday morning he was delirious, and from that time until his death had only flashes of sanity.

He reported to hospital every morning for five days previous to his being admitted, but owing to his having no temperature to speak of and the hospital being crowded, he was given medicine to take it home.

I hope, Mr. Chrow, that in writing I do not open afresh the wounds you have had so recently dealt you, but I feel it is my duty to my best friend to write his father when he himself has gone. I know Bert would like it, for in all his confidential talks, he never forgot his mother, father and sister. There was always time to think of them and he was looking forward to joining the family circle before many months were over; however, God has willed it different, and it behooves us to bow our head to the Great Architect of the Universe, no matter how unjust it may all seem. I trust that Mrs. Chrow has recovered from the awful news; she has the sincere sympathy of both Mrs. Bethune and myself.

Now Mr. Chrow I must close. Bert's effects are being looked after and you will be in receipt of same in due course.

May God bless and protect you both and help you to bear the calamity. God bless his sister.

Your very sincere and sympathizing friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Bethune.

Poems Are Widely Commented On

Mr. Wilson McDonald Has Been Turning Out Some Good Work.

Mr. Wilson Mac Donald, poet, artist and talented musician, is at present a guest at the Empress hotel.

Mr. MacDonald has been recognized as one of the foremost Canadian poets and his work has been most favourably recognized by such discrimmating journals as the Literary Digest, which in a criticism of his poems calls him a "genius produced by the war." In commenting upon Mr. MacDonald's book of poems, "The Song of the Prairie Land," the Saturday Night says there has been no finer poem of this kind written in Canada than Mount Elias, which appears in the book.

The author told the Examiner today that he has a personal letter from Brand Whilock, saying, "I am writing to tell you how fine I thought your poem and what a noble work you are doing." This was a tribute to a recent poem, "The Shame of Society."

A patriotic poem, "The Girl Behind the Man Behind the Gun," was recited by several generals at the front, including General Currie and General Hague. The latter tribute to Mr. MacDonald's genius apparently pleased him more than all the newspaper notices he has received.

To obtain literary inspiration, Mr. MacDonald numbers amongst his experiences sleeping in the streets of London, in the wilds of the Yukon and in the alleys of British Columbia.

Inaugural Meeting of the Children's Aid Society

The first action of the new board of the Children's Aid Society, was to raise the salary of the agent Mr. G. W. Powell from the present $900 to $1200 inclusive of the Government grant.

Mr. Powell submitted a scale of the salaries received by agents in other towns and cities which indicated the average salary to be $1200 with a few odd ones as high as $2,000 Mr. J. J. Kelso wrote to the Board stating that a raise was justified.

Mr. Wearing said that the agent is particularly adapted to his position and other members of the board commended his work highly. It was shown that the agent now devotes his whole time to the work.

On motion of Mr. S. T. Medd seconded by Rev. J. A. MacKenzie the raise of salary was granted to date from January 19th.

Help for Garden

Installation of Officers For Woodmen of the World

Interesting Address by Mr. Jarvis—Work Accomplished by the Order—List of Officers Installed.

A large and enthusiastic attendance met that night in their Hall to elect and install the officers of Sherwood Forest Camp 50 for 1919.

The meeting started prompt on time and business was gone through quickly ,several new members and also old members returning to the camp, after several years absence. A notable re-appearance in the camp was Sov. A. A. Hastill a former clerk who was accorded a hearty welcome by those present.

The meeting indicated renewed action as in pre-war days and the ensuing year has started out very bright and full of promise for another Banner year for the local camp.

Head Consul Commander Sov. Chair Jarvis of London, then arrived and was given a hearty welcome by the members in session.

The Officers

Consul Commander Edgar Lebar then called upon H. C. C. Jarvis to occupy the chair and take charge of the election and installation ceremony. The vacant offices were duly elected atnd filled viz: The clerk Sov. Fred Sutcliffe, Banker, Sov. E. S. Ivey, and Sentry Sov. J. W. Worth.

The complete list of officers were then installed as follows:

P.C.C.—Sov. Edgar Lebar.
C. C.—Sov. Andrew Graham.
Adv. Lt—Sov. A G Killingbeck
Banker—Sov. E.S. Ivey.
Clerk—Sov. Fred Sutcliffe.
Escort—Sov. Robt. H. Carr.
Watchman—Sov. W. J. Gower.
Sentry.—Sov. J W Worth
Managers—Sov. Harry Udy, Sov. W. H. Tedford, Sov. George Lee.
Physician—Sov. Dr. J. A. Morgan.

The new officers then retired to their various stations and the new C C. A. Graham called the meeting to order and closed the business session.

All the members were anxious to sit down to the banquet tables, which were beautifully decorated and also filled with good things for the inner man.

Deputy Consul W. P. Chard, who attended as representative of Lindsay camp, was voted as chairman over the banquet.

The Toast List.

Mr. Chard in his opening remarks, said he was very proud to be present with Peterborough Camp on this occasion. It was his first visit and one which he would long remember. The attendance, being all members of Sherwood Forest Camp, certainly gave great hopes for the coming year for Woodcraft in the city, and he was looking forward to see Peterborough at the head of the honour roll for 1919. The toast list:

The King, proposed by Sov. E. J. Waterman, replied to by the chairman, Sov. Chard.

The Order, proposed by Bkr. E. S. Ivey, replied to by H. C. C. Jarvis, London.

The Camp, proposed by Sov. John Penrose, replied to by C. C., A. Graham.

Newly Elected Officers, proposed by Sov. Wm. Dummitt, replied to by Sov. J. W. Worth.

The Ladies, proposed by Clerk Sutcliffe, replied to by Sov. Mrs. Ivey.

The Address.

The address of the evening was given by H. C. C. Jarvis, in reply to the Order.

He was delighted with the reception accorded him on visiting this Camp, and said it was a pleasure to see so many members present, and he had confidence in Sherwood Forest Camp to accomplish their feat of a year ago and win the Banner Flag again.

He was proud to speak in defence of Fraternal Associations and Fraternal Insurance, especially so of the Canadian Order of the Woodmen of the World. We have passed through a very critical time during the past four years, what with the Great War and later the Influenza Epidemic, but the Order has paid all claims promptly, the victory is now won, and we are in a stronger and sounder financial position to-day, than ever before in our history. (Applause.)

To-night was a fitting night to honor, equally with Nov. 11th when the armistice was signed which gave great rejoicing in the Allied countries To-night January 13th in a city in France was the beginning of Peace Conference, in which he placed great faith in Premier Lloyd George and other British statesmen to draw up a permanent peace, and forever crush all military powers.

The future of Canada was never brighter, now the allied countries of Europe were linked together in a great friendship and he looked forward to a large immigration to our fair Dominion. He hoped our Government would assist these people coming in our midst and see that the character of them is bright and helpful ot to allow any enemy element such as the Bolsheyiki elements to come amongst us, such as is being experienced at the present time in Russia and Berlin. The war is now over, thanks primarily to the British Navy and casually remarked about President Wilson term re the freedom of the seas, he would leave that question to John Bull, who did not intend to take any chances in the future on the seas, but would keep the navy intact and possibly even stronger.

Again thanking the members for their kind attention he closed hoping the members would rally round their new officers during the ensuing year and when next he visited them, he hoped to meet many new faces in Peterborough Camp.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem about 12:30 a.m.

Price of Bacon Due For a Drop

Packers Don't Know the Reason, But Decline Is Already in Sight.

TORONTO, Jan. 15.—Pork packers of Toronto have no explanation to give for the drop of $2.50 per hundred in hog prices. They state that they do not know whether the cancellation of British contracts has had anything to do with it or not. They do admit, however, that there is a prospect that bacon will be cheaper to the consumer before long.

The buyer for the Harris Abattoir told a reporter that he did not know why the price had dropped. "All I can tell you is that we can't sell them after we get them," he said.

"Has the cancellation of British contracts anything to do with it?"

"I dont' know anything about it." We have no contracts that can be cancelled."

"Will the price of bacon come down?" "Assuredly it will."

"I don't kno wanything about it," said the buyer of hogs for the Matthews-Blackwell Co. "All I know is I am told to buy so many hogs and get them as cheap as I can."

"Do you know if the cancellation of British contracts had anything to do with it?" "I don't know a thing about contracts. I know that hogs were cheaper and that is all."

"Is there any prospect of bacon coming down in price to the consumer?" "It is hard to say. I really don't know. I should think it might very shortly."

The reporter repeated this question. "You are perfectly safe in saying that the price of bacon to the consumer will come down," was the reply.

The welfare of women war workers has become an important item, and many ways of caring for them have been found.

Crown Attorney Hatton Contends Liquor Was Intoxicating

Argument for the Prosecution in the Faux Case—Proof Spirits.

In summing up the evidence in the case of Emmet Faux, who is charged with selling liquor contrary to the statutes, Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton contended that the accused contravened Section 40 of the Ontario Temperance Act in that he sold liquor without a license to do so.

Liquor, said Mr. Hatton, shall include any drink and drinkable liquids which are intoxicating and any liquor which contains more than 2½ per cent of proof spirits shall be conclusively, deemed to be intoxicating. As the government analysis shows that the liquor sold by the accused contained over 73 per cent. of proof spirits, it was conclusively intoxicating. No evidence can be given to controvert that. The only question left, therefore for the court to consider is —Was the liquor sold drinkable. The evidence is that the contents of the bottle having been tasted by Omer Bourgon, the deceased, was accepted by Bourgon and paid for as being drinkable. He, Bourgon, and his friend, Hetherington, the latter having been previously invited to spend the evening with Bourgon for the express purpose of drinking liquor. This is Hetherington's own evidence, not contradicted, and that he (Hetherington) and the deceased, Bourgon) did spend the evening up to 11 p.m., drinking this liquor in question. This is proved by Hetherington and corroborated by Mrs. Bourgon. Each of them, Bourgon and Hetherington, had at least three drinks each, and as the latter says, may have had four. This then is proof that the liquor was drinkable. That Faux purchased Columbian spirits from the druggist is beside the question in dispute. Columbian spirits does not contain any proof spirits. That he (Faux) did purchase two bottles of pure alcohol on Christmas day, three days only before he sold the liquor to Bourgon, has a bearing on the question as showing how he obtained a mixture that he sold to Bourgon, one that was conclusively intoxicating and from the evidence, drinkable.

These two points having been proved ,the accused has contravened the provisions of the Act ,and is liable to the penalty provided for the same.

The case was adjourned until Saturday.

A Well-Known Speaker Coming

Will Address Two Meetings in Peterboro Next Week Is a Well Known Speaker in the United States.

Word has been received in the city that Mr. Chas. G. Trumbull, Editor of the Sunday School Times, Philadelphia, who is to address a series of meetings in Toronto on Wednesday and Thursday of next week, will come to Peterboro on Friday, January 24th, and address two meetings in St. Paul's Church in the afternoon and evening. For forty years or more Mr. Trumbull and his father before him have been the Editors of the Sunday School Times which now has a circulation of 115,000, its subscribers being located in all parts of the continent. Some of the schools in Peterboro subscribe to the Sunday School Times for all of their teachers. Mr. Trumbull will speak on "The Victorious Life." He has been in great demand as a speaker at large conferences held throughout the United States during the past few years. Efforts have been made for a long time to bring him to Peterboro but this is the first occasion on which he has found it possible to accept. The meetings will be open to the public.

Peterboro Boy With Canadians On the Rhine

Lance-Corporal Palmer Wiley Enlisted in the 93rd Battalion.

Mr. C. Wiley of the local post office staff, has received the following letter from his son, L. Corporal Palmer Wiley, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion:

Neunkerchen, Germany,
Dec. 16, 1918

Dear Mother and Dad,—

Received your last letter dated Nov. 17, a few days ago, and sure was glad to hear from you again. I also received Christmas box No. 30 yesterday, and thanks very very much for the same. Everything was in the best of condition; the cake and the candy were fine. I have received four parcels so far, and yours was the first on the list, one from Della, one from the church, and also the sox from the church. I also have a parcel coming from Horace's people, I believe, so if they keep coming I don't think I will starve for a while. What do you think?

Ready for Action.

Well, I wonder what to-morrow will bring? I think it will be an extension to the armistice, but it is hard to say. Probably the guns will open up at 11 o'clock, but just let him try any funny work and we will blow a few of his towns off the map, like he did in Belgium and France. We are about 30 kilos east of the Rhine now, marched through a big town on the Rhine a few days ago (called Bonn), with fixed bayonets, and had our pictures taken by the movie people so if any pictures are shown over there entitled "Canadians Crossing the Rhine," you might see somebody that you know.

I don't know what contingent I came across with but I don't think that will matter very much because I believe we will go home either as units or according to length of service.

We had to sign a paper a while ago stating that our money balance, etc., was O. K. up to date. I figured mine up the best I could, and how much balance I had up to date, and it was within a few cents of what the paymaster figured, so I signed it. We were also asked if we wanted to go back to the same jobs that we held before the war, so I told them yes; but I don't know whether I will go back to bookbinding again or not. I am not going on a farm anyway.

Well, I will close for this time. Will write again soon. With love, Palmer.

P.S.—Use the same address that you always use.

A LETTER FROM BOMBARDIER CLANCY

Peterboro Soldier Tells of Preparations for Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Clancy of this city, have received the following letter from their son, who is at present in Germany with the Canadian artillery:

Germany, Dec. 20,

My Dear Father and Mother,—I am indeed late in getting my Christmas mail away. I hope you will overlook it, and that these few words will be of some help to you in knowing that I am well and enjoying good health.

To-day and also to date, I have received five letters from you. I note that they are all written under one impression, that is that I will be home by Christmas, 1918.

Homeward Journey.

My parcels are also cancelled. However, do not worry about that. Everything at the present time is very good. We are making huge and extensive preparations for Christmas. We have hired a hall and drawn up a menu and a good time is promised. While I am at it I think I will give you my opinion of things. First of all, peace has not yet been signed, and until that happens I hardly think that the troops in France will be demobilized. However, when it is signed I think that they will immediately start us on our homeward journey. We have a fairly large Canadian force in France, therefore it may take some time before we all land on Canadian shores.

Your loving son. VERNOL.

I wish you all a merry Christmas.

Declares War on the Meat Packers

Britain Will Demand Account of American Meat Profits During the War—Only First Investigation.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The Allied committee to investiagte world food conditions, will probably look into the reasons for the present high prices of American meats," declared Col. R. O. Campbell, member of the Joint committee of the British Food Ministry and Board of Agriculture, in an interview with the United Press to-day.

It is understood Great Britain is soon to institute an investigation into food prices, which will include the question of prices being paid American packers for supplies to the United Kingdom. These prices have caused great dissatisfaction here, although the British Food Controller has been forced to yield to American prices. It is probable the Investigation committee will include an American, familiar with food conditions in the United States.

WORK WHICH WOMEN CAN DO

Since the signing of the armistice the impression seems to have become more or less general that women's war activities are at an end. Because the Red Cross no longer needs supplies for the army does not mean that there is nothing to do. There is a very great deal to be done, work which needs doing immediately, and is actually suffering for want of workers. Women's organizations have been requested to direct their efforts to relief work, and it is strange how this appeal, which is so urgent, can be made in vain. To any woman who thinks for a moment it must be perfectly evident that it will be months, even years, before the poor refugees of Serbia, Belgium, and France can be self-supporting. They have no possible means of obtaining clothes, and even if they possessed money, materials are not available in those countries desolated by war.

Many societies are working for these poor people, but it is no use pretending that there is anything like the enthusiasm and energy shown for this work that there was for the Red Cross supplies. There have been but few workers in attendance at the meetings of the local Red Cross Society since relief work was begun.

Winter Slipping Away.

The winter is slipping away, and in the meantime these suffering people are cold and ill-clad. The first and most obvious duty for us all is "to feed the hungry and clothe the naked." Let us once more realize that this work is a definite duty for the women of Canada to do, and get together without further loss of time to do our part for those whose sufferings already have been so tremendous, that they may at least have clothes.

If we shirk this duty we shall prove unworthy of the victory which has been won for us.

Relief work in connection with the local Red Cross Society is being carried on in the Public Library every Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoon. Every woman in the city who can give even one hour a week to this work is urged to come on any one of these afternoons.

With a decisive victory over W. G. Morrow this morning, J. J. Moore of Keene, skipped his rink into the possession for one year of the splendid trophy donated by Mr. Robert Neill to the Peterborough Curling Club to be competed for in an annual bonspiel by the clubs of this district. Each member of Moore's rink received a casserole, the gift of the local committee, but above these substantial prizes were the immaterial but subtly gratifying laurels that are extended to the winners of the first bonspiel and to the fact that the names of the Keene ring will be inscribed first on the trophy's pedestal.

Moore's win was a popular one for several reasons. He represented an outside club, and there was some satisfaction to the local curlers that the Neill trophy should make its first sojourn out of town. This feeling was reinforced by the appreciation of the steady and skilful play of the Keene rink. They had to battle their way to the finals, and there was nothing flucky in their victory over Morrow's rink. Jack Moore was also remembered as the "vice" for W. M. Lang, who won the consolation of the open bonspiel three winters ago. He was then Sergeant Moore of the 93rd Battalion, and the intervening years he has spent overseas. Hence, although there was a fraternal feeling for Morrow's rink, the spectators and Mr. Morrow himself were delighted with Keene's success.

The progress of the game is revealed by the score. Moore opened a big lead but faltered on the twelfth end. He rallied, however, taking the last two ends and stopping Morrow's spurt.

Altogether the bonspiel has been a success, and its effects were suggested in the brief speeches during the noon-hour when J. W. McDermid, president of the club, congratulated the winners, and called upon Tom Brightman to make the presentation as the deputy of Mr. Neill, who was unable to attend the close of the bonspiel.

"This cup is just like Mr. Neill," said Mr. Brightman. "Everything he does is one hundred percent. and I feel sure that curling in this district will be greatly benefited through this bonspiel."

Mr. Moore and his "vice", Mr. Kennaley, thanked the club and Mr. Neill for the prizes and the sport they had enjoyed. "This ought to arouse new interest in curling among our Keene boys. It's a young man's game, but they kept telling us we could never win anything. I played for the first time in my life against a Lakefield rink yesterday but I have yet to meet Millbrook. This bonspiel should bring us into closer association."

Morrow reached the finals by defeating Allen of Millbrook, Connal, McDermid and Kay. In the meantime Moore was eliminating W. H. Bradburn, Tom Bri[illegible]n, Redpath of Lakefield, and [illegible]cKelvie of Norwood.

An Annual Event.

The Peterboro Curling Club opened a new record in its chronicles yesterday with the first bonspiel for the handsome trophy presented by Mr. Robert Neill to be competed for by the Clubs in this district. For some years the opinion has prevailed in the Peterboro Club that the curlers of this district should be brought more closely together, not only for the interest attaching to the proposed games, but also that curling might be fostered in this district, and that a deeper feeling of kinship might be promoted.

The bonspiel was actually suggested late last season, but it did not materialize. At the annual meeting of the local club Mr. Neill gave the proposal the push it required by offering a trophy valued at $100 to be contested by rinks representing the Peterboro, Millbrook, Norwood, Lakefield, Keene and Hastings Clubs. That this idea strongly appealed to the district curlers was manifested by the twenty-five entries in the first bonspiel yesterday.

Mr. Neill was present at intervals throughout the day and must have been delighted with the success of the bonspiel. It was warmly approved by the local rinks, and the outside clubs were well represented. Such was the beginning of the Neill bonspiel, as it may be termed, and it is hoped that each winter will develop its advantages and opportunities for advancing the good old game in this district.

It was gratifying to notice the sprinkling of young men in the visiting rinks. This was particularly remarked in the Norwood and Keene groups. Nothing will insure the future of curling in the neighborhood towns more than the interest of the youths, and on their form yesterday it is evident that they receive all the encouragement from the older players.

That the visitors had a full share of the victories was indicated by the rinks that reached the eights. Three of them were from outside Peterboro—J. R. McKelvie, of Norwood, Jack Moore of Keene, and Redpath, of Lakefield. Three of the nine visiting rinks reached the eights round, as against five from the Peterboro club. The percentage is thus 3 of 9 for the visitors, and 5 out out of 16 for the local rinks. The honours up to that stage had gone to the visitors by a slight margin.

The spectators frankly hoped that the big trophy might take to the road in this first bonspiel, and down to the fours there was some likelihood that an outside rink might win it.

The City Council was well represented in Mayor Duncan, who lead for George Morrow, and Ald. Taylor who helped Alex. Kay skip his way into the fours. Both were "fagged" by 10 o'clock with three games packed away on ice that made the going decidedly strenuous.

Both Jack Moore and McKelvie had two good boys playing first and second stones.

George Morrow had a big day. His famous "jaw" shots were decidedly effective, and the old fable that he whistles in tight corners was disproved by the fact that he tuned up occasionally when he had set up comfortable leads, especially that 5-end on the president.

The ice had most of them guessing and not infrequently the rings were practically bare when the vices and skips took their turns.

Foote gave Kay a real battle down to the very last stone.

Rules were as Fair as Possible.

The visiting rinks must have been impressed by the efforts of the bonspiel committee to make this competition as fair to them as possible. The local scheduled rinks had to play their own men and the few substitutes that were necessary had to be of the same rank as the players they replaced. It was intimated that if two rinks from the same outside club were drawn against one another in the first round, the slips would be thrown back into the hat and redrawn. This would have prevented the elimination of a visiting rink by another rink from the same club.

The committee is to be congratulated upon the success of the bonspiel and a little special mention is due to Mr. Metheral for the attention he gave to the allotment of the ices and calling of the rounds.

PETERBORO BOWLERS TAKE FIVE MAN EVENT FROM VISITORS

At the Water street Alleys yesterday afternoon, Toronto Bowlers fell down before the Peterboro heavyweights in the Five Man Team Event. The Petes were in good shape and rolled a total of 2,965 for the three games, while the visitors had 2,635, giving the Petes a margin of 325 pins on the game for Toronto on Monday next. For the Petes, Solomon had the total of 748 and high single of 320, while P. Gettas rolled 659. Bloomfield for the visitors was high with 597.

In the evening the singles and doubles were played and Toronto carried off all the honors in these events, the Petes not having got into shape after the afternoon success.

After the games were over, cheers were given for the players, when they adjourned to the Boston Cafe, where they sat down to a sumptuous repast. After the inner man has been satisfied songs and speeches were in order. The party left on the early train for Toronto this morning.

Play in Port Hope Friday

The Peterboro Junior O.H.A. team will practice to-night at 7 o'clock and a full turn out of the regulars is asked for as this will be the last practice before the game in Port Hope on Friday night. The battle in the Lakeshore town promises to be a spectacular one as the Ontarios are always bad medicine on their own ice and the Peterboro youngsters have a real game ahead of them. Southwell and Sherry of the Port Hope team are a star pair of Juniors and the rest of the outfit not far behind them so that the Petes should have no visions of an easy game.

Petes Condition Won For Them, Says Warder

The Lindsay Warder's report of Monday night's hockey game at Lindsay is rather amusing in its reference to Peterboro's activity in signing up a team seven or eight months ago and to the good condition of the Peterboro team "who have been have at work in the gym". As a matter of hockey the Petes had not a practice together before they met Whitby a week ago and their work in the gymnasium—how do you get that way? Says the Warder:—

To win a horse race the animal must be trained and in condition; to win a scholarship the mind must be crammed and trained; to win a motor race both the machine and the driver must be trained and atune; to win in athletics the body and mind must be well developed and trained It is the same in hockey, one of the greatest winter sports—to win, the players must be in physicial condition and well trained. Then you get a good team. Reverse the idea and you get a poor team.

Lindsay intermediates in their game against Peterboro last night were like the Englishman's favorite beverage, "half and half". They were in what is generally described as "fairly good condition." The result is that they were trimmed on their own ice by the score 11 to 6, and they were beaten by the best team.

The visitors were accompanied by a number of supporters and by Jerry Coughlin, their trainer. They brought their best team, one that showed every sign of giving an even better account of themselves when they got out on larger ice.

They did not exactly put it over Lindsay like a tent, but they demonstrated a speedier forward line, a more tactful defence and better headwork. Added to this they were in better condition.

All of which is not to be wondered at. Peterboro started seven and eight months ago locating players, and succeeded in signing up a crew of old timers at the game, including Halpin the speedy defence man who was wanted by the Hamilton Tigers and by Kingston. Also Jackson and Rose, and the old reliable Legross in goal. Then they have a hulking giant called Shultz on defence and a speedy man named Evans in centre, while Lowes and Kennealley subbed They have been at work in the "gym" for months past—and on the ice as well.

Wonderful Acting In "The Wanderer"

Big Dramatic Spectacle Seen To-night, the Last Time Here.

To-night will be the last opportunity to see the wonderful dramatic spectacle "The Wanderer" at the Grand Opera House. The production is the biggest attraction of its kind ever seen in Peterboro and its appearance here was only made possible by an arrangement that permitted the company to split the week between this city and Kingston, it being practically impossible to stage the play for one night only, so massive and elaborate are the stage settings. 'The Wanderer" however, does not depend upon the beauty of its stage Shaksperian offerig, it would still tumes or the unusual lavishness of its scenic effects for its success. Were the production presented on a stage as bare of scenery as a Ben Greet Shaksperian offerings, it would still be one of the most appealing dramatic events that Peterboro has seen, so remarakble is the acting of the most capable company. Frederick Lewis who is seen in the role of the leading character Jether gives a remarkable presentation of the part and Miss Florence Auer's work as the mother is an outstanding feature. Her art rises to its climax in her welcome to the prodigal when he comes back broken in health and stripped of everything save life itself. Henry Duggan's picture of Jesse is realistic and convincing while Louise Orth in the vampire part of Tisha not only possesses the physical attraction essential to the role but has the necessary histrionic ability as well. It is a splendid caste and the whole production is a revelation of stage craft that must be seen to be appreciated.

Two Cliques Hold "League of Nations"

Are Marching Toward a Common Goal—Right of Decision is Suggested.

(Associated Press.)

PARIS, Jan. 15.—With the resumption to-day of meetings preliminary to the Peace Conference, it is apparent that the movement to create a League of Nations is being carried on by two forces, having the same object, but differing as to the means for making effective decisions of the proposed world society. One of these represents the contention that the decisions of the League must be backed by its combined physical forces, while the other represents the view that its findings can be enforced without the aid of the common world police force. Diplomatists are watching the movement of the two ideas as they come into bearing before the conference, and seem impressed with the view that both sides are moving toward a common ground which, for example, might provide that nations could reserve for each individual case their decision whether they would utilize armed force or avail themselves of other means.

Germans Steal Army Supplies of Yanks

Motor Trucks Handed Over Under Terms of Armistice are Sold by Huns.

Special to the Examiner:

AMERICAN HEADQUARTERS IN GERMANY, Jan. 15.—The American Third Army has uncovered a plot by the Germans to evade the terms of the armistice, according to an announcement to-day.

The Americans were nearly cheated of millions of marks worth of material, it has been learned, through sales of motor trucks and large quantities of supplies by the Germans. The supplies, which reverted to the Americans under the terms of the armistice, were sold to private corporations and individuals.

A proclamation has been issued from headquarters, warning against such sales, and declaring them void. Everything thus sold has been ordered surrendered within a week.

LAKEFIELD CURLERS IN PETERBORO

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 15.—Two rinks of curlers went to Peterboro on Tuesday to compete for the Neil Cup. The rinks were as follows:

| Dr. G. J. Gibson | Mr. R. J. Jory |
| Mr. J. E. Galvin | Mr. B. Dench |
| Mr T. Braden | Mr. Theo Crawford |
| Mr. J. W. Ridpath | Mr. N. A. Moore |
| Skip | Skip |

Two rinks of the Lakefield Curling Club expect to go to a bonspiel in Lindsay on Tuesday, January 21st.

Reconstructing the Map Of Europe

German Aspirations Toward East Are Effectually Cut Off—Venizelos is Successful in Plan of Southern League.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Jan. 15.— German expansion toward the Balkans and Russia will be effectually cut off the establishment of a new "Mittel Europa," stretching from the Mediterranean to the Baltic, it was learned in diplomatic circles to-day. The success of Premier Venielos of Greece in reaching anagreement with Serbia, Roumania, the Czecho-Slovaks and the Jugo-Slavs regardin ga future concerted policy laid the foundations for the Balkans' Confederation, and established the southern portion of this "Mittel Europa."

Negotiations are now proceeding successfully for the purpose of lining up Poland for the northern section of the bloc. Consummation of this plan would thus constitute a barrier against which Teutonic eastern aspirations would be powerless.

Girls' Auxiliary Held Meeting

The Girls' Auxiliary and Red Cross Association of All Saints' Church held their annual business meeting last night, January 14th, and the Red Crass work was finished up and from now on the organization will devote themselves entirely to missionary work. The amount of Red Cross work accomplished by this small association for the past year speaks well for the spirit in which it was attacked.

159 Bed Pads.
509 Handkerchiefs.
148 Personal Property Bags.
40 Bandages.
4 Suits Pyjamas.
Making a total of 860 pieces.

The girls also undertook the sending of the Xmas parcels to the soldiers overseas of All Saints' Church, which numbered 80, and enclosed in each box was a pair of socks for which the organization was responsible. The Auxiliary as a missionary organization hope all the members will rally round and make the total at the end of this year, if possible, double that of last year.

Women are now eligible to membership in the Canadian Railway Mail Clerks' Association.

REV. T. H. MITCHELL HAS RESIGNED

Pastor of Old St. Andrew's Says He Has Personal Reason for Action.

TORONTO, Jan. 15.—At their annual meeting, Old St. Andrew's Church will consider the resignation of their pastor, Rev. T. H. Mitchell, whose intention to relinquish his duties was announced by Rev. Prof. Law, associate pastor, on Sunday in the form of a communication from the Presbytery, which cited the congregation to appear before that body on February 4th, to either defend or concur in the resignation.

Various members of the congregation were asked as to the reasons for the resignation. Joseph Oliver stated that Mr. Mitchell had resigned because of a nervous breakdown and declared that any other reasons given were false.

Rev. Mr. Tibbs, clerk of the Presbytery, was ill, and could not be seen, in reply to a message, stated that the Presbytery had not accepted Mr. Mitchell's resignation.

Mr. James Kent, of Kent-McClain, Limited, was loath to discuss the resignation. It is entirely private," he said.

Mr. Mitchell says he resigned for a personal reason which he would not discuss.

Rev. T. H. Mitchell occupied the pulpit of St. Andrew's Church, Peterboro, prior to moving to Toronto.

Breach of Promise Suit

Special to The Examiner:

Butcher cows and bulls of weight are quite firm, but medium rough cows and canners are easier.

Business Is Being Adjusted To Peace Basis

Reports to Bradstreet's indicate that trade is being adjusted to a peace bassi, and that a certain amount of apprehension is being entertained while the process of changing over is going on. In the meantime, there is a tendency to hold off from making commitments. This is not unlikely to react unfovaurably on business temporarily. Goods in stock almost without exception could not be purchased except at higher prices. Retailers are content to lighten their stocks, rather than make heavy purchases, in spite of the majority of price advances over declines in the last six weeks.

Intrinsically there is little to justify the expectation of lower prices, and the trend of revisions in wholesale prices would indicate the reverse.

There is more surplus labour in the market since the turn of the year, and many of the munition workers are faced with the necessity of accepting less remunerative work than that on which they were employed hitherto. The number of unemployed is growing, but industries are absorbing labour steadily. The most critical period with regard to labour is expected to be during the next six weeks. Employers are now in the reversed position of being able to discriminate in taking on help.

Organization of manufacturers in groups to secure export business is proceeding, and further steps are likely to include the selection of representatives to act for the various industries that are planning to extend their international business.

Receipts of country produce are limited. Prices of live stock are holding firm. The grain market is quiet, and with export movement of flour at a standstill, temporary stoppage of milling operations may be forced. Lower prices on flour in the United States may make similar downward prices revision necessary in Canada.

Montreal reports that the coal situation is changing rapidly; instead of dealers being besieged by the public begging for coal, the trade will have to go out this year and solicit their orders.

Employment agencies report that there are more labourers offering their services than there are jobs available, and consequently lower scale of wages is looked for.

There has been more activity in the real estate market, advices from the west stating that some big land deals have been put through at from $45 to $70 per acre.

Winnipeg reports that there is nothing outstanding in the trade situation. Business has not yet recovered from the comparative quiet that came at the turn of the year. Orders for spring are fair, and these are expected to be increased before the season has advanced far. The labour situation is somewhat easier.

Vancouver reports that prospects for the coming season are viewed as good. Industries are busy, and labour is well employed.

Guelph Italian Foully Murdered

GUELPH, Jan. 14. — Lying in a pool of blood a few feet from the back door of his home at 120 Morris street, was found the body of Fortunado Tedesco, a young Italian, twenty-two years of age. He was quite dead, but the body was still warm, and there was plenty of evidence that he had been foully murdered by some unknown person or persons.

The young man had attended a dance at Singular Hall in the evening and was returning to his home and was about to enter the house when a shot rang out in the still, frosty air, and he fell face forward to the ground. His father and mother heard strange sounds outside, and on going out soon discovered their son lying on the ground dead. The police were notified without any delay, and in a few minutes Sergeant Rae and Constable Morrison were on the scene. Coroner Lr. A. Mackinnon was also notified and he ordered the removal of the body to the local undertaking rooms, where it was later examined.

When the body was turned over in the yard a 22-calibre automatic pistol was found under the right hand, but not clutched. There was one bullet in the magazine and another in the chamber, but there was no evidence of the pistol having been fired.

Shotgun Was Used.

When the clothes were removed at the undertaking parlours it was found that the murderer had used a shotgun, as there were no fewer than 42 shot wounds in the chest and right arm of the victim. Some were very close to the heart, and no doubt were the cause of his death. He wore a heavy brown ulster coat, but it was unbuttoned, and it was also filled with shot.

The gun which was used was found by the police as soon as daylight came. It was in a vacant field, next to the Tedesco home, and about 30 feet from the body. It was a single-barreled gun, and had evidently been thrown there by the one who used it. It is a question whether the shot was fired from the outside of the fence or from the backyard, as the deceased may have staggered some distance in an effort to reach the door.

NO CHANCE FOR THE GERMS.

Disease germs cannot live in rich, red blood. It is people in low vitality that fall victims to germ diseases. By using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you enrich the blood, increase vitality and prevent disease germs from finding lodgment in your body. There's wisdom in prevention. It's easier to keep well than to get well.

SAYS LEBANDY TRIED TO SHOOT HIS OWN WIFE

Strange Action of Murdered Man—Mrs. Lebandy Issues a Statement Describing the Shooting and Alleging That it Was Done to Protect Her Daughter From the Insane Husband.

Mineola, L.I., Jan 16.—The Grand Jury began to receive testimony here regarding the shooting of Jacques Lebaudy on Saturday evening by his wife, Mme Augustine Lebaudy, at their big country house The Lodge at Westbury. H. W. Moore, council for Mrs. Lebaudy issued a statement describing the shooting and alleging that Mrs. Lebaudy acted to protect her daughter drom her insane husband. He declared that Lebaudy had previously threatened her life and continued:

"She then had caused heavy chains to be put upon the door of the two rooms occupied by herself and daughter. On one occasion these chains prevented Mr. Lebaudy from gaining entry. The State Constabulary at Mineola were informed of the trouble there and promised prompt protection.

"On Saturday morning last Mr. Lebaudy telephoned to New York and told his wife that he was coming out that night. He used language which caused her then to fear his intentions. As soon as he arrived, around 6 o'clock, he made a great noise about the lower part of the house, opening the windows and emptying the blazing coals from the fireplace out on the lawn. His wife who was in bed, got up and put on a robe and went down a few steps from the head of the stairway toward the first landing. Mr. Lebaudy saw her from the lower hall, rushed up the stairway, grabbed her by the arm, at the same time telling her that he would finish her.

"He swung her around and reached in his pocket for his weapon. As he was drawing it she quickly fired with a revolver furnished to her by a friend for her protection. He staggered back and fell dead at the foot of the stairs. There were no eye-witnesses to the occurance, but plenty of evidence as to his intention to kill both his wife and his daughter. If ever a woman was justified in defending herself from the murderous attack of an insane person, this woman was."

Knew of Lebaudy's Threats

Mr. Moore said that members of the household and others knew of the threats which Lebaudy had made toward his wife and daughter, and that complete proof would be brought that the girl was in great danger, whereas the mother actually had been stabbed and nearly strangled on previous occasions by the madman. From employees at the Lebaudy estate and others who had dealings with Lebaudy, stories were gathering rivaling in eccentricity the "Emperor of Sahara's" freaks in New York City and in Europe.

On one occasion he is alleged to have attacked his own house with an axe when his wife succeeded in eluding him in the maze of rooms in the huge building, which is more like a summer hotel than a family home. At another time he is alleged to have sought to persuade a former Deputy Sheriff to aid him in burning down the house, with its inmates. His employees and some of his neighbors saw him going about with a red lantern hanging from his mouth by a wire handle. He said that he did this for his health.

One of his amusements was said to be that of riding bareback on a cow and trying unsuccessfully to persuade her to hurdle fences. Lebaudy frequently witheld money from his wife and servants until they were without food, and when they told him there was nothing to eat, his reply, it was asserted, was to go and kill one of the cows for dinner. On one occasion he ordered a car load of ice sent to Westbury, saying that it was necessary to keep his hay cool.

In spite of his periods of insanity and some of his costly freaks, Lebaudy did not dissipate his entire inheritance from his father, the noted French sugar refiner, who is said to have left him $20,000,000. According to person intimate with the affairs of Lebaudy, his fortune to-day may be worth, from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000, most of it being non-income-producing properties especially in mines which are not being operated. Edwin T. Murdoch, formerly his lawyer, denied that Lebaudy was insane. He said:

"His 'Kingdom of Sahara' project was not a foolish one by any means. This project was launched by him when, in glancing over a map of Africa, he saw a strip of land along the African coast which was claimed by no country. His knowledge of geology showed him that this land was valuable for its mining possibilities. Therefore he outfitted an expedition and took possession of the land. He had peviously been interested in mining in other parts of Africa and had been opposed in his ventures by powerful French, English and Spanish interests. They had succeeded in forcing him out of the field there and when he took possession of the African domain these same interests brought the French Government into the case and Lebaudy was driven out.

Told Court His Reason

"On October, 5th, 1915, when he was before Supreme Court Justice Callaghan in Brooklyn, he explained his desire to take this strip of land. He told the court 'No one owned the land. No one claimed it. The coast was dangerous, and there was no lighthouse upon it. I would have built a lighthouse there for my own ships and for those of trading countries. Had I been allowed to stay there I would have been hailed as benefactor of humanity, instead of a fool, as I have been called for attempting such a thing.'

"They say he hired messenger boys to form an army for him down on his Westbury estate. Now that is really explained and is not so foolish as it appears. It seems that an adjoining neighbour on one side and Lebaudy had a roadway running between their property. It was the understanding that it was to be used for pleasure vehicles only. The neighbors began hauling heavy coal wagons over it, and this displeased Lebaudy. He built a barrier at either end of the road and hired messenger boys to guard it. His reason for hiring messenger boys was that he would not trust the ordinary help he could obtain in the section.

"He instructed the boys that he was to be called when any heavy trucks attempted to use the road. In order to signal him he gave one of the boys a French hunting horn, which happened to be tied to a green sash, just as all French hunters on their estates in France tie their horns. The boy was to blow on this when he wanted Lebaudy. That was a commonplace enough idea, but some one conceived the humorous side of it and it was put down as one of his eccentricities.

Horse And He Could See

"He once tied a lantern around the neck of his horse and rode over the estate. The reason was simple, Chicken thieves had been annoying him, stealing his chickens by the hundreds. He could not trust the help, for they aided in the thefts, he claimed. So he decided to do some thief catching on his own account. Between the house and the chicken houses was a field newly ploughed. Wishing to have one arm free to use the shotgun he carried and the other free to guide the horse, and also wishing to have the way lighted, he simply tied the lantern around the horse's neck and, as he complained to me: 'The poor horse and I both could see.' I have been his counsel for four years, and in that time I came to know the man well. He might have done things oddly, but he never did crazy things."

The first witness before the Grand Jury was Jacqueline Lebaudy, the 13-year-old daughter. She arrived at the Mineola Court House in the company of Mrs. Charles de Saulles, wife of the brother of John Longer de Saulles who was killed by his wife at "The Box," a short distance from the Lebaudy home more than a year ago. Other witnesses were servants at the Lebaudy household. District Attorney Charles R. Weeks refused to say whether he would recommend an indictment of Mrs. Lebaudy. He said that he did not feel at liberty to express any opinion whether Mrs. Lebaudy's action was justified.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Claude Beckly Warns Brian About Mandel

CHAPTER LXXXVIII

Brian felt rather conscience stricken as he rode home atop of the bus. He really had not meant to say so much to Mollie. But, as he had said, it was in his system. He had felt better for a few moments because of "getting it out," but now he felt a bit ashamed. He had not been quite loyal to Ruth; and Ruth was his wife. His wife because she loved him, and because he had begged her to marry him.

She should stay home," he muttered to ease his troublesome conscience. "If she did, I wouldn't do and say such fool things," but he was still far from comfortable. What would Mollie think of his confession? He never had said as much to Ruth. Something had held him back. But he had longed for just a little home and children. At least he had persuaded himself that he did—which amounted to the same thing—the while he was immensely comfortable because of Ruth's salary, which enabled him to use what he earned almost as he would had he been single. He now always had money in his pocket; was never embarrassed, as he had been when they were first married and had struggled so to make ends meet on his small income, neither of them knowing how.

"I'll stay away from Mollie this time," he said aloud as he looked at Ruth's picture on the bureau as he prepared for bed. Then: "No, I won't either! What's the use lying to myself? A fellow's got to do something besides sitting home and sucking his thumbs," but he could not go to sleep as quickly as usual. And he flushed in the dark as he once more recalled the confession he had made to Mollie.

Mollie really had been totally deceived by Brian. Not intentionally, had he conveyed the impression that he was tired of Ruth; that he was unhappy with her. But Mollie had gained the impression that he WAS desperately miserable; that he did not love Ruth, and that he did care for her. Why else should he talk to her as he did? Why seek her society so frequently? And he told her all the little intimat things a man scarcely confides unless he cares.

Could Brian have known the impression he had conveyed he would have felt even more guilty than he did. But to him Mollie was short of a safety valve. She was such a good fellow, so sympathetic and nice to a fellow when he was down in the dumps, and a fellow really needed someone to unload his troubles on once in a while. Then Mollie always had such a good time, and she was pretty, too. One never felt ashamed of her, even if she didn't have the style and wear the handsome clothes that Ruth did. It was rather fun, too, to make the Village fellows jealous, especially Claude Beckly who would like to monopolize Mollie. He had it in for Claude, anyway. He had been pretty fresh to call another man's wife by her first name without asking permission. "Darn fresh," he said to himself whenever he thought of the night Beckly called her "Ruth" without even an apology for doing so.

Beckly had more than once butted in, when Brian and Mollie were dining. It had annoyed Brian, annoyed him terribly. He didn't take Mollie or any other girl out to dinner to talk to some other man, but because he himself wanted to be entertained. He might as well stay at home and talk to Rachel. He only went out because he was lonely, but not lonely for Beckly's foolishness.

"You're all right at times, Claude," he said once in desperation, "but when I am with Mollie I wish you'd stay away."

"Why should I?" imperturbably queried Beckly. "Your wife would not object to having three in your party instead of two. I must look after her interests. She's made a hit with me."

Brian was too disgusted to say more. Mollie had looked on amused, saying nothing. But after Beckly left them, she remarked to Brian:

"Claude may be right, Brian. As long as you are married and living with your wife, it may be better for us to have someone else with us. It would be too bad to have our little, innocent dinners make trouble for you."

"Nonsense! I am studying typewriting. If we choose to eat together occasionally it is no one's business. I won't have Beckly butting in all the time."

"You really are doing wonders with your typing, Brian. You won't need me any longer. Practice is now what you need, not anything I can do for you." (He really had been most enthusiastic and had very quickly learned all that was necessary. Now he had only to develop speed.

Mollie had scarcely finished speaking when Beckly came back. He helped himself to a cigarette then said:

"I've been going to tell you for some time, Brian, that you had better let Mollie alone and take care of that handsome wife of yours. That swell boss of hers will cut you out, if you don't," then with a wink at Mollie, he again left them alone.

This had happened at a dinner in the Village the very night after Brian had made one of his always-broken resolves to stay away from Mollie while Ruth was away.

To-morrow—Brian Determines to See Mandel.

The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp, and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all that you need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

Radical Reforms in Japan.

The Tokio Miyako, a journal of considerable social rather than political influence, insists that the new Japanese Cabinet, headed by a man of the people instead of an aristocrat or militarist, ought to be followed by the abolition of the Diplomatic Advisory Council and of the Genro, or Elder Statesmen. The editor is apt to be misunderstood when he says: "The Diplomatic Advisory Council is an unconstitutional body and opposed to the spirit of party politics. Party government means a government constructed upon the will of the people which conducts politics in accordance with the will of the people. The Diplomatic Advisory Council, a production of the bureaucratic Terauchi Government, has been against the principle of party politics from the beginning, and if the Seiyukai men are really anxious to make themselves great as party politicians, they should first exert themselves for the abolition of the council. Some may say that Mr. Hara is himself a member of the council; but he can abolish it if he wants. Furthermore, it is advisable for the Seiyukai Cabinet to abandon such an institution like the council, which may sometimes interfere with the independent action of the Government. A party government should be free from every restriction from outside. In this respect we always consider that it is a shame that many politicians in Japan will submit to the existence of such an out-of-date political organ as the Genro. Indeed, the public, which represent the new mien of the new Japan, are now anxiously longing for the day when Japan will be governed by the genuine party government."

Under Fire.

A war correspondent was dining in a Paris restaurant with a novelist who had been to the front. "I went to the front," the novelist said, "to write, while under fire, a full and graphic description of a battle." "Did you succeed in your task?" the correspondent asked. "Well," said the novelist, "the fire got very hot and dangerous, and I had to dig out before I—before I quite—" "I see," said the correspondent. "Instead of a full description of the battle you made a few running notes."

The Best Habit In The World

is the habit of health. The way to get it is to train your bowels, through the liver, to act naturally, at a fixed time, every day.

Take one pill regularly (more only if necessary) until you succeed. Then you can stop taking them, without trouble or annoyance.

This has been the great health rule for 30 years.

Two Days Contrasted.

M. Antonin Dubost, president of the French Senate, on entering Lille with the President of the Republic, must have thought of that other October day, forty-eight years before, when he addressed the townsfolk, telling them of the hopes and fears of the besieged capital. On the 21st of October, 1870, a large balloon descended near a village between Mezieres and Rocroy. The villagers were drilling when they saw the balloon land, and, running to the spot, were informed by the aeronauts, of whom M. Dubost was one, that they had started from Paris that morning and wanted to reach Lille. Arriving in the capital of French Flanders, they found the townsfolk awaiting them on the Grande Place, where Dubost addressed them. At the reception of the President of the Republic by the Lillois, 21st of October, there were probably men and women who remembered M. Dubost's visit in "l'année terrible."

COUGHED, COUGHED ALL NIGHT LONG

Terribly wearing on the system is the cough that comes at night and prevents sleep. Sometimes it is a constant cough, cough that will not be quieted.

Sometimes it is a choked-up, stuffed-up feeling that makes breathing difficult, and sleep impossible.

Whatever kind of a cold or cough you have, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the remedy you need to cure it, for the simple reason that this valuable preparation combines all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree with which is combined wild cherry bark, and the soothing, healing and expectorant properties of other excellent herbs and barks.

Miss Margaret Lundly, Bristol, P.E.I., writes: "I am writing to tell you the benefit I have received from Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

Last fall I took a severe cough and cold in my head. I was unable to do anything. At night I could not sleep, but cough, cough, all night long. A friend advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and before the second bottle was used, I was entirely cured, and I have found this the best cough medicine I can buy."

Do not accept any other "pine" preparations when you ask for "Dr. Wood's." This remedy has been on the market for a quarter of a century. It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SCHEME TO END WARS

THE "GRAND DESIGN" OF HENRY IV. OF FRANCE.

French Monarch in the Middle Ages Had a Plan Which Resembles In Several Respects the Proposed League of Nations — He Desired to Establish Confederated Princes Under a Group of Allied European States.

THE League of Nations, now accepted as a practical international scheme recalls a somewhat fantastic similitude known as the "Grand Design" of Henry IV. of France, proposed about 1601. Many are prone at the advent of apparently new economic or political schemes to hunt for precedents. Shakespeare alludes to "The justice, full of-wise saws and modern instances."

Maximilien de Bethune Sully is known to the schoolboy as the great minister of that greatest King of the Bourbons, the "Plumed Knight," who thought Paris well worth a mass" and professed to become a Roman Catholic to reign. Sully wrought exceeding well, financially and otherwise, and France prospered. He left his "Memoirs," accessible in the Bohn Library of 1856, having prefixed to an English translation in introduction, "attributed" to Sir Walter Scott. In Chapter XXX of these "Memoirs" is the sole original outline of the "Grand Design" of his patron. The Encyclopedia Britannica inclines toward the skeptical notion of one group of the authenticity of the "Design" and specifically pronounced as fiction the story of his own mission to Queen Elizabeth and obtaining her endorsement. The International Encyclopedia only notes that the genuineness of the "Design" has been subject of controversy. It has become, however, the view of the best of students that Henry the Fourth cherished the scheme Sully describes, though his modified the interpolated ideas of his own.

It would tire the busy reader to pursue the minute history of these mediaeval days, but keeping in mind the main purpose of discovering some parallels that may interest, sentences [illegible] strike all as curiously similar to the axis and the line of argument read in these very present days. Yet the entire "Design" is an antithesis.

Succinctly, the "Design" was to deprive the House of Hapsburg of its expansive autocracy, to divide Europe equally among a certain number of powers, so that none might have cause of envy or fear from the possessions or power of the others. The number was reduced to 15, of these three kinds: six hereditary monarchies, five elective, and four soversign republics. The six were France, Spain, Britain, Denmark, Sweden and Lombardy. The elective were the Pontificate, the Empire, Poland, Hungary and Bohemia. The republics were Switzerland, Belgic, Venetian, Italian-Genoa, etc. The laws and ordinances that would cement all these princes into a union, a European federation, into a harmony of religion and polity, with mutual assurance of freedom of commerce were to have any difficulties of operation submitted to a General Council, representing all the states, and which Sully terms the "happiest invention" which could have been introduced. The model of this council was the Amphictyonic Council of the ancient Greeks, of which scarcely more is known than of this Great Design, though its religious, and later political, powers are known and its formation of two delegates from each of the twelve tribes.

Sully begins his description of the "Design" by noting the devastating wars that territorial envy and religious creeds have incited. Austria could not resist the new "Design" with all other countries leagued against her. The plan of Henry IV was not to augment France but to convince his neighbors that both he and they could be saved immense sums which the maintenance of so many thousand soldiers, so many fortified places required, and that Europe could be freed forever from those bloody catastrophies so common, enjoy uninterrupted repose, and unite in an indissoluble bond of security and friendship.

Then he attacks the religious phase of the "Design" and becomes naive in his intolerance. He would permit only the three creeds then prevalent and dominant in respective countries, Roman Catholic, Reformed and Calvinist. As for the Grand Duke of Muscovy, the Czar of Russia, if he refuses to enter into association he ought to be treated like the Sultan of Turkey, deprived of his possessions in Europe and confined to Asia only.

Now after these three Christian religions, in their different lands of flourishing, agreed to the toleration of each other, each prince signing the "Great Design" is to contribute a stated number of troops, to eject the schismatics, the Sultan and Czar, and others. The King of France is to furnish 20,000 foot, 4,000 horse, 20 cannon and 10 galleys; and each signatory has its allotted quota. Sully observes: "This armament of the states of Europe appears inconsiderable and so little burdensome, when compared with the forces they usually kept on foot to awe their neighbors or their own subjects, that were it to subsist perpetually it would not cause any inconvenience and would be an excellent military academy. The expenses for this establishment would diminish as the necessity for it grew less."

But this aggregation of armed force, utilizable on occasion to prevent religious wars, was also to be subject to mobilization for curbing any kind of reduced Austria to assert its autocracy and take steps to arrive at universal monarchy."

Now the political mud-making is serious. Austria is to be deprived of the accents that go with it, is, to use a term of the times, a one-hundred-per-cent. Canadian, to all intents and purposes. He is a native of Manitoba, and is of Icelandic descent. Beginning his active career on a farm, he hungered and thirsted for schooling. He got enough to start with in Manitoba, and more at the State University of North Dakota, where he earned the A.B. degree. The finishing touches, however, were given by Harvard, and these enabled him to obtain a place in an archaeological expedition to Iceland in 1905. This trip marked the beginning of his longing for the north, and during all the years since then he has either been moving among the Arctic silences, seeing what he could see, or writing or lecturing instructively and interestingly on the things he has seen.

He is one of the most pleasing speakers whom the field of Arctic research has given to the modern world. Thousands of people flock to hear him everywhere, not only for what he has to tell them, but because of the way he has of telling what they wish to hear.

PUT STOMACH IN FINE CONDITION

Says Indigestion Results from an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid.

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that Indigestion is caused by Hyper-Acidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sour in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

A Tommy wrote to his mother from Mesopotamia:

"This may be the Garden of Eden, but the only thing that makes it endurable is our daily ration of Lipton's. In fact, Lipton's is the only thing hereabouts that I'm not 'fed up' on."

There is a universality about Lipton's that strikes home to English-speaking people wherever they may be.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Wise Investment

By SARAH ESTELLE BALCOM

"Then I have lost my two thousand dollars," propounded old Hugh Roberts mournfully.

"Every cent of it, and past recovery. You have simply been swindled outright," advised Lawyer Griscom.

Hugh Roberts ran his fingers nervously through his sparse white hair and a look of despair came into his faded eyes.

"It's the end, then," he said desolately. "It's twice and out. First I advanced that young fellow Warren Lee my five hundred dollars savings on the patent that disappeared with him. Then along came this oil proposition. It looked reasonable; one hundred acres cut up into small lots. You paid fifty dollars a lot and I bought forty of them. You see, the company was to bore for oil. If one of my lots happened to be the pie where they struck oil I was to get ninety per cent of the entire production. Think of it! rich for life, and I could have built the dream of my life, a nice bungalow on the old homestead. But that's all past now. I must think of Esther and I want you to sell the little place."

"Oh, don't do that, Roberts," remonstrated the lawyer.

"Yes, it's got to be," insisted the other firmly. "I owe it to Esther, my little niece and faithful housekeeper. I have planned to leave her well provided for. Now all I can do for her is to turn what little I have left into cash, and arrange to have my stepsister take care of her for the money. She must not know I am going away. I want to slip out of her life quietly."

"But how are you going to live, yourself?" inquired the lawyer solicitously.

"I have arranged all that," tersely replied Roberts, and that settled it.

There was no redress as to the investment of Roberts in the oil speculation. The company had bored ten wells, just as they said they would, but no oil.

One morning all Glenville knew that Hugh Roberts had disappeared. Esther, who loved him dearly, was broken hearted when, gently as he could, Mr. Griscom told her the depressing facts of the case. There was another grief nursed in secret by the fair young girl.

Roberts had referred to a first investment about a year previous. Warren Lee had incidentally met Mr. Roberts, enthusiastic over his invention, which required five hundred dollars to complete. He pledged his honor that he would give Roberts a one-half interest if he would advance the amount.

"When I come back it will be to make you rich," he had answered the old man.

"And when that lucky day comes," he had whispered to Esther, "I am going to ask you to become my wife." Therefore, no marvel that Esther tried to cherish hope amid all her troubles, for, although they received no word from the young inventor, a memory of his earnest, honest face bade her retain her faith in him. She took up her home with a new relative and patiently awaited the awards of fate.

Roberts had gone straight to the site of the great oil field that had no oil. He had claimed possession of his forty oil lots, which no one disputed, for the land was absolutely valueless. Roberts built a little shack, he purchased a cow with a broken leg and nursed it back to health. He planted some vegetables and sold milk to a cross-roads tavern two miles away, eking out a wretched living and peered at by those who passed his "farm." He was persistent, gloomy, reticent, and rarely spoke to anyone, leading the life of a hermit, hoping the end would come soon.

A year passed by and Roberts regarded with suspicion, distrust and resentment a hanger-on of the tavern named Dick Esen. He and a chum tried to get into the confidence of Roberts as to who he was and where he came from, and seemed mightily interested in prying into his affairs.

"He's our man," spoke Esen to his comrade one day, after Roberts had ordered them from the house.

"That's sure—we've got to act."

"Yes, and by force. See here, we're sure of that thousand dollars. It's worth risking a little time and money."

Now, this had happened: Esten had come across an advertisement. It offered one thousand dollars for information that would disclose the whereabouts of Hugh Roberts. It described him accurately—"Apply to Samuel Griscom, Glenville."

The next evening Esen and his confrere entered the little shack, pounced upon Roberts, bound him, drugged him, and placed him in a closed-in automobile. Then there was a twelve-hours' swift dash across country. As a first dim consciousness returned to Roberts, he was amazed to find himself at Glenville, in the office of Lawyer Griscom.

"You are welcome visitors," he caught the brisk tones of the latter, "and I will pay you the thousand dollars gladly."

"What does this mean?" murmured the dumfounded Roberts.

"Happiness and fortune!" cried the lawyer joyfully. "We have been seeking you everywhere. Old friend, your cherished bungalow is a reality at last! Warren Lee has made good, his invention is a glorious success, and, as his partner, you are a rich man."

"And Esther?" propounded Roberts eagerly.

"Oh, she is Mrs. Warren Lee, now."

Flanders.

The Flemish form of the name Flanders is Vlaenderen, and the word means the country of the Flemish. The Flanders of the Middle Ages was a self-governing countship, that is a country whose ruler was a count, but at times it was under the suzerainty of France, and sometimes under that of the empire which then included the German states. The Flanders of the Middle Ages is to-day divided between France and Belgium, the greater part being included in Belgium, and two provinces in the western part of the latter country are known as East and West Flanders, the latter fronting on the North Sea. Practically all the country that formed the Flanders of the Middle Ages is low and level; hence it was commonly called the Low Country. Ypres and the British lines out to the North Sea and south for a considerable distance into Northern France, are in a country that formed part of old Flanders.

Written in War Time.

That some celebrated of drinking songs, "We Won't Go Home Till Morning," found its inspiration in war. The air was composed by an unknown French soldier after the battle of Malplaquet, which was fought in 1709. The French troops suffered severely in the battle, and when night came a cold, drizzling rain and a shortage of food added to their discomfort. The trouper-composer wrote the song on a drumhead, and it was designed to cheer his unhappy comrades. It immediately attained popularity, and spread all over France, and thence to England and America.

Havelock Wilson Leads the Sailors of England In Hatred of the Germans

NO living sailor on any sea has attained such renown as that of Havelock Wilson. The curse of this ancient mariner is loud and deep upon the submarine. He is, perhaps, the real hero of the labor union war against the kaiser. To-day he is a kind of Jingo hero in Great Britain, most bitter of "bitter enders," even to those conservative dailies like the London Daily Post, which once denounced him as a violent labor demagog with little respect for law. For Havelock Wilson, gaunt, prophetic, bourse and dominant, is just the type that Marryat and Cooper drew, the very figure realized by Coleridge in the poem.

Just now he leads his brotherhood of the brine in a crusade against the pirate. There are no German sailors, really, according to Havelock Wilson. The German on the high seas has violated the faith handed down among mariners from the times of the Vikings and observed after a fashion by even the buccaneer. There must be no peace with the Hun until his flag has been redeemed on the deep, no matter what baptisms of blood may prove essential to the purification.

Havelock Wilson, who talks like this to gatherings of seamen in British ports as ships come in, is an old salt, but vigorous, very. A writer in the London News tells us he is a youth of sixty or so—one who can never be old. Unlike most deep-water sailors, Havelock Wilson swims with ease. Many a fight he has had with roaring breakers off strange tropical shores. He has been a castaway on coral strands. He has ridden out a gale on a raft with a shirt-tail fluttering in the breeze to intimate his distress of mind to casual navigators in remote wastes of waters. He has fought with sharks. He has dived for pearls. He has faced mutinies. He has talked defiantly to cruel skippers on such subjects as grog and grub. He knows all the tremendous jokes, and he can play all the tremendous pranks, and he is steeped in the practice and procedure of the seaman. He has risked his life to save his mates and scolded them severely for being so careless afterwards. He knows what it is to subsist on salt pork aboard a windjammer and he is quite himself on an ocean greyhound. He has had his terrific collisions with pirates in the Red Sea, and he understands the best mode of defeating tyrannical second mates and reckless masters.

The astonishing thing about Havelock Wilson to the London Mail is his physical vigor, his verdant freshness. He retains the characteristic gait of the old salt, and in a mood, and a condition for a race he can run fast enough to overtake a boarding-house keeper. He bursts now and then into such songs as "Ave, O, roll a man down," it has the indescribable deference of manner—at times—for which the sailor is conspicuous among landsmen and he can be as rude as he pleases in a crisis. He conveys no impression of complexity, either. In fact, his simplicity is wonderful not only as regards appearance but mentality. He is quite unconscious of his own antiquness.

The curling moustache of Havelock Wilson, reports the London Mail, is only beginning to turn grey. The nose is very English pugnacious, long, splendid, suggestive. The eye is a flasher. It holds as well as roams. It searches, too. It speaks several languages. The hair on his long head gives Havelock Wilson that young look—thick hair, wonderfully brown in spite of silver strands. The shoulders are broad and mobile, with a psychological content of their own, easily shrugged but not loose. The figure is lithe and alert. The face is hungry but healthily so. As for his speech, here is a sample, provided by the admiring London Mail, reporting with sympathy an address at a gathering of his mates to discuss the right way of dealing with the Hun:

"'Now, then, you fellows,' he will say, 'let me see if I can't put some ginger and fight into you. I want you all to understand, including that Shetlander over there, who thinks he's holding this meeting, that while this row is on every manjack of you has got to unglue his eyelids and no shenanigan. Look here, old Blow-me-Tight with the second-hand Tartar whiskers'—this to the ancient mariner who persists in telling his mates what he did in similar circumstances in 1863—'would you just hold your jaw while I'm talking, or shall we toss up two rounds out of three whether it's me or you for outside? But I can tell you beforehand it won't be me.'"

Jean Froissart.

In Valenciennes, Allied war correspondents have found themselves in the town which proudly owns Jean Froissart, the chronicler, as its son. Battles, tourneys, jousts and all the motley scenes of medieval life were subjects for Froissart's pen. The Prince of Chroniclers was, in more modern parlance, the Prince of War Correspondents. He certainly possessed qualities which produce good journalism. "I had," he says himself, "sense, memory, good remembrance of everything, and an intellect clear and keen to seize upon the facts which I could learn."

Great Britain.

In 1707, on the union with Scotland, Great Britain became the official name of the British kingdom, and so constituted until the union with Ireland in 1801. Since January 1, 1801, the official name of the kingdom, including England, Wales, Ireland and Scotland, and the neighboring smaller islands, is the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

HASTINGS NEWS OF INTEREST

Death of a Well-Known Resident of the Village.

HASTINGS, Jan. 15. — A much respected resident of the village passed away on Saturday morning in the person of Mrs. Dodd, wife of the late Mr. John Dodd. Deceased had only been ill for a short time. ## WANTS TO REFORM TURKEY.

Prince Sabah Eddine, Says Young Turks Forced Her Into War.

GLASGOW, Jan. 14. — German intrigue and the political machinations of the Young Turk Party put Turkey by the side of the Central Powers in the war, according to Prince Sabah Eddine, nephew of the present Sultan and leader of the Turkish Liberal Opposition Party, who is here on his way to Constantinople.

"Turkey was forced into the war by German intrigue and the malacious politics of the despotic Young Turks against the interests and traditions of our people," the Prince said. "I was exiled from Turkey for many years because I wished to establish a liberal honest and just Government for all of my countrymen without distinction as to race or religion. I have never ceased my endeavours to realize this ideal, to be attained in harmony with the Anglo-Saxon nations.

"When German troops neared Paris in 1914 I telegraphed from Paris several appeals to the Turkish Government and also to the late Sultan, asking that Turkey join in the conflict on the side of England and France. I and my friends desire to assume power solely to realize the social, moral and spiritual elevation of the Turkish people through sound economic and educational measures. We confidently appeal to the spirit of fairness and the good will of the Allies to aid us in order that we may become useful and worthy members of the body of civilized nations."

A Never Failing Way to Banish Ugly Hairs

(Aids to Beauty.)

No woman is immune to superfluous growths and because these are likely to appear at any time, it is advisable to always have some delatone powder handy to use when occasion arises. A paste is made with some of the powder and water and spread upon the hairy surface, in about 2 minutes this is carefully removed and the skin washed. You will then find that your skin is entirely free from hair or fuzz. Be sure, however, to get real delatone.

Wily Oriental Letter-writer.

In a niche in the mosque wall or in a deep inset window close to the ground—cross-legged, perhaps a pair of spectacles upon his nose—is a person distinguished above the mass, a man of letters. Such a conservation as this, I surmise, frequently takes place over the letter-writer's table:

"From whom?" asks the wise man, seated. The women, who have presented a letter, stand humbly before him.

"Our husband, Effendi."

"Most beloved of my wives," commences the flattering reader. "I am well. I will you are well. The weather is well. The cattle are well." Here, pausing a moment and studying the paper closely, he enquires: "What is your husband's name?"

"Almoon, Effendi."

"Ah, yes, Almoon. Your husband's writer does not form his characters well."

Satisfied, the women pay two "metalliks" and depart.

Some weeks later they return with another letter, and similar questions and answers pass between them and the old impostor. But when they appear before him again in still a few more weeks, the crafty fellow recognizes them and immediately begins to read:

"My beloved wives. I hope you are well. I am—"

"But, Effendi," the women interrupt him gently, "this letter we thought was from someone else; our husband has returned."

"Ah, you should have told me so!" The scribe looks at them reproachfully, so reproachfully that they murmur an apology and depart.—Asia Magazine.

If Strength Declines As Age Advances Follow This Suggestion

So many women grow old before their time, perhaps your wife or sister. A little while ago, buoyant, full of vigour and activity — she enjoyed life and imparted pleasure to the whole family; but now in a few short years she has faded and lost colour and strength. She is just ready to develop some disease that will further weaken and debilitate. You remember how it began, failure of appetite, tired in the morning, found house work burdensome, always nervous and a little irritable. It's a shame to let her go down hill further when you can build her up so quickly with Ferrozone. The change this nourishing tonic makes in a weak woman is surprising. It gives great zest for food, increases appetite and digestion enormously. The blood gets richer and stronger, and adds new life to every organ in the body. A rebuilding process works through the entire system. The first week will show an improvement, and a month or two will fatten up the thinnest, most run-down woman you can think of. Take Ferrozone for lost colour, for nervousness, for weakness,—use it, when run-down and feeling poorly — it will do you more lasting good, keep you in better health, than anything else. Just as good for men and children, too, because Ferrozone is harmless and safe. 50c. per box, or six for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Kluck Talks of the Marne, But Fails to Understand Reason for Great Defeat

IN no direction has there been more eager curiosity since the signing of the armistice than in that of military information. What are the German explanations—not propaganda statements, but actual explanations—of various battles, some successful, some disastrous for their arms. And, above all else, for it remains the supreme mystery of the war, what is the German explanation of the Marne?

We know that in the first years of the war German generals and press agents industriously circulating the legend that no such battle occurred. The German army, "in accordance with the plan," the familiar formula, retired behind the Aisne, only advanced guards crossed the Marne, Bernhardi, of literary fame, explicitly denied the battle in a statement to an American correspondent in 1916.

Meantime, on the Allied side a great dispute arose over the struggle—a dispute which seems likely to rival Waterloo debates. Was the battle won by Maunoury's army coming out of Paris to the Ourcq? Was the decisive thrust that of Foch at Fere Champenoise? Was it the result of supreme strategy that the Germans were turned back, or was it—as the mass of French peasants have decided—a veritable "miracle"?

And now, at last, we begin to have light from German sources. First of all, the ex-Crown Prince, in a public statement, asserts that he recognized at once that the war had been lost at the Marne, lost because of the failure of the nerves of certain German generals. Here at last, is admission of the fact of the Marne, impressive testimony, even if open to suspicion in detail.

But far more interesting evidence has followed. This time it is Kluck who speaks. It was Kluck who commanded the German army which advanced from Brussels to the environs of Paris, sweeping all before it. It was Kluck who crossed the Marne and turned his back to Paris, inviting the thrust of Maunoury, which changed the whole face of the situation.

Now Kluck does not explain his defeat—he admits that it was a defeat—in military terms. He does not talk about flank or rear, manoeuvre or counter offensive. What he says—and it is significant—is that he was surprised; as others after him, he grimly adds, not by French generals, but by French soldiers.

That an army could retire for ten days, losing prisoners, guns, becoming exhausted, and then, of a sudden, return to the offensive irresistibly—this was a thing the German military books never regarded possible, never discussed, never warned German generals to expect. The material elements are all duly accounted for, but failure to estimate the moral factor lost the battle — lost the war, Kluck hints.

"We made a mistake," Kluck says, with engaging frankness. The mistake was not strategic—it was not that the attack, coming out of Paris, was in itself a surprise—the thing was deeper. Kluck, Moltke, the whole German High Command had calculated that the French soldier was beaten; their actions were based upon this assumption.

It was because of this assumption that Kluck went south of the Marne and opened his flank to Maunoury. Nearly four year later Ludendorff did the same thing, with precisely the same consequences.

Yet those French writers who have best described the Marne have paid most attention to the same phenomenon which Kluck discusses. By all the ordinary standards of measurement, the French military force was on the edge of ruin on Sept. 5, but on Sept. 6 it was attacking from Paris to Verdun, and on Sept. 12 it was back at the Aisne, victorious and conscious of the magnitude of its victory.

Frenchmen tell you that in the Marne time all France was conscious that the fate of the nation was at stake. But out of the perception grew the resolution; a million men moved by the same spirit, put aside their weariness, their sufferings, and—attacked. Kluck does not understand it now. His brief comment betrays continuing mystification. He was surprised in December, 1918. He recognizes the fact—the explanation still escapes him.—Frank Simonds in New York Tribune.

WOMEN'S FLAT FEET.

Worry London Physicians—Plea to Save Dachshund Gait.

LONDON. — Modern woman's 'dachshund walk' is the subject of a contribution to the Express by Walter Kidd, M. D., who says:

"Flat foot in varying degrees prevails in nearly 90 per cent. of our more prosperous women from 15 years old upward.

"Before the reign of the short skirt it was impossible to observe this usually; now it needs no anatomist to confirm one's observation. One has only to keep one's eyes open and one's judgment unbiased by a pretty face or figure.

"What disillusionment was mine one day two years ago. A charming woman of 40 with pretty hair, fresh complexion and piquant features was often to be seen driving her car, admired by all.

One day she alighted and walked before me. I could only mutter, 'A goddess in the car, a dachshund on the path!' It is now an effoft to recollect anything about her except her feet.

"This was bad enough, but worse awaited me. In a certain town I met a marching group of seventeen well-dressed girls, 15 to 17 years old.

"They walked at nearly five miles an hour, with a swing worthy of highland infantry, and brought with them a veritable breeze.

'I stood and noted their thirty-four feet and I found only one of this group with feet that were normal; although not all the sixteen were typical dachshunds.

'A flat footed woman whose daily pursuit requires much standing or walking has a handicap on her brain and spine. Unfortuntely she seldom has as much pain as would usefully compel her to seek a remedy.

"The most pressing need is first to make women angry, then convinced, and finally resolved that this prevalent deformity shall be corrected in the very young.'

A SLUGGISH LIVER CAUSED SEVERE HEADACHES

The duty of the liver is to prepare and secrete bile and serve as a filter to the blood, cleansing it of all impurities and poisons.

Healthy bile in sufficient quantity is Nature's provision to secure regular action of the bowels, and when the liver is sluggish it is not working properly, and does not manufacture enough bile to thoroughly act on the bowels and carry off the waste products from the system, hence the bowels become clogged up, the bile gets into the blood, constipation sets in, followed by sick and bilious headaches, coated tongue, bad breath, heartburn, water brash, bad taste in the mouth in the morning, jaundice, floating specks before the eyes, etc.

Miss Dian Clark, Myer's Cave, Ont., writes:—"I take pleasure in writing you concerning the good I have received by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for a sluggish liver. When my liver got bad I would have severe headaches, but I got better after I had used a couple of vials of your pills."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills gently unlock the secretion, clear away all waste and effete matter by acting directly on the liver, and make the bile pass through the bowels instead of allowing it to get into the blood.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

NEW C.P.O.S. LINERS

THE part played by the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services in the great European war will make a big chapter in Canadian history. Undoubtedly the sea supremacy of Great Britain was one of the most potent factors in the winning of the victory which was obtained, and the ships of the C. P. O. S. took a big part in making Great Britain supreme at sea. There are few branches of sea service in which they did not take a part. Mounted with guns some of them were where there was fighting to be done.

Over 4,000,000 tons of cargo and munitions of war have been carried in addition to many thousand horses and mules.

The C. P. O. S have carried from the outbreak of hostilities to October 31st, 1918, 1,041,000 troops and passengers all over the world, embracing ports in China and Japan, Singapore, Bombay, Mesopotamia, Suez Gallipoli, ports in the Mediterranean, Colombo, Dares-Salaam, Delagoa Bay, Durban, and Mauritius, in addition to the west coast of North and South America, and the United States and Canadian ports. The total loss of troops carried caused by enemy action and irrespective of disease has been eight in number. On one consecutive continuous voyage one of the [illegible] steamers accomplished 40,000 miles.

Over 300 officers and engineers were found out of the company's service for the Royal Navy. Lieut. R. N. Stuart, one of these, has won the D.S.O. and the V.C., while many others have received decorations and been mentioned in despatches.

The Missanabie, a C. P. O. S steamer, was the first big vessel to sail on her maiden voyage from Great Britain to Canada after the outbreak of the war in 1914; a sister ship, the Metagama, sailed on her maiden voyage from Liverpool March 26th, 1915. These two splendid ships have been followed by two larger ships, the Melita, which sailed from Liverpool Jan. 30th, 1918, and her sister ship, the Minnedosa, on her maiden trip from Liverpool Dec. 5th, 1918 to St John—the first steamer to sail since hostilities ended. The Minnedosa is a splendid acquisition to the already large fleet of C. P. O. S. vessels. She has a gross tonnage of 14,000, length 545 feet, width 67 feet, depth 46 feet and a total cargo capacity of 488,000 cubic feet.

There is accommodation for approximately 500 cabin and 1450 third class passengers. The Gymnasium on "A" Deck (or Boat Deck) is fitted with the latest mechanical devices for exercise and amusement. On "B" Deck (or Upper Promenade Deck) are located the Cabin Smoking Room, Cabin Drawing Room and Cabin Lounge.

The Entrance Hall from the extensive Promenade Deck with its panelling, mirrors and staircase is an attractive approach to the Dining Saloon.

The Spacious Lounge with its charming old English fireplace and large windows is fitted with apple green panelling. It is most comfortably furnished and hung with beautiful old English prints of the 18th century and some rare old red lacquer mirrors.

The Drawing Room, panelled with most beautiful Australian Black Bean Wood in the Queen Anne style, has an air of coziness and cheer found on board ship. The beautiful colored prints which adorn this room are from the famous panels painted in 1736 by Fragonard for Madame du Barry and purchased by the late Pierpont Morgan. A writing recess is also to be found in this room.

The Smoking Room is panelled in old oak of the Jacobean style. Its fine old chimney piece and sporting prints, being noteworthy features.

A small number of two-berth state rooms are provided on this deck.

On Deck "C" (or Lower Promenade Deck) is to be found the Bureau and Ticket Office. A special feature is the spacious square and gallery round the well over the Dining Saloon. A good number of well appointed, airy and commodious staterooms are provided amidships for cabin passengers containing three and four berths. At the forward end an entrance for third class passengers is provided.

On "D" Deck is situated the Dining Room, which extends the whole breadth of the ship and has seating accommodation for 300 persons, placed at small and large tables. It is tastefully decorated in the Georgian style, a special feature being the open staircase. There is accommodation for 60 cabin passengers on this deck in four berth staterooms.

At the extreme after end of "D" Deck, the Third Class Smoking and also Third Class Ladies' Room is to be found, whilst at the forward end there is a Third Class Dining Saloon with seating capacity for 140 persons, another Smoking Room, and also a General Room. The Main Third Class Dining Saloon, seating over 400, is also on this deck.

On the starboard side of Deck "E" are a number of Cabin Staterooms containing two and four berths, whilst another Third Class Dining Saloon, with a seating capacity for 122 persons, is situated in the after end of the ship.

The Missanabie was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine in 1918.

Premier Venizelos of Greece Wants Constantinople Set Aside as Permanent Capital For Proposed League of Nations

This Would Automatically Result in the Internationalization of the Ancient City, Together With the Dardanelles—This Would be Satisfactory to Venizelos if Greece Cannot Have Constantinople for Its Own Seat of Government—A Solution of the Balkan Problem is Looked For.

PROGRESS OF THE PEACE CONFERENCE

(By Henry Wood—United Press Service.)

PARIS, January 16.—If Greece cannot have Constantinople for its own seat of government, it wants that ancient city to be set aside as the permanent capital of the league of nations. This developed to-day during the discussion of Premier Venizelos' presentation of the Greece political and territorial aspirations. Greek delegates pointed out that the establishment of Constantinople as the capital of the league of nations would automatically result in its internationalization together with the Dardanelles. It was further suggested that the immediate Hinterland on both sides of the Straits should be placed under control of the league. Thus the freedom of the Dardanelles and the elimination of the Turk from Europe—two important problems of the peace settlement — would be settled simulaneously. Venizelos, who is the most remarkable statesman the Near East ever produced, seeks not only complete unification of the Greek people, but permanent settlement of all Balkan and near eastern problems is in the memorandum he has submitted to the Peace Congress.

His claim to Greece's right to Constantinople is based on both historic and economic grounds. The city was the Greek capital for centuries. Its present population includes 300,000 Greeks, and there are 237 Greek schools with 30,000 scholars. The Greek Premier, in his memorandum takes up four regions which he desires to incorporate into modern Greece—Northern Epirus, Thrace, Constantinople and Asia Minor Litt-Oral. Venizelos would divide Northern Epirus between Greece and Albania. He would have the Greece-Bulgarian boundary follow the Maritza River, thus cutting off Bulgaria from the Aegean Sea and giving Greece a great portion of ancient Thrace.

Armenia, he suggests should be made a separate state, but Vilayets of Brusa, Aidin, Sandsaks and Ismid, with the adjacent islands, should be annexed by Greece. The City of Brusa, however, he would turn over to the New Turkish Government, together with its Marmoran port. This settlement would still leave more than 100,000 Greeks in Turkish-Armenia, but Venizelos to-day suggested a reciprocal emigration. These Greeks moving into Aidin and Brusa, while the Turks within the Greek's provinces move into Turkish territory. Venizelos reminds the peace delegation that the Entente is promised Greece important territorial concessions in Asia Minor for her military intervention which the Allies later turned down when Venizelos was in a position to offer it. The Premier's memorandum is said to be a great moderation of the original concessions.

COMPLETING ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE FULL OPENING OF THE PEACE CONFERENCE

(By Wm. Simms—United Press Service.)

PARIS, January 16.—The associated delegates were working at full speed to-day to get everything in readiness for the formal opening of the full peace conference on Saturday afternoon.

Several of the most important problems upon which the initial session hinges remained unsolved. Among these were:

Acceptance of the French outline for the method of operation.

Status of the Montenegro delegate.

Decision as to manner of acquainting the world with what transpires in conference.

MEETING OF PROTEST.

The French proposal that conferences be of star chamber order and that all information be confined to a daily official communique created consternation among newspaper correspondents, who lost no time in going on record with their objections. It was explained that only such information would be omitted as would be considered prejudicial to the interests under treatment. The correspondents feared this would prevent acquisition of the details of the delegates, and would tie up all the side lights which might be of interest to the public. They organized a special committee of American and British correspondents who made formal protest to President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George against the alleged violation of the first of the fourteen points—"Open covenants of peace openly arrived at." Although the five principal powers adopted a resolution to limit the news of the sessions to an official communique, it was believed to-day that in view of the concert of protest, the matter would be re-opened and possibly modified.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS WILL BE ONE OF THE VITAL ISSUES AT THE PEACE CONFERENCE

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, January 16.—The League of Nations naturally will be a vital issue when the conference proper begins. France is throughly behind the league in some forms. Lord Cecil, the British authority, declares that the French scheme, as outlined by Senator Bourgeoss, is the "hardest of the lot," and the most thoroughly worked out. The French are eagerly awaiting publication of the American plan, which it is believed the President himself will present at the opening session after Clemenceau starts the ball rolling.

The preliminary sessions have been under way just long enough for everybody to realize the stupendous task ahead and the infinite details to be worked out, all necessitating both plain speech and tact.

The official communique issued last night, the announcement that in the course of yesterday's two meetings examination of the rules of the conference was continued "and almost completed."

The United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan will have five delegates each. The British dominions including India, will have two delegates each, except New Zealand, which will have one. Brazil will have three delegates. Belgium, China, Greece, Poland, Portugal, Roumania, Serbia and Czecho-Slovak Republic, will have two delegates each, and Siam, Cuba, Guatemala, Hayti, Honduras, Liberia, Nicaragua and Panama, one each.

Montenegro also will have a delegate, but his status will remain unafixed until the political situation in his country is cleared up.

SUPREME COUNCIL OF THE FIVE GREATER POWERS RESUMED ITS SESSION THIS MORNING

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, January 16.—The Supreme Council of the five greater powers resumed its session at 10:30 o'clock to-day with a full attendance of members. There were present, for France, Premier Clemenceau and Foreign Minister Pichon; for the United States, President Wilson and Secretary of State Lansing; for Great Britain, Premier Lloyd George and Foreign Secretary Balfour; for Italy, Foreign Minister Sonnino, and for Japan, Viscount Chinda and Baron Matsuie. Vitterio Orlando, the Italian Premier, is still detained in Rome. The impression prevailed to-day that the following protests that have arisen against the decision of the council restricting all news of its sessions to formal communiques, some explanation or statement on the subject might appear in to-night's communique to the effect that the restriction will apply only to actual proceedings of current day, and not to any comment by delegates on general questions before the council. This impression cannot be officially confirmed, but it finds place among reports in circulation to-day.

REVOLUTION FORESTALLED

Luxemburg Anticipates Revolutionists By Disposing Pro-German Duchess.

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, Jan. 16.—The Luxemburg Chamber of Deputies was reported to-day to have approved of the acception of Princess Charlotte to the throne replacing Grand Duchess Marie, by a vote of 30 to 19. The republican revolution was believed to have been defeated by this political move.

PTE. VICTOR WINDRIM.

Pte. Windrim is a nephew of Mrs. T. C. Irwin, 504 Stewart street, and after being overseas for two years, returned home two days before Christmas. Several months were spent in English hospitals recovering from severe wounds.

Equipment Discovered

Germans Were Attempting to Conceal Guns and Munitions.

Special to The Examiner:

AMERICAN HEADQUARTERS IN GERMANY, Jan. 16.—Nearly two hundred three-inch field guns, several thousand shells and more than $1,000 worth of harness and equipment—not surrendered by the Germans under the armistice terms—were discovered in an isolated work house near Coblenz to-day.

The Americans immediately seized the whole store. Inasmuch as it was not mentioned in the German inventories and not given up as provided by the armistice, these muntions become the property of the United States.

A request for funds to pay the Third Army's expenses during February has been sent to Berlin.

The motorization of heavy artillery of the entire Third Army is nearing completion. All guns of more than three-inch calibre are being equipped with heavy trucks and tractors.

Compensation Is Demanded

Sailors Will Carry No Food to Germany Until Dependents of U-boat Victims Are Compensated.

LONDON, Jan. 16. — In the absence of a definite policy from the allies concerning the manner in which Germany shall make compensation for the dependents of submarine victims among seamen, the executive committee of the International Federation of Seafarers has evolved a plan by which the officials hope to force the Peace Congress to act. The committee has called in an international conference in London on February 24, at which the British delegates will present a resolution providing that seamen will not man any ships going or coming from an enemy country until the proper compensation is agreed upon.

J. Havelock Wilson, president of the International Seamen's Union, said to the Associated Press to-day:

"It seems that the British statesmen and those of other nations have been too busy to think of the seamen in preparing for the conference, so we will take the matter into our own hands in the hope of emphatically bringing to the notice of the peace delegates the necessity for taking care of our people.

"I have no doubt that the conference will adopt a resolution providing that no food shall go to Germany until these dependents are compensated."

The leaders of the seamen, including Andrew Furuseth, of the United States, expect that the February conference will adopt a universal wage scale.

THE WEATHER

It was about this date last winter that the worst storm of the year occurred. From January 12th to 15th heavy snow fell accompanied with strong gales from the east. The consequence was that the railways were completely tied up and no trains got through Peterboro from the 12th until the morning of the 16th 16th. Although only about 15 inches of snow fell the morning of the 16th. Considerable amount on the ground previously, and the total was quite sufficient to make formidable drifts. The cold was not severe (at least for last winter) being only eight below zero. —W. P.

AN APPEAL FROM BERLIN

Order Has Been Restored in the Capital—"Bolshevism Means Death of Peace and Freedom."

A FREE SUFFRAGE

(Canadian Press.)

LONDON, January 16. — Order has been restored in Berlin, it is announced by an official wireless appeal to the German nation sent out by the German government and picked up here.

The appeal, which was signed by Premier Ebert and Philip Scheidemann, Herr Landsberg, Gustave Noske and Herr Wissell, members of the Cabinet, says that the government is determined to prevent by every means at its disposal a repetition of "similar abominations." The appeal refers to the coming elections under "the freeest suffrage in the world to determine the constitution of the German states," and adds that the French government is preparing a draft of a constitution which protects the free right of self-determination of the "nation against all counter revolutions or efforts at terrorism." Efforts are being made, it is said, to arrive at a peace safe-guarding the freedom of the German nation and which will render possible the foundation of a union of nations which will give protection against the danger of a fresh war."

After declaring there is a necessity of defending the nation against the Polish annexationists, the appeal concludes:

"No less is it our task to protect our frontier against fresh Russian military despotism which wants to force upon us, by means of war like power, its anarchistic conditions and unchain a new world war of which our country would be the theatre. Bolshevism means the death of peace, of freedom and socialism."

All Our Men Home by June

LONDON, Jan. 13.—General Sir Arthur Currie, Corps Commander of the Canadians, is undertaking the demobilization of the Canadians in France only, regarding that as essentially a military duty. To our correspondent he said he would stay on this side of the Atlantic until he had seen every Canadian soldier now in France landed in Canada. He is going to Brighton to see his children and expects to return to France this week to personally explain the Government's demobilization and other pla is affecting the troops to as many units of the Third Division as possible. As previously stated, that division will be the first to be demobilized. At intervals General Currie will be in Paris when needed by Premier Borden for consultation at the Peace Conference.

Your correspondent understands that the Third Division will return to Canada by way of England, where many of the men have wives and other relatives. It is hoped all will be returning by March, and the last of the Canadians by the end of June. In order to assist in the smooth working of the returns, which will be by units, some officers of the respective battalions will arrive in Canada a week ahead of their battalions, and complete arrangements for the reception and dispersal of the men at the various dispersal centres.

THE DESTINY OF RUSSIA

People of Russia Will be Given An Opportunity to Register Their Desires.

JUSTIFIES THE COUP

(Associated Press.)

OMSK, Central Siberia, Jan. 16. — "The destiny of Russia can be decided only by National Constituent Assembly. Whether the future of Russia is monarchy or most radical republic, does not concern the present government," was the striking utterance of Admiral Kolchak, Supreme Governor of the Omsk government to the Associated Press. Admiral Kolchak, confirming his statement that the people will be given the opportunity to register their desires, signed in the presence of the correspondent, on a historic document proclaiming an all-Russian national election at the earliest practicable moment. Later he informed representatives of the Entente Powers that the Russian government desired the Trans-Siberian railway to be turned over to an International Technical Commission. Admiral Kolchak then proceeded to justify the coup by which he gained control at Omsk.

VANISHING VETERANS OF '66 HELD REUNION

Membership Has Dwindled to Mere Handful and Only Few Are Left.

Wednesday evening, the 15th, was the occasion of a very happy reunion of the old volunteers who are left, who fifty-two years ago were called to arms to repel the Fenian raid in June of 1866.

Twenty-two years ago the veterans of '66 formed an Association in Peterborough with a membership of over seventy, to-day there are only a few left.

The following members were present:

President Col. J. W. Miller, J. D. Collins, H. Rush, G. Stenton, P. Thompson, R. Tivey, Alex. Fitzgerald, J. McComb, W. C. Bourn, H. Nesbitt and E. J. Sanderson.

The following gentlemen were guests of the evening: Mr. Crane, Mr. Firth, Mr. F. Pratt, Col. Mills, and Mr. J. John, and in song, speech and recitation, these gentlemen contributed to the evening's entertainment, and their kindness was appreciated.

The President in a neat speech referred to Comrade Tivey having attained his eightieth year, and on behalf of the Association extended congratulations. Mr. Tivey expressed himself as pleased with the courtesy of his comrades, and in good form gave an excellent recitation.

Refreshments were served and it was a happy group who sat around the board to do justice to the good things provided by Coleman Bros. Mr. Coleman contributed a good Scotch song.

While the company were enjoying their smokes Mr. Rush moved a vote of thanks to the guests. Mr. Pratt in replying for the guests, said he was pleased to be present and would be glad to spend another evening with the Veterans. The singing of the National Anthem and Auld Lang Syne brought the entertainment to a close.

Programme Abandoned

Events Leading Up to the Resignation of the Italian Cabinet.

By Henry Wood.
(United Press.)

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Italy has abandoned its Imperialistic programme and definitely accepted British and American ideas of a democratic peace settlement. That was the interpretation in some diplomatic quarters to-day, for the resignation of the entire Italian Cabinet late yesterday.

Italy's territorial ambitions regarding concessions, it is understood have been granted by Great Britain, France and Russia in the London pact.

The old school of Italian diplomats stolidly clung to the determination that the entire programme of political and territorial expansion should be carried out. The more democratic members of the government counselled various degrees of modification. This led to a ministerial crisis, which reached its climax yesterday.

In the meantime the storm of protest against confining news of the conferences to the official communique was increasing. In addition, the announcement was made that correspondents would not be permitted inside the Foreign Office building, as they were Sunday. A French flunkey wore himself out to-day exclaiming "defendu" (forbidden). The correspondents were given the liberty of standing in the court yard and watching the delgates arrive and depart in their automobiles.

Both the Canadian Club and the Labour Council are anxious to give Senator Robertson a cordial reception. The luncheon at the Empress will begin at 6.30 o'clock, and the members should be punctual, in order that the Minister may keep his second appointment with the Labour men at 8:30 o'clock.

It is likely therefore that his time will be fully occupied during his brief stay in Peterboro.

HONOURING THE DEAD

Some time ago the Examiner suggested the advisability of the Horticultural Society or some other local body taking steps to secure a supply of poppy seeds, preferably from Flanders in order that by that simple means the memory of the boys who sleep beneath the poppies over there could be honoured in a most appropriate way. And a day or two ago the plan of planting memorial trees in memory of Peterboro's fallen soldiers was advocated. It is interesting to find that in some cities both these ideas have got beyond the talking stage. St. Thomas furnishes one example. In that city the Horticultural Society has been successful in securing a supply of poppy seeds from Flanders and these will be divided among the members with the result that in the coming summer beds of popies throughout the city will keep fresh the memory of those who fell in the great war. But St. Thomas has not stopped at poppies. It has been decided to plant an oak tree in Pinafore Park to commemorate each soldier from St. Thomas who gave his life for the cause. One hundred and twenty-five trees in all will be needed and these have already been ordered and will be planted this spring. Each tree will bear the name of a St. Thomas soldier who has made the supreme sacrifice with the particulars of his death.

In movements of this kind, Peterboro is far behind other cities. Although there has been talk enough in regard to memorials the matter has never got beyond the conversation stage. Schemes such as are being carried out in St. Thomas need not interfere with the main civic memorial that will be decided upon—they are supplementary plans that can be carried out at once and strike one as fitting and appropriate.

AID TO THE ASSESSOR

It would seem to be a good business proposition on the part of the City Council to take early action in dealing with the request of Mr. W. J. Henry, City Assessor that he be given the services of an assistant. The assessor has been looking after the important and exacting duties of his position, aided only by some clerical assistance from a lady assistant. Under such an arrangement he has been handicapped to a considerable extent and the excellence of his work has only been made possible by Mr. Henry's faithful attention to his position. In his request that the city provide enough funds to secure the services of a competent male assistant the assessor is asking nothing unreasonable and the Council should regard the matter in a broad light. There is no more important department in the civic administration than the assessment department and Mr. Henry would be even of greater use to Peterboro as assessor if the securing of a capable man to assist him allowed him a better chance to more closely familiarize himself with the city's real estate and with the general problems of his duties. And again if an assistant with the proper qualifications is secured he would be able to acquaint himself with the details of the city's assessment so that there would be a trained official ready in case the services of Mr. Henry were no longer available. A cheese-paring policy in dealing with the Assessor's department would be false economy and the members of the City Council would do well to give this matter early consideration and to deal favorable with Mr. Henry's request.

THE GOVERNMENT'S OBLIGATION

A feature of Sir Wilfrid Lauriér's splendid address at Ottawa on Tuesday night was his criticism of the Government's failure to properly meet their obligation to "those who staked to the end."

"They may have done a thing here and there," said Sir Wilfrid, "but they have laid down no rule which can be referred to and set up by soldiers to say 'This is my right'. We have had an abundance of words. Words, words, words. I don't know a month when we have not had some declaration that they are working on this or that."

A glance over the daily papers containing the speech of the Liberal leader gives striking emphasis to his words in this regard. From Toronto comes the report of a warm discussion among the Parkdale War Veterans over the pension regulations which were denounced as a tragic joke and a dying disgrace. Several of the returned soldiers said that it appeared that the country was trying to see how cheaply it could get rid of its soldiers. And the following resolution shows the feeling of the meeting:—

"That the future of any country depends on the quality of its citizenship; that to maintain this quality there must be a minimum standard of living; that the class of citizens in Canada most in danger of lacking the money and attendant comforts necessary for such a standard are disabled and impaired veterans; and that having regard to the costly and strenuous nature of the struggle for existence in this climate and country it is an act of futile exasperation to offer any disabled veteran a pension of less than twenty per cent. of the total disability pension per month."

A Montreal despatch reports a meeting of returned soldiers in that city in which the method of treating soldiers mentally unbalanced as a result of shell shock was denounced as "extremely unsatisfactory."

Such complaints as these when repeated day after day give point to Sir Wilfrid's charge.

WINTER

"I am of a rich British blood," wrote the poet and for that reason Canadians face the winter with such equanimity as coal shortages will permit. The discomfort is not counted as serious and the compensations are such as none of us would deny the children, even though we have graduated from skates, snowshoes and toboggan. The people live just as happily and are not confirmed grouches because they occupy log houses near Porcupine. They just buy heavier underwear and pull on an extra pair of socks or trousers when the quicksilver has gone down to 40. And the colder the country, and the more thinly populated, the more picturesque and romantic is the Canadian winter. Quebec makes winter its season of carnival, and exhausts animal spirits on long mountain slides, and in the gayest of games, by the sparkling light of winters' electric moon. The Northern Ontario towns have their big fun in winter. The man who takes a vacation in the shaggy fast-nesses of some of our vast hinterland and plays at being a trapper, comes back with a ruggedness of frame and character that is only winter's to give. He also gets a look at adventure and may see a wolf's eyes gream in the ruddy glow of his high-heaped brush fire.

And the boys and girls of Canada get whatever of native characteristics, from the healthy and vigor-demanding sports that seize them as babies and keep them on ice or in snowdrifts until they graduate to adultism. Canada has shown its winter sympathy by hanging on to hocky, one of our two national sports, and letting lacrosse go by the boards. In summer we are more like the children of Uncle Sam, who like artificial pleasures with plenty of music and games made by man, but in the season when the world is fast in its casing of crystal, we come back to Mother Canada. No dirges such as European poets write of winter come from Canada. Winter is as much, if not more, our play season than summer, whereas severe winter makes some English writer tell us the earth is dead. We find life in winter and rush out to embrace it.—London Advertizer.

A PUZZLE DEMANDING SOLUTION

The action of Poland in suddenly seizing debatable territory in Prussian Siberia adds another factor to the complex equation of the war situation in Europe. Last week the Poles were appealing to the Allies that they should occupy Lithuania in order to head off the Bolshevists and there is little doubt that if they are unable to essemble sufficient forces the newly freed Poles may themselves oppose continued occupation of Lithuania by the Red Guards. Such a movement will be a tactical error on Poland's part which it would be madness for the Allies to support. The strength of Bolshevism lies in its acceptance of the principle of national self-determination and in its opposition to majority aggression and any suggestion of the usurpation by force of coveted lands by Poland will only serve to fan the embers.

In the region of Archangel the Arctic winter has compelled a relative quiescence on the Allied front. The northern army in that vast area was divided into two forces—one of which tried to push south along the railroad to Vologda, while the other ascended the Dvina River in an effort to form a junction with the Czecho-Slovaks at Perm. News of the capture of this city has now reached the outside world, but, apparently, the attacking force was an anti-Bolshevist army under General Peppiler, whose name becomes prominent in world history for the first time.

In Eastern Russia, south of Perm the Bolshevists have captured Ufa, which was the capital of the Anti-Russian Government before it was transferred to Omsk. Some weeks ago British and French troops were reported at Ufa but as the Moscow Soviet have done no boasting about a victory there, it is likely that Ufa was evacuated before the advancing wave of Bolshevism.

Further south in the Ukraine, French troops are still fighting the Ukrainian opponents of Bolshevism, a complication of the Russian jig-saw puzzle that makes it more difficult of solution.

At Omsk General Kolchak has held his own since his astounding coup but he seems to be following a policy of passive settlement which is a poor weapon to pit against the active terrorism of his enemies. How far he might be relied upon to help the Allies is a matter of conjecture.

Meanwhile the Czecho-Slovaks are more and more openly expressing their disappointment at the laissez-faire policy of the Allies. Many of these warriors have been fighting continuously for four years and they are not unnaturally anxious to get home to their families.

It is hoped that one of the first questions which the Five Allies will take up will be the adoption of some definite and clear-sighted course in Russia. Further procrastination might endanger the peace which we have won at so great a cost.—Montreal Star.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—I would be glad if you would give a little space in your valuable paper as follows:

In Tuesday's issue I read an article to the effect that seemed to infer that in future all "Returned Soldiers" doing business commercially or otherwise are to have their "credentials" passed by the G.W.V.A. Now I have in fact four returned men on my staff who are members of the above association But who, on applying for positions, could not procure them, although members at the time in good standing, so that on applying to me for something to do to enable them to earn an honest livelihood until such time as something else turns up in their particular line, I certainly gave them first preference, which proved to be of great advantage to themselves in particular.

Now all returned men do not see fit to join the association. Inasmuch as by doing so, it does not create in any individual into a "war veteran." Any man having served "overseas" I would presume is a "veteran," whether he joins an association or not, and can wear his "service button" as a recognition of such services if he so desires, and as long as such men keep within their own rights in carrying on a "legal business," no body of men can stop them. In fact, as the public know, it would be dangerous to try. As has been stated before, through the press, from time to time, each and every man on my staff must carry credentials, which has already been approved of by Chief Thompson, and it is to the Chief's action in this matter which has helped us to do such extensive business in the circulation of interesting literature.

On several occasions money has been offered to various members of our staff, instead of giving an order, but as district representative, I absolutely refuse to allow any man taking money under such a sympathetic heading.

We claim to be above board in our dealings with the public, and the way we have been received is in accord with said dealings.

The reason preference is given to returned men is, because I am one myself, and know what it is to rely too much on the association to provide work of any description when such is not to be had.

Anyone doubting our honesty can call Toronto head office at the company's expense. Number can be had by calling at 182½ Hunter Street.—Yours very truly,

H. Gilbert.

Peterboro Soldier Marches Through Belgium Into Germany

Signaller J. Scrivens Gives a Graphic Account of Conditions in Belgium and Germany—Were Issued With a Union Jack Before Crossing Into Germany—Huns Are Vindictive.

"JEANE" PLAYS PIANO

Mr. and Mrs. F. Scrivens, 270 Rogers street, have received the following interesting letter from their son Signaller J. Scrivens, 18th Battalion and formerly of the 39th Battalion. The letter follows:

Namur, Belgium, Nov. 28.

Dear Ma and Dad.—Jus a few lines to let you know that I am still keeping in the very best of health, hoping this will find you all the same. Well, dear, I am going to try and describe to you our trip to Germany from the time we left Mons. We left the big and most famous town on the 15th o November, at half past six in the morning, and the whole town was out to see us off, and we arrived at our destination at about noon.

Were Billeted.

The name of the town was La Roeulx. We were billeted with civilians, and oh the whole we were treated very good. We used to go to dances, etc., and the people couldn't do enough for us. Well, we stayed there until the morning of the 21st. Then we moved to a village called Trazegnies and we were billeted dwith civilians again. After I threw my equipment off I went up to the main street, and it was some sight. The civies had their band out, and there were hundreds following them, dancing and yelling at the tops of their voices.

"O' Canada."

Then while I was watching the mob along came two French girls and pulled me into them, and away I went with a tart on each arm. And the crowd finished up outside the commanding officer's billet, the band playing "Oh Canada." Well, I finally managed to get home, and after a hot supper, provided by the civilians I turned in. We stayed there until the morning of the 24th. Then away we went again. This time we landed in a place called Lambursart. I think it had two houses and a pump. Well, we had another good billet, and the old man got us pretty well swaying on some French wine. But it was good stuff I can assure you. We stayed there for the night and continued the march on the morning of the 25th We marched to a place called Soy and had another good billet.

A Full Pack.

All this marching was done with a full pack and will be until we arrive in De Faderland. Well, we had a good time there, and we left Soy the morning of the 27th and marched to another famous town called Namur. It is a swell place. I have bought some post cards of nearly every place we have stopped at, so you had better order at least a dozen albums, because I mean to have some collection to bring back. Well, for once we got a rottyn billet,—an old empty house. But the troops couldn't stand it after the good treatment we had been getting. So off we got to get private billets, and as luck would have it I got a Jake one. There are two of us here; it is a big house with the old people and two girls, both about twenty, and one speaks a little English. So we are well away.

A Discussion.

You should have seen us last night discussing different subjects. Oh, La La. We also have a feather bed to sleep on, and the girls' uncle is a general in the Belgian army. Some class, eh? "Jeane" is going to play the piano after tea, so look out. Well, we sleep here to-night, then away we go to-morrow. I am going to keep this until we get to Germany, then you will have more to read.

Another Letter.

Dec. 2nd.

Well, dear, here I am again as large as life. We had a pretty long walk from Namur, and we stayed in a village called Ohey over night. The same night as we got there I was detailed to act as runner from our officer to the C.S.M. (Company Sergt. Major.) I had to stay at the officers' quarters utnil I was relieved. So I walked into the kitchen, and believe me it was some place. It was in the Countess' house, and she asked me if I had dined, so I said No. Then away she went and got me some supper. Oh La La. It was just like a Christmas dinner. Well the next morning we started off for another hike.

Tired Out.

This time we had nothing but hills to climb, for a distance of 17 miles to a small village called Sommelreze Well we were tired out when we got there, so we went to bed. The next morning we walked about 17 miles again to a village called Mormont and the people where we are staying gave us a big feed. It is situated in the Ardenne forest, and it is a lovely country, but the hills are awful. We are just twenty-five miles from the German border. There is some talk of us staying here for the day, but you can never tell. Well, dear, I will lay off for a while until we do some more touring.

On the March.

Well, here we are again. We stayed at Mormont for two days and began the march again on the 4th, and stayed in a village called Boho, just two miles from the border. Well, on the morning of the 6th we were issued with a big Union Jack and we set off once more, with the flag ahead of the battalion. We crossed the German border at 9.05 a.m. and believe me it is some place. If looks could kill we would have been dead day ago. Well we halted at a place called Schonburg. (You have to sneeze it.) We stayed there for one night, continuing the march on the 7th. And now we are in a place called Hallschlag. (Another sneezer.) But the people seem to be alright.

A Feed.

The old man has given us a feed, so we are pretty well fixed. We rest to-morrow, then march for three days then rest for five days. In that five days we have to polish up like kings because we only have one day's march, then to our destination, which I think is a town called Bonn, but I am not sure yet.

Well, dear, I received a parcel from St. Luke's to-night. We are all looking forward to the time when we will have finished receiving parcels. Well I guess I will ring off now, wishing everyone a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. With best love from your loving son,

JACK.

A Most Extraordinary Sale of Women's Coats

THE NEXT TWO DAYS ONLY

$9.90

First of all let us make the statement here that we shall eliminate entirely in every shape and manner the comparative value of these garments.

And though the price of every coat involved has been reduced from former cost, we shall not under any circumstances state the former selling price.

As a matter of fact, entirely new price tickets have been put on the garments.

The writer states, however, that no time during the entire present season have coats of this quality been sold at anything like so low a price.

Garments of superior workmanship of the highest grade, and so extraordinary is the value that we expect them to be sold out quickly, without any need of stating the former selling price.

To our mind, women who know values will be most eager to purchase.

Special Services Held in Lakefield Baptist Church

Local Soldiers Welcomed Home—Sermon by the Rev. B. Davies.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 14.—A combination memorial service and welcome service for the Canadian soldiers was held in the Lakefield Baptist church on Sunday evening. The pastor, Rev. B. Davies was in charge of the service. The veterans in the village were invited to be present in uniform. Those present were Dr. (Capt.) Finnemore, Messrs. Joe Lemay, Roy Robinson, William Lemay, W. Hampton, F. Moon, E. Allan and Percy Johnson.

During the reading of the Bible lesson, Mr. Davies pointed out that when the necessity arises the Bible advocates war. At the close of the lesson Mr. Davies sang as a solo, "Stand as a Hero."

Mr. Davies briefly welcomed home the veterans and referred to the dead heroes.

Canadians Overseas.

"There are 55,000 Canadian soldiers who will sleep their last sleep in England, France or Flander's Fields," said Mr. Davies. They made the supreme sacrifice and now that the great home coming we have longed for is here, they will stay behind. Two of these were specially mentioned, Mr. Leonard Wingett, who though himself an Anglican, sometimes attended the Baptist church with his wife who was of that faith; and also Delbert Graham, who spent last winter visiting friends in the village and who was called to the colors in Winnipeg last spring. He died of wounds in an English hospital. The greatest of all war poems yet published is Col. McCrae's immortal "In Flander's Fields," said Mr. Davies. He recited it in full and spoke of how gladly we took the torch and kept faith with our glorious dead until victory came to us.

Returned Men

In welcoming the returned men it was only fitting that special mention was made of Sapper Percy Johnson who was a loyal member of the Baptist church when he left two years ago and remained loyal all through his absence. They were all pleased to see him home again. For four long years of war, prayers ascended unceasingly to Heaven for victory and that our men would be spared to return to us. Mr. Davies to illustrate this, read a few stanzas of a poem by Mr. Powell entitled "Godspeed."

Owe a Great Deal.

We owe a great deal to all who participated in this great war and no honor is too great to show to these returned men. There are many reasons why we should honor them. First—They have done their bit for civilization and when they left they took their chance not knowing whether it would be their lot to return or not. Second—Those who enlisted in this war have taken part in the greatest war of all time and have triumphed over the greatest and mightiest foe that the world has ever seen.

The Victory.

There are far reaching results of this war and there will now be greater integrity among nations, greater standard of national honor. This was set by Great Britain in her defence of the smaller and weaker nations. There is a greater freedom among nations and it will not be so easy for the strong to oppress the weak. This war has sounded the death knell of "might is right." There was the great and beautiful object, "Peace." The war was for the end of war, fighting may cease. Mr. Davies closed by reading a few verses of W. Watson's poem entitled "After". The victory so lately won has been a triumph for the soldiers, the Empire and the world.

While the offertory was being taken the choir sang an anthem "Soldiers of the King."

The service was closed by singing two verses of "God Save the King", one for the King and one for the men.

Garnett Powell Now in Rhineland

Peterboro Soldier Enumerates a Number of Places He Has Visited.

Garnett Powell sent the following letter to his mother, Mrs. George Powell, Brownton, dated December 15th, from Germany. He had been in Germany for two days:

Germany, Dec. 13.

My Dear Mother: Just a few lines to let you know that I am in the best of health and hope that this will find you all the same at home. I have not had a letter from you since December 3rd, but that is not very long, but I am expecting one every day. I had a box from Ida the other day and a box last night with ten bars of chocolate and a large cake, and gum. I am just beginning to receive my Christmas parcels. If I get all of them I will be all right. Well, mother, I am still with the Brigade Headquarters.

We crossed the Rhine on the 13th, about 1.30 o'clock, and it sure is some bridge. I will try and get a picture of it to send to you as soon as I get paid. That will be in a few days.

Well mother, I don't think that you have had to wait very long for a letter from me since we have been on the move to Germany, for I have been writing and sending cards to you every week and sometimes twice a week. I saw Stan Bucknell about a week ago. He was O.K. They are in Wahn now. It is only a small place.

I will send you a list of the places I've been in: Belgium, Nov. 20; Casteau, Nov. 22; Ecansine, Nov. 24; De-Belles-Terres, Nov. 26; Corry-Le-Chateau, Nov. 27; Selayn, Nov. 28; Marchin, Nov. 28; Modeve, Nov. 30; Tohogne, Dec. 2; Harre, Dec. 3; Lurneuk, Germany, Dec. 4; Recht and Bonn, Dec. 6; Bullingen, Dec. 7; Reifferscheider, Dec. 8; Kall, Dec. 9; Eseskinhen, Dec. 10; Schwadorf, Dec. 11; Bosburg, Dec. 13; Coln, Kalk, Dec. 14, and Wahn.

You can see that we have been going some lately.

There must have been some time in Canada when they heard that the armistice was signed. I would have liked to have been there. Well, mother, we came through Cologne the other day. It is the largest city I have been in. I was talking to Stanley Hopkins the other night. He is in the first battery, right near me. There is a lieutenant Bill O'Brien in headquarters and he is from Peterboro. Well, I think I will say goodbye for this time. Wishing you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, from your loving son.

Garnett.

Sour milk griddle cakes are made with 1 cup each of buckwheat and graham flour, 2 cups of sour milk and 1 teasponoful each of sale and soda.

Delicious puffs can be made of boiled hominy or rice, preferably hot. 1 cupful of rice, ½ teaspoonful of salt, 1 tablespoonful of fat and 2 egg yolks beaten till thick; lastly fold in the beaten whites. Bake in a quick oven.

REBELLION IN HELL.

Big sparks flew from Old Satan's eyes,
"What's this I hear," said he,
"They say that when the Kaiser dies
He'll be consigned to me.
Old Hell to me is very dear,
The place is very fine
But if they send that guy down here
Believe me, I'll resign.
I'll stand for murderers and crooks,
And I will not disown
That I have here now on my books
The worst things ever known.
But my boys would get sore, I fear—
I know they would rebel—
The Kaiser cannot enter here,
For he would corrupt Hell.
Our sulphur is too clean for him,
Our brimstone lakes too pure
And if in one he took a swim,
He'd ruin it I am sure.
Our company is not so swell,
Vile beasts we won't reject,
But keep the Kaiser out of Hell—
We have some self-respect.

—Corp. P. G. Wilson.

The inventors of the famous toilet water called Cologne, from the city of that name, were Paul Feminis and Maria Clementine, a nun. They began on a small scale, with few persons employed, whom they did not initiate into the secrets of the whole process, the last and most important mixture being made by the inventors themselves. Paul Feminis left the secret with the Farina family while the nun bequeathed the secret to one Peter Schaelen, who had been her assistant for many years.

Will Organize Branch of Independent Labour Party

Trades and Labour Council Appointed Special Committee to Promote Movement That Has Been Proposed for Years—Disappointed at City Council's Action.

BRISK MEETING LAST NIGHT

The City Council's reappointment of Mr. Frank Sollitt to the Public Library Board in the face of the Trades and Labour Council's recommendation of Mr. Thomas Ogilvie for the vacancy, which was filled on Monday night, was interpreted by the Labour men, at their regular meeting last night, as a rebuff and a challenge.

"We asked for nothing more than we were entitled to," said one of the delegates. "At the municipal elections we nominated only four representatives, proving that we had no design of obtaining a majority in the Council. But I am now perfectly convinced that the only way open to us is to elect a majority of the Council. It is therefore up to the Labour men to put their shoulders to the wheel and see to it that we get the majority we need next year. The City Council's action simply means that the class struggle has been introduced, and it should be noted that it has not been started by the Labour men."

Alderman McIntyre's support evoked expressions of appreciation, and while the Trades Council accepted philosophically the City Council's rejection of their recommendation, there was evident disappointment at the spirit they discerned behind the opposition.

It was remarked that the Labour Council was an elective body, representing the interests at large of the Labour Unions, and its recommendations were deserving of the recognition and consideration due to this united body of workmen.

A Council Committee.

A municipal committee composed of T. H. Lane, Joseph Begley, Ed. Marchand and Chas. Duggan, was appointed to attend the meetings of the City Council. Other members and citizens generally were also urged to take an interest in the business of the city as transacted by the Council.

Board of Trade Re-organizing.

Secretary Stevens reported that he had been present at a meeting of representatives of the Board of Trade in the office of Moore & Wearing, at which a proposal to reorganize the Board was announced. Mr. Stevans said he understood that the fee would be raised to a figure which he felt would exceed the means to working men.

Some delegates regarded this movement as a "freeze out," and suggested that the Trades Council should be represented at any price. Other opinions, however, suggested that the Board of Trade had accomplished nothing last year, and that if the membership fee were raised to an excessive figure, the Labour men should find other uses for their money and their efforts.

"It is likely that the Board of Trade will make a strong attempt this year to block the Trades and Labour Council," said one delegate, "and if we go in for our own affairs we will have enough to do. There is plenty of work for both organizations any way."

self-appointed committees was offer- self-appointed committee was offered in the criticism that none of the "great patriotic men who had hounded away the volunteers had thought well enough of them to attend the funerals of returned men who have died at home."

Organize Labour Party.

A lengthy discussion on a constitutional proposition by which the membership of the Labour Council would be fixed on a proportional basis according to membership was referred back to the special committee. It lead to a debate on the opportuneness of starting at once a movement for the formation of a branch in Peterborough of the Independent Labour party. A committee was instructed to, outline the preliminary details of organization in readiness for the first election that may be sprung whether soon or late.

The Independent Labour Party, it was explained, was open to everybody, and the Labour Council thus officially avoided any political entanglements that might be encountered by launching a movement of its own.

Delegates expressed their confidence that the people were dissatisfied with the old parties, and that they found no grace in the Union Government. It was suggested that the Labour Party had much in common with the United Farmers, and that they might readily join forces on a platform that would be mutually satisfactory. The War Veterans might lend their support and thus at length achieve a government that would truly represent the people.

Are Not "Bolsheviki."

A delegate produced a clipping from yesterday's issue of The Toronto Mail and Empire referring to a circular letter sent out by the Toronto District Labour Council calling upon the "orthodox" labour men to prepare to meet an expected attempt by the "extremists" to gain control in Toronto. He suggested that the local Council send a telegram conveying sympathy to the orthodox wing.

In the rather humourous diversion that was created by the introduction of this subject one delegate made the answering comment—"I am surprised that any member would have so little respect for his pocket as to carry that in here."

"What paper did you say that was from?" asked another.

"From to-day's Mail and Empire."

"Oh, at, that's enough."

The press, that of Toronto in particular, with some of the newspapers in the smaller cities, was declared to be under capitalistic control and consorship, and therefore not reliable in its Labour news.

One member asserted that wherever a workingman raised his voice against the conditions under which he struggled to-day he was called a Bolshevik. The papers, he said, were not only under Government control, but also under the control of capitalists.

"It's a libel on the toilers of Canada," he said, "that they should be branded as Bolsheviki because they are dissatisfied. It is simply impossible for a man earning $3.00 a day to bring up a family and make both ends met. I am convinced of one thing, that if he falls into debt he can't get out. They are preaching to us the old policy that half a loaf is better than no bread. It is simply a libel that Canadian workers who express their discontent with the conditions should be called Bolsheviki."

Agree With Mr. Patterson.

The delegates agreed with Mr. E. G. Patterson's reported contention at the meeting of the Board of Education that the salaries of the school teachers should not be increased by the percentage method. It was maintained that the Board should have considered more carefully the needs of the individual teachers. One man for example, it was argued, receiving $2,000 a year with a family of one or two would get an increase of $200, but another whose salary was $1,200 would get only $120 of an advance, and yet he might have a much larger family. It was regarded as preferable that at least the same advance should have been made to each teacher.

"That's the principle of socialism," was the comment.

"Then Mr. Patterson is a a socialist in that case," was a delegate's reply.

HUSBANDS REPORTED DEAD SOLDIERS' WIVES RE-MARRY

Pathetic Cases Reported to Ottawa in Connection With Listing of Canadians Believed Killed Who Have Since Been Discovered to be Prisoners in Germany.

OTTAWA, Jan. 16.—Fifteen hundred Canadian soldiers who were reported as missing and presumably dead have been located in Germany since the armistice was signed. Many of these soldiers have been missing since the battle of Ypres, and have long since been given up as dead. The German authorities have never reported them and their mail was never received.

A report on the whole question is being prepared, but it is presumed that these prisoners must have been confined to certain camps where the German officers were particularly brutal and cruel or else the men were recalcitrant and the Germans in retaliation refused to report them contrary to all international war regulations. While the discovery of these fifteen hundred missing soldiers long since given up as dead has brought joy to many homes, it has resulted in tragic complications in a number of cases.

Reports have been received at Ottawa already of a number of cases where wives of these soldiers who were reported missing and later dead have remarried. The women acted in good faith, as they were officially notified first that their husbands were missing and later after nine months or a year as dead. The Records Office first posted a man as missing. Careful inquiry was then made through neutral sources of prisoners reported by Germany. Nine months or a year was generally given and if no trace of him could be found he was posted as dead.

One western hero of Ypres has discovered that his wife after working for two years has remarried. It is possible that legislation may have to be introduced to straighten out these connubial tangles. Whether the second marriage will be cancelled or not remains to be seen. It is a delicate and difficult human problem to solve.

The Army of Occupation

Will Stay on the Rhine for Many Months—Situation is Still Tense—Is decision of the War Council.

LONDON, Jan. 16. — The Central News declares that as a result of the allied discussions in Paris, the whole aspect of demobilization has undergone a sudden and vital change, this being shown in the drastic conditions demanded of Germany for a renewal of the armistice.

"On authority of an unimpeacable character," says the Central News, "it can be stated that a situation exists in Europe under which war may break out again at any moment. The Allied War Council has arrived at a decision which means that the British people have mistaken the appearance of peace for reality. This decision means that the new British ministry must revise the whole scheme of army demobilization.

"The decision is that Great Britain, in proportion to its military strength must maintain an army of occupation on the Rhine front for many months. If the rapid increase in demobilization recently announced were continued there would in a few months be no army in France to undertake the obligations which by common decision of the allies, have been placed upon British shoulders."

Ask Why French Colonies Have Not Delegates If British Dominions Are Represented—Anglo-Saxons Have 15 Votes.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Decisions of the Supreme Council as regards both publicity and representation were announced last night, and are freely criticized in the French newspapers this morning. Le Journal, commenting on the question of representation, after pointing out that the British and Americans together have 15 votes out of the total, asks why, if the British Dominions are represented separately, are French colonies and protectorates not similary represented.

The Intermediates Are Away to a Good Start

Officers Elected—Address by Mr. William Hamilton—Club Had a Supper.

The intermediate classes are to meet every Tuesday at the Y.M.C.A., regular supper hour, for a simple meal, served usually by a few of the mothers, through the kindness of the Mother's Club, at a charge of 15 cents After this a bible study period will be conducted under the most favorable auspices.

This plan commenced Tuesday night when 41 intermediates met for supper. After supper the Employed Boys, 24 in number adjourned to one club room, where they continued their programme under the leadership of Mr. Wm Hamilton, while the School Boys adjourned to another club room, where they continued their programme under the leadership of Mr. Wallace Mulligan. Those who attended supper will be glad to learn that, although a good supper was provided, the 15 cent fee paid all expenses and left a surplus of 17 cents. If this surplus continues the club will soon have a special treat.

ELECTIONS

The election of officers proved to be a special feature of the programme in both clubs. The chosen few were as follows—

....LIFE PROBLEM CLUB....

Grand Mogul—Burly Reid.
Vice Grand Mogul—Bert Jeffries.
Chief Correspondent—Norman Hoar.
Chief Cashier—Uzal Waterman.

SCHOOL BOYS' CLUB

Grand Mogul—Bob Moore.
Vice Grand Mogul—Douglas Young.
Chief Correspondent—Jack Hardill
Chief Cashier—Sidney Noftall.

The executive of each club will meet later in the week to complete plans for next week's programme.

Mr. Wm. Hamilton continued by taking the study period with the Employed group. He is following the course of studies on "Life Problems of Boys Who Work" by Jeremiah W. Jenks. The first study was on "The Relation of Training to Life." Mr. Hamilton is a returned soldier and his experience coupled with some fine material he had collected enabled him to render a most interesting and helpful talk.

Mr. Hamilton spoke very highly of the value of the "Technical School Training" to employed boys. He had secured data from the technical school and told them that if a number of fellows desired to be taught any subject, provision would be made for them. He also gave an outline of Canada's natural resources and exhorted the fellows to prepare themselves for a place in our national life.

Meanwhile Mr. Mulligan was conducting a similar study with the School group on the "Relation of School to Life," taken from another of Jeremiah W. Jenks' books on "Life Questions of School Boys."

Mr. Mulligan conducted the study in an interesting manner and the fellows are looking forward with interest to the next study on "Custom and Habit." After the Bible study period the group was dismissed. The programme for this school boy group is arranged so that they have their gymnastic class and swim before supper, thus leaving them free to go home to their studies immediately after bible study.

Both groups are looking forward to competition in basket-ball, hockey indoor baseball and other sports, all of which will be announced later.

Next week Mr. Hamilton is planning to give a lecture on some of his experiences while in France, continuing the following weeks with studies. If our club room proves too small to accommodate those who come we will hold the meeting in the gymnasium. Any fellow, whether a member of the group or not is welcome at this special meeting.

Intermediates! Do not forget next Tuesday, 6.15.

The great trouble with some men who were heroes yesterday is that they are forgotten to-day.

First White Man to Cut Wood In East City

Old Timer Will Spend the Winter on the Hill.

Bert Downer appeared in police court this morning and asked that he be sent to jail for six months because he had no place to stay. Mr. Downer is 81 years of age and crippled with rheumatism is unable to make a living. His wife, who resides in the city of Hamilton, is unable to support him on account of the expense of caring for her six daughters. When asked questions by the desk sergeant to be entered on the day sheet Downer stated that he was born in this county and that his father who ran Lipsett's Hotel in East City for some time, was the first white man to cut wood on the east side of the Otonabee river. He himself was a carpenter, but gave up that vocation and became a farmer. A paralytic stroke rendered him useless for further work.

He thanked the Magistrate for allowing him a home until the warm weather and was allowed to climb the hill to the jail without any police escort.

Visited Downer.

Adjutant Buntin of the local Salvation Army Corps, visited the old man at the police station and will visit him frequently during his self-sentenced term at Castle Nesbitt.

John Steven McKenna, a vagrant of an entirely different character was given two months in jail by the Magistrate.

The members of the Peterborough Branch of The Great War Veterans Association desire to thank the public generally for their ready response to their appeal for funds for this treat which was such a decided success. This was only made possible by the splendid donations, a list of which I am enclosing.

Our thanks are also due to the various churches which contributed much in the way of cakes, etc., these contributions were the means of saving an amount of money which otherwise would have been spent in buying eatables and has resulted in our having a balance of $172.50.

The Committee has decided to give this amount to the Relief Fund for the purpose of relieving cases of distress among the dependents of our comrades; many of which this association comes in contact with in its work.

We are indebted to Mr. B. F. Ackerman for his splendid gift of 25 pairs of new boots, to be distributed amongst the Soldiers Children; this will be done under the supervision of the Ladies Auxiliary.

We also desire to thank R. Hall & Son for their donation of toys; the ladies Auxiliary of this branch also desire to thank the citizens and all the churches for their most generous support which was such a great factor in making the treat such a success.

Our thanks are also due to The Examiner for its splendid assistance in securing funds on our behalf.

Pensions

CANADA'S yearly pension bill is estimated by the Minister of Finance at $30,000,000. This is a minimum figure. How is this vast fund to be administered? To whom will pensions be paid? Everyone is asking these questions. Here is the official answer.

The Organization

A huge organization has been built up to handle pensions promptly, smoothly, fairly.

At its head is the Board of Pensions Commissioners. This Board is to be developed as a civil rather than as a military body. It consists of three men, each appointed for ten years, each devoting his whole time to his duties as a Commissioner.

The Head Office of the Pensions Board is at Ottawa; and there are seventeen branch offices in the principal centres throughout Canada. An important branch is in operation in London, England.

These local branches receive applications from soldiers' dependents for pensions: send "Visitors" to call on pensioners in their homes; hold medical re-examinations; handle complaints.

The Board keeps a representative travelling from coast to coast interviewing pensioners and addressing organizations interested in their welfare. He has already conferred with more than 30,000 pensioners.

At present 60,000 pensions are being administered by the Board.

A Pension—What it is

A pension is not a gift, gratuity or reward for service done. It is compensation—money paid as a right by Canadians through their Government, to offset in a measure the handicaps suffered in war by their fellow-citizens—a debt that the country owes to our returned men, and to the dependents of those who have fallen.

It is in this spirit that Orders-in-Council governing pensions are framed. It is in this spirit that the Board of Pensions Commissioners administers these Orders-in-Council.

To Whom Payable

Pensions are not awarded for service.

Broadly speaking, any soldier or sailor who was disabled during his service is entitled to a pension—provided medical treatment fails to restore his full normal capacity.

The amount of the pension is based on the extent of the physical handicap he has suffered.

The physical condition of the disabled man is described on his discharge from the service by a Medical Board. Pension is awarded according to the amount of disablement from which he is then found to be suffering.

The percentage of handicap has been carefully and thoroughly worked out for every disability. It is both accurate and fair.

The relationship between the Medical Board and the pension applicant is that of doctor and patient. Every opportunity is given to have the man's condition judged from his point of view.

Amount of Pension

The pension is awarded to a soldier or sailor so that he can live in decent comfort, despite his handicap.

The money he may be able to earn, or the money he earned before the war, does not affect the amount of his pension. The extent of his handicap alone in the general labor market is considered.

Every man who has increased his income by Vocational Training will not have his pension decreased or discontinued.

The amount of the pension varies also according to the soldier's rank; but his trade or profession is not considered. The minimum pension for a totally disabled unmarried soldier or sailor of the lowest rank is $600 a year.

Pensions to Dependents

Widows of soldiers or sailors who have died during or as a result of service, are entitled to pension so long as they do not remarry.

Children of soldiers or sailors are entitled to pensions up to the age of sixteen, if boys, or seventeen, if girls.

Pension is awarded to the parents of a soldier or sailor according, (a) to the degree of their dependency on the deceased soldier and, (b) according to their needs.

A complete schedule of the pensions granted to disabled soldiers and sailors, and to their dependents, will be sent to anyone interested. Apply to Board of Pensions Commissioners, Ottawa.

Some of the Germans Thought Canadians Were Savages

Peterboro Soldier Says They Were Agreeably Surprised When They Got a Close-up View of the Canucks.

Mrs. Charles H. McGee, 590 Downie street, city, is the recipient of the following letter from her son, Pte. William McGee, who is at present in Cologne, Germany, with the Canadian artillery. He is billeted at the home of a German, whose two sons were in the German army during the war. The whole population in the vicinity of Cologne were of the opinion that the Canadians were savages, but were agreeably surprised when the city was occupied.

Germany, Tuesday, Dec. 17, '18.

Dearest Mother, Dad and Ern,—Well, I guess you will be wondering just what has happened to me, but it is really this. Nearly every day we have been on the move, and I didn't get much time for writing letters, or if I did write one I couldn't mail it until the Battery halted for more than a day or so, so now you will understand why my letters did not get through.

I received three letters dated Aug 27th, Nov. 3rd and 17th, also several bundles of papers. Many thanks for the papers.

Well, I must say that we are having some dandy trip now. The country which we passed through entering Germany was very poor, more like the wilds of Ontario, villages a long distance apart, and the country covered with woods. But after two days trip we came to the good country, more level and more villages. The houses in the villages were much nicer, and the appearance of everything looked as though the people were of the better class.

We received orders about the 9th that we were to reach Cologne on the Rhine river by the night of the 12th if possible. Well, I guess it was about 75 miles or more, but we did it. The first day we travelled from 4.00 in the morning till 1.00 a.m. the next morning, making about 40 miles, pulled up in a large town and stopped for the balance of the night. By 8.00 a.m. we were again on the road and arrived in Cologne about 6.00 p.m. The roads were good, but as luck would have it, it rained to beat everything. We took our guns through the central part of the city, the boys marching behind their own guns. I guess we made some impression. After placing our guns in position on the west bank of the Rhine, we went to our billets (by electric train.) The billets were nearly two miles from the guns, so that unless you were fond of walking, you rode on the cars or trains.

We were billeted with a family of Germans. The man of the house could speak English so we got along fairly well. They treated us O.K. He had two sons in the German army, but now they are back in civilian life. He told us many things about the Germans, telling also that the people in that part of the country were glad that the English had come.

The morning of the 13th great things happened. The 1st Canadian Division crossed the Rhine, marching at attention with fixed bayonets, and each battalion band playing the boys across the bridge. Say it was great. Our guns were placed three on each side of the bridge and we saw everything. The General of the 2nd Imperial army, to which the Canadians belong, took the salute on the bridge as each unit marched past.

Afterwards the German with whom we were billeted, told us that they made a big impression on the people. The Germans had been led to believe that the Canadians were savages, very wild and that when they came they would kill and steal everything, also that the English soldiers were very little men, but when they saw us they were greatly surprised. I guess by now they have altered their opinion greatly regarding our savage ways.

Everything in Cologne is going on as per usual, theatres and cafes, etc. They have a beautiful cathedral there, which is a wonderful piece of work I believe they were 700 years building it and haven't finished it yet. The bridges across the Rhine are great pieces of engineering, too. The electric trains are dandy too, and run from Cologne to Bonn. They, of course, have the street cars running on all the principal streets, too.

Yesterday, though we had to leave there and travelled about 20 miles or more, through Bonn. Don't know how long we'll be here.

Since seeing this part of the country and the people, I have changed my opinions of everything. They all seem to be decent people, and any with whom you come in contact will treat you O.K. The kids and even the old people are crazy about chocolate. I guess they haven't had any for four years.

I never thought I would ever see this country, and am awfully glad to be one of the boys who was able to see the Rhine and cross it. It certainly is a very educational and interesting thing.

I saw Clarence Hallowell the other day. He just came back from leave to Blighty and says he had a great time while there.

Only eight more days till Christmas. It is very hard to believe that it is even December here. It isn't cold, and whenever we go out we only wear the light uniform, no great coat. I still wear my summer underwear, not because I haven't got any winter. We were issued with a kind of underwear some time ago, but as it never turned cold I didn't put it on.

Where we are now is very pretty. Across the river is a high mountain, and on the top stands an old castle. Must be very pretty in the summer when all the trees are in bloom.

I guess I'll have to stop as I have about umteen letters to answer. Will write again soon. Bye-bye for now. Your loving son. WILL.

Peace Problems to the Front

OTTAWA, Jan. 15. — Parliament, which has been summoned for the 20th of February, is meeting at a date somewhat later than had been expected. There are two reasons. One is that the sessional programme will be extensive and will call for much preparation, and the other is uncertainty as to the return of the Prime Minister. There has been a strong desire that Sir Robert should be here as soon as possible after the opening, but though cables have been exchanged as late as Monday the Premier is not able to indicate when he will be back because of uncertainty as to the duration of the Peace Conference. Sir George Foster and Hon. C. J. Doherty will return soon after the opening, but Hon. Arthur Sifton will probably stay.

Problems of Peace.

The sessional agenda is now in preparation and there is no question of it being rather heavy. Many in fact, most of the measures, will be designed to adjust the problems of peace. There will be various bills, for instance, conected with the reconstruction programme, including such matters as aid to highway construction, housing, and several measures arising out of the inter-provincial conference. A general policy of land settlement involving future immigration to the country is on the programme, along with land settlement for soldiers, and pensions. Rather heavy appropriations will be made for public works, but not in keeping with the demands. Nearly every municipality in the country is asking for something. All the larger undertakings suspended during the war will be gone ahead with.

The Tariff Question.

As regards the tariff, the situation, as previously explained, is very uncertain, the main question apparently being whether a start will be made this session or the whole matter deferred till after economic conditions become stabilized. Some divergent opinions are entertained by the Ministers as to the more advisable policy to pursue.

The new Franchise Act, necessitated by the decision to give votes to women, will also involve the Wartimes Election Act. The Eastern Ontario Liberal Association meeting here Monday is the latest to demand the repeal of this measure and they echo the views of similar bodies and Governments in the west. On the other hand, the movement is being strongly combatted by most of the Conservatives west and east and by numerous public bodies, the essential question being whether to aliens of enemy nationality the franchise will be restored. The Government is undecided.

Business Profits' Tax.

In connection with the validating of the prohibition order-in-Council, a limited time is likely to be prescribed and followed by a national referendum on the whole question of absolute prohibition. The business profits war tax expires this year, and it is unlikely to be renewed, having been designedly applied to profits arising out of the war. The income tax will be maintained, and while its scale may be the subject of variation it is very likely to become a permanent institution. The debt resulting from the war and the abnormally increased interest charges, along with requirements for the public service, make the country's financial problem one of tremendous magnitude and will cause the sessional budget to be of an unusual importance.

"First to Serve— Last to Appeal"

The Record of

The Salvation Army

In Peace and War

Fifty-three years ago a man so loved the world and his fellow-man that he consecrated his life to the relief of distress and the service of the Master.

The world scoffed at his Salvation Army toiling to raise outcasts from the gutter, but General Booth lived to see scorn turn to reverence, and when he died, kings sent their representatives to his funeral.

His greatest memorial is the Salvation Army labouring in 63 countries, speaking 40 languages, serving behind the trenches since the twelfth day of the war, with Huts, Hostels, Rest Rooms, in addition to the work among soldiers' families here at home

And now comes the crisis. With the homecoming of 300,000 soldiers, and all the many problems that involves, the additional strain on the Salvation Army will be enormous. But the Salvation Army faces the mighty task ahead, confident that the necessary funds will be forthcoming.

The work the Salvation Army will be called upon to do is a vital factor in Reconstruction. Notwithstanding all the work the Government has undertaken, including the granting of pensions, there is still need for the organized effort and the uplifting influence of the Salvation Army, and, with confidence, business men's committees ask your earnest support of the

Salvation Army Million Dollar Fund

January 19th to 25th

Human Evidences of the Work

Here a returning soldier sees his baby for the first time. In the Salvation Army Maternity Home the mother received the best of care and medical attention. The Salvation Army Lassies found her struggling along without help. Two lives in all probability saved.

Picture a discharged soldier, out of a job. He is unable to provide maternity attendance for his wife. Imagine his relief when he finds the door of the Salvation Army Maternity Home is open to her.

Multiply these cases by hundreds and thousands and you will not be wide of the mark. Then consider the case of other mothers—

Who would deny the right of even the "love child" to enter the world surrounded by the loving care of the Salvation Army workers, nurses and doctors in the Maternity Home?

Among the Soldiers' Families

A soldier at the front received a letter from the Salvation Army to say that his wife was getting along nicely after a severe illness in which she had been found alone in the house. The letter did not tell how the Salvation Army Lassies turned to, scrubbed floors, set the house in order, and nursed the woman back to health.

The wife of another soldier was utterly unable to keep her home together and look after the six children. The Salvation Army workers found her, too proud to ask for help, but not too proud to accept guidance and assistance with the children when lovingly offered.

Many soldiers will find it hard to settle into civilian life. Distress among soldiers' families is inevitable, but while the home can be kept intact there is a solid foundation for the Salvation Army to build upon. The soldier will be helped to find a job. The children will be clothed so that they can go to school. Food will be forthcoming. And there will be that Cleanliness which is next to Godliness, the spirit which actuates the work

The Salvation Army is one of the organizations whose objectives extend beyond material comfort. Everything it does is ultimately directed to the extension of the Kingdom of Christ.

It approaches very practical problems in a very practical way, and achieves RESULTS. If you approve of its aims—spiritual as well as material—you will gladly give your help to raise the fund, without which much suffering must remain unrelieved—suffering among those particularly who offered their lives a living sacrifice to our comfort and protection.

"Give and it shall be given unto you—good measure"

UNITED STATES GOES BONE DRY

Thirty-Sixth State Ratifies Federal Constitutional Amendment and Carries Whole Nation for Prohibition—Great Moral Victory.

DISTILLERS WILL FIGHT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16. — The United States has voted itself completely dry. Nebraska has ratified the Federal Constitutional amendment, being the thirty-sixth state to make this decision. Congress will now vote general prohibition for the entire nation.

Three-Fourths of States Ratify.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—The United States to-day completed the legislative process of voting itself dry. When word was flashed over the wires that the 36th state, Nebraska, had ratified the prohibition amendment, prohibition leaders declared that the accomplishment was the greatest piece of moral legislation in the world. The amendment to the Federal Constitution prohibiting the manufacturing and sale of intoxicating beverages becomes effective one year after the date of its final ratification. Meanwhile, the nation goes dry July 1st next, by Presidential proclamation as a war measure, unless the President rescinds it before that date.

Introduced As War Measure.

Congress passed a resolution submitting the amendment to the various State legislatures in the midst of seething preparations for war in 1917. The Senate adopted the resolution on August 1st by a vote of 65 to 20, and the Lower House on Dec. 17, by 282 to 128. The Legislature of Mississippi was the first to ratify, taking this action in Jan. 8, 1918. Michigan, having by a State law made itself dry in 1918, was the first state to ratify it in 1919, the legislature voting on the second day of the new year. Fro mthat date to to-day legislatures have acted rapidly. In California court action has already been taken to restrain the governor from certifying the action of the Legislature to Washington.

Distilleries Will Fight.

Every resource of the distilleries with one billion dollars available will be employed in a supreme effort to save their businesses, it is said.

Goes Dry on July 1st.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16. — In the case of the prohibition amendment now being voted on by the Legislatures, Congress provided that the amendment should be submitted to the State Legislatures for ratification. There are 48 States. Three-fourths of them, the number necessary for ratification, is 36 States. Thirty-five have ratified, leaving one more State to act to adopt the amendment. The thirty-sixth State will ratify not later than to-morrow.

Under the terms of the amendment itself, nation-wide prohibition goes into effect one year after ratification of the amendment. One year from to-morrow will be January 16, 1920, and it is the contention of anti-saloon leaders at their national headquarters here that under the terms of the amendment, regardless of any intervening agencies, nation-wide prohibition should become effective not later than January 16, 1920. As a matter of fact, Congress, by appropriate legislation, has already decided that war-time national prohibition should become effective on July 1, 1919, so that in actual practice national prohibition becomes effective some six months before it could become effective under the national prohibition amendment made under the war-time prohibition legislation. After it becomes effective on July 1, 1919, the nation must remain dry until peace is signed and the armies are demobilized, the President, by proclamation, to fix the date for such demobilization.

NEW YORK WILL ENFORCE IT.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 16. — Immediately upon receipt of word that the ratification of the federal prohibition amendment had become an assured fact by the action of the Nebraska Legislature steps were taken by the temperance forces in New York with a view to bringing about its enforcement in the Empire State at the proper time.

PROPOSE GENERAL STRIKE.

CHICAGO, ILL., Jan. 16. — A resolution calling for a general strike in protest against the national bone dry amendment was before the Labour Congress meeting here to-day. This measure was presented by the Radicals.

Jennings' State the 36th.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 16.—Nebraska, the home State of William Jennings Bryan, the nestor of prohibition, was the 36th and final State that ratified the proposed constitutional amendment.

Suit Against Rev. T. H. Mitchell Is Withdrawn

Action Instituted Yesterday Was Withdrawn Immediately.

The suit against Rev. T. H. Mitchell, of Toronto, formerly pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church here, which was instituted at Osgoode Hall yesterday, has been withdrawn, and it is understood no action will be taken. No sooner was the writ issued than it was immediately withdrawn, and it is evident the publicity given the action was not anticipated or intended.

In connection with Rev. Mr. Mitchell's resignation from Old St. Andrew's, Toronto, the following resolution was unanimously carried:

Moved by Hon. W. A. Charlton and seconded by Mr. John A. Kent, and carried without dissent. It was in the following terms: "That the congregation of Old St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, while it feels and desires to express undiminished confidence in Mr. Mitchell as a man of honor and as one who has always shown himself sincerely desirous of conforming to the highest standards of Christian conduct, and while it appreciates and is grateful for Mr. Mitchell's services as a preacher and pastor, nevertheless recognizing that the strain of carrying on the work of this congregation in his present situation is greater than it is possible for him to bear, both in his interests and in the interests of the work, this congregation is constrained, though with deep regret, to acquiesce in his resignation of the pastorate."

Mr. Grant has been superintending engineer in the city since 1916. The successor to his position has not as yet been appointed.

Y.M.C.A. HOLD ANNUAL MEETING ON MONDAY—THREE DIRECTORS TO BE ELECTED

The Nominating committee meeting will be held on Friday, January 17 at 7.30. Any member of the Association may place the name of an active member with the Nominating committee as a candidate for election to the Board of Directors. Three directors will be elected to this year's board.

PROGRESSIVE CLUB NEEDS SUPPLIES FOR RELIEF OF SERBIANS

The following letter has been received by the President of the Peterborough Progressive Club, which shows there is still need for the Club to continue their work.

Canadian Serbian Relief Committee
95 King street west, Toronto.
January 14th., 1919

Dear Miss Peck,—We would be very grateful for underclothing, socks and other warm clothing. Some organizations in Toronto, which, like yours, have been doing hospital work, are now, under the auspices of our Committee, doing work for the Serbians. We ask for warm clothing, blankets and soap. Children's stockings would be splendid.

The parcels would be addressed: "For Serbia," Queen Mary's Needlework Guild, 83 King street west, Toronto.

During the years of the war the Serbians used up bedding, carpets and now they have nothing left to mend their rags. I am sure you could not work for people more desperately in need.

Yours very truly,
Edith Mowat
Cor. Sec. C.S.R.C

At a meeting held by the Progressive Club yesterday, Wednesday, the 15th, it was decided to send $25.00 to the Women's Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A.; $25.00 to the last appeal which the Canadian Field Comforts Commission are sending out; $100.00 to the appeal of the Salvation Army and $100.00 to the Serbian Relief and about $25.00 worth of made socks. The Club has wool on hand for children's socks and material they intend making up for the Siberian children.

GREAT TRIBUTE TO BRITISH DIVISION.

55th Held Only Piece of Allied Front Against the Huns.

LONDON, Jan. 16.— Major-General Jeudwine, commander of the Fifty-fifth Division of the British Army, which comprises the West Lancastrians, has issued a special order of the day, in which he pays a tribute to the remarkable part the division played in the war, but especially during the great German offensive of last year. He says:

"From the 9th to the 16th of April, outnumbered and with your flank turned, you withstood, without yielding ground, a series of violent attacks by an enemy flushed with success, and inflicted on him the severest losses. You may fairly claim to have left your mark on him. It is believed that the front held by you was the only piece of the Allied front which, being attacked in force during that offensive, was held to the end inviolate."

Unusual Film is "The Spurs of Sybil"

Alice Brady is Starred in This New World-Picture Now at the Empire.

A strikingly unusual film is "The Spurs of Sybil,' the new World-Picture Brady-Made which is now being shown at the Empire theatre. Alice Brady is the charming star of this production. The role portrayed by Miss Brady is that of Sybil Drew, a "poor relation" who has been brought up in affluence by her wealthy aunt. The aunt comes to the opinion that Sybil will be happier and better off mentally and physically if she will only earn her own living for a year. So the aunt arouses Sybil's pride and the young lady goes out to earn her spurs by earning her own living.

Sybil's adventures begin immediately after leaving her aunt's home. They continue at a rapid rate from then on and the conclusion of the photo play is entirely different from anything you would expect. Sybil wins her spurs in an astonishing manner.

"The Spurs of Sybil" has been staged in an elaborate manner and it is the sort of a photoplay that sticks long in your memory as a most thoroughly enjoyable entertainment. See it.

We are giving an excellent program daily. Matinees, 11c: Evenings-16 cents.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 16.—Owing to the impossibility of getting steel rails, which are not being manufactured at present, it will not be feasible to attempt to finish the Hudson Bay Railway this year, J. D. McArthur, veteran railroad contractor said Tuesday. He believes that it will cost about four million dollars to complete the line, and he is willing to go on as contractor and finish it when the Government gives the word. Ninety-two miles remain to be built from Kettle Rapids to Port Nelson. There are 340 miles already built from The Pas.

Mr. McCarthy denies that he has been approached in any manner with reference to the purchase by the Canadian National Railways Board of the Edmonton, Dunvegan and Peace River Railway. It had been reported that the road would be taken over by the Government on May 1st.

FATAL JUMP ON TO TRAIN.

Eye-Witness Makes Heroic Attempt to Save Man at Kingston.

KINGSTON, Jan. 15. — The heroic attempt Alexander McDonald, car foreman for the Grand Trunk Railway, made to save the life of James Devine, a Kingston carter, at Kingston Junction, Sunday afternoon, when he was run over by a freight train was told before Coroner Mundell and a jury, which found a verdict of "accidental death."

McDonald was on the station platform when he noticed Devine jump on a tank car of fast moving freight. Devine made for the running board, but missing his jump. McDonald ran the full length of the platform supporting him, and crying to him to let go his hold on an iron bar that he had grabbed, and he would pull him clear off the tracks. Fear kept him from responding, and McDonald lost his grip of Devine when his heavy mitts came off, and a second later Devine was drawn under the wheels and crushed to death.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mr. Arthur Haines, Ashton Farm, Perley, Sask., writes: "Two years ago whooping cough was very bad in this part of the country; our eight months old boy caught it and had a very severe attack. A neighbor advised the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and we gave it and nothing else with splendid results. When the older brother took the whooping cough we used this medicine promptly and prevented serious trouble, as the cough passed off in two or three days".

Poles Are Divided Abroad and Menaced at Home

Committee in Paris Cannot Agree, but France Will Send Troops—A Limited Force is Kept at Home.

PARIS, Jan. 17.—Although no Polish delegates have been anywhere near the sessions of the Inter-Allied War Council, nor are likely to be seated at any time in the near future, there have been half a dozen secret conferences in the last week between representatives of the French government and the two Polish factions in Paris looking to clear up the situation in Warsaw with a view to sending troops to Poland to help crush the onsweeping Bolsheviki.

General Pilsudki has four newly arrived agents headed by Dluski, who have been in daily talks with the Polish National committee and each in turn has been in touch with Clemenceau government. After some agreement has been reached as to which element is in charge of home affairs, it is certain troops will go from France.

But which troops? There's the rub. Will they be Polish troops who have been fighting here and will these be supplemented by French legions, voluntary or regular, or will America send an expeditionary corps?

Mr. Lansing denies with emphasis—with the greatest possible emphasis he has used in anything since arriving in Paris—that the United States government has had the intention of sending even a single man to Poland. But apparently his denial does not affect the French newspapers, which last night and this morning announced as a practical certainty that there will be an American contingent.

Neither did the Secretary's denial keep the dealers on the Bourse from using the news as a boom for stocks which would be affected.

Rival Factions.

I cabled last week the statement that the allies, who had recognized the Polish National Committee in Paris as a government, were in a dilemma because of General Pilsudski's claims to control, and since then the situation has been becoming more unsettled daily. Off and on all the week I have been trying to get a concrete statement from both the Polish factions based on reports I know they get almost hourly from their chiefs as to what General Pilsudski and Mr. Paderewski are trying to decide.

The answers have been that they are trying to reach a decision for a coalition government. Each side admits that the other has Poland's interests at heart and admits that coalition is the best thing, but neither can explain the situation which is now dragging out into an affair that will soon become an embarrassment to the proper starting of peace parleys on Saturday.

The Polish crisis is rapidly edging the League of Nations off the board as the initial affair on the programme.

Although the allied governments have recognised the Polish National Committee here as a real authority, there is no desire to foist a government which is not acceptable on the Polish people, but it is considered that, in view of the double menace of Bolshevism and Prussianism the two factions should get together.

One of the greatest arguments against the National Committee, headed by Mr. Dmowski, is that it is anti-Semitic, and the Jews at home want none of it. They are starting a separate movement which is threatening to add coals to the fire until this state of affairs is settled.

The Allies disapprove entirely of sending back the Polish troops in France. They are apparently most vehement in this. These troops have been in France a long time and have been supported at the expense of the French government. The total cost of their upkeep has been more than $36,000,000.

Some Troops in Poland.

I have been endeavouring for several days to find out where these troops are now stationed. It is rumoured that some of them already are actually in Poland, although General Haller is still in France. There is some basis for the report in view of the recent German protest in which the Huns declared that, although the armistice provided for the free movement of allied troops, the Poles were not allies but rebels.

This would indicate that somewhere Polish troops were moving in large numbers.

Another question is being made in Paris that a fair sized volunteer army could be recruited from among the Poles now in the American army in France. These men should be more than willing to go to the fatherland, or rather to go to what once was their fatherland, and in order that it may become their fatherland again. Their job would be a hard one, judging by the latest reports, received last night.

One despatch from the Galician Government committee said the Ukrainians have massacred several hundred Polish officers and soldiers, including members of Parliament. Nine unarmed civilians have been terribly mutilated at Bruchowice. Three thousand civilian hostages are starving at Tarnopol, Vhyj and Stanislaw. Ukrainian heavy artillery is bombarding Lemberg unceasingly, directing fire particularly against churches.

DROPPED INTO FOE'S FIELD.

Then Picked Up Again By Italian Aviators to Tell Fall of General Diaz.

Gained Important Facts.

ROME, Jan. 15.—During the period just before the great Italian offensive started considerable attention was attracted to the extraordinary accuracy of the knowledge of affairs behind the Austrian lines in possession of General Diaz and his staff. It is now known that much of this exact information was secured by men who were dropped in enemy territory by Italian airplanes and, after an interval for observation, picked up again and brought back by aviators.

During the three months just prior to the launching of the Italian drive eighty men were engaged in this perilous work. All of them had thrilling adventures and experiences. The story of Captain Romiati may be taken as representative of what may be related by any of them. Captain Romiati served as a doctor in an Austrian hospital for ten days and later made his escape in the guise of a cattle dealer. Lieutenants Maso and Tubero were arrested as spies, but managed to overpower their guard and escape.

GRAIN MARKET

Corn markets again showed some resistance to the bear pressure, and succeeded in holding Wednesday's advances firm, and in the later options showing still further slight gains. The explanation seems to be that State crop estimates give a very larger decrease than was shown in the Government's crop estimates, in its last reports. Deliveries are also light and cash prices were a cent higher in the western markets. Oats are still weak, failing to respond to the strength lasting in the corn market.

The Decoy Ship Was a Failure

Torpedoed and Disabled, the Santee Never Saw a U-Boat.

PARIS, Jan. 14.—Misfortune and ill-luck followed the American Navy's only mystery ship, the Santee.

When the American squadron arrived at Queenstown and began to cooperate with the British fleet, the exploits of the various British mystery ships fired the imagination of American officers and men alike. The Americans wanted a mystery ship and were so insistent that Admiral Sims took the matter up with Admiral Bailey, and the British Admiralty willingly assigned to the Americans a magnificent new decoy ship, which was just completed in one of the shipyards of the south of England.

It was a smart freighter in appearance, larger than the average mystery ship, which its periscope masked by a smokestack, and with torpedo tubes and batteries so skillfully concealed that a trained eye could not discover the real nature of the craft, even at close range.

Captain David Hanrahan was assigned to command the ship, which the Americans named the Santee. There were hundreds of volunteers among officers and men for the hazardous service the Santee was about to undertake. No ship ever put to sea with a braver or more determined crew.

Full of confidence and high hopes, the Santee started for the Irish Channel to bait German submarines. The stars were shining brightly the first night the Santee was out, and she loafed in the hope of attracting the enemy undersea craft.

Exactly at midnight, without the slightest warning, the Santee was struck amidships by a torpedo, which tore a tremendous hole in her and completely disabled her engines. She immediately wirelessed her plight, and part of the crew put to sea in small boats.

Like all other mystery ships, the Santee was filled with wood and could not sink. Her gunners stood ready to unmask the batteries and fire upon the German submarine, but the German did not show himself. All night long the Santee gunners watched for the enemy. For thirty-six hours the part of the crew still on the Santee kept in hiding, hoping the enemy would appear, but in vain.

A slow tug was summoned to take the Santee back to a shipyard in the south of England. She was dragged through the submarine zone at two miles an hour in the hope of inviting further attack, but without results. The canny Germans evidently had full information about the ship and gave her a wide berth.

It took many months to repair the damage done by the well-placed torpedo, and the submarine campaign was off before the Santee was able to make another trip.

CURED OF DYSPEPSIA
BY USING
BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

The symptoms of dyspepsia are so numerous and diversified in different individuals that probably no description could exactly represent them as they occur in any given case, but a few of the most prominent are a rising and souring of food, pain, flatulence and distention of the abdomen, a sensation of discomfort after every meal, which is sometimes followed by sickness and vomiting.

To get rid of dyspepsia a careful arrangement of the diet is necessary and due time must be given for the digestion of the meal.

You will find that Burdock Blood Bitters will help with this digestion. It does this by toning up the stomach in such a w. / that the dyspepsia soon disappears.

Mr. Robt. Baldwin, Winnifred, Alta., writes:—"I cannot speak too highly of Burdock Blood Bitters for curing dyspepsia, of which I have been a sufferer for years. I have tried a good many doctors and proprietary medicines, so one day I thought I would try something different. I got a bottle of B. B. B. from our local store, as it was about the only remedy he kept, and I can certainly say that I was more than pleased with the results, as I got better right away. I will always recommend it to other sufferers."

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Brian Determines to See Mandel

CHAPTER LXXXIX

Brian tried to put that Beckly had said out of his mind, but vainly. He had said that Mandel would cut him out if he didn't take care of Ruth. "That handsome wife of yours," had been the way he spoke of her. From the very first day that Ruth had gone to work, Brian had felt a smoldering jealousy of Mandel. On occasions, he had put it into words and when Ruth's salary had been raised he first time. He had always been suspicious that Mandel paid her liberally because he was in love with her. Brian never underrated Ruth's attracions, and now after Beckly's tactless speech, was inclined to overrate them.

"D—— Beckly!" he ejaculated after he had tossed and tumbled for an hour, unable to sleep. "And d—— Mandel! They think I am easy, but they'll find out before I'm through with them." Just why he should associate Beckly and Mandel in his feeling regarding Ruth, it would have been hard to say. Of course Beckly was jealous of him because Mollie preferred him. Why shouldn't she? he said to himself with his usual egotism. Mollie had some sense. She was a discriminating kid. But try as he would to dismiss them, Beckly's words persisted in haunting and disquieting him.

He never had seen Mandel to know him in spite of Ruth's oft-repeated request that he come to the shop. He would make it a point to see him while Ruth was away. Beckly had called him "her swell boss"; it was belittling to have his wife spoken of as having a "boss" at least any but him. He'd punch Beckly's head the next time he came near him.

But all his resolves helped not at all as far as sleeping was concerned; and Brian lay awake nearly all night thinking wondering one minte if he had cause to be jealous of Mandel; the next deciding that he did, and that Ruth must leave immediately she came home.

He was so grouchy at breakfast that Rachel grumbled to herself, in the kitchen:

"He's stayin' out too late. He ain't up to no good doin' so, when missy Ruth is done gon' away."

"I'll be home to dinner, Rachel," he said shortly as he stared for the office.

"Alt right Massa Hackett, Rachel'l give you de bes' dinner she kin, she sho'ly will," pleased that he was coming home. The old negress was often lonely when Ruth was away, and although Brian didn't visit with her as Ruth did, it was someone in the house and therefore company for her.

"Have dinner at seven," he said, then almost repented that he had told Rachel he would come home. It would be horribly lonely eating alone.

He left the office, however, about four-thirty. Ruth had told him that Mandel usually remained until six o'clock. But he wasn't going to take any chances. He'd locate the fellow, then if Ruth was ever with him he couldn't be deceived. He had known of Mandel taking Ruth and her aunt to lunch; of the opera tickets, etc. But he had laid it all to his desire to impress Mrs. Clayborne, a very wealthy woman, who might in the future become a customer. Someway while her aunt had been with her, he had had no thought of being jealous of Mandel. Perhaps because of Ruth's absolute taking it for granted that he would be pleased at the attention to her aunt, their guest.

Brian reached the block upon which Mandel's shop was situated before he remembered that he had formed no plans as to how he should find out who was Mandel—how he was to differentiate him from the men he employed.

Halting opposite, he walked back and forth several times. Finally he crossed the street and spoke to the carriage men who stood near the curb.

"Has Mr. Mandel gone home yet?" he asked without too much interest.

"No sir! he will be going in a few minutes. That's his car."

"Very well. I'll smoke while I wait," Brian said, then walked leisurely away. When the fellow's back was turned he stationed himself in a doorway next the shop where he could both see and hear without any danger of being observed.

He had waited but a few moments when he saw a man leave the shop. He was shorter than himself, but so well-groomed, with a manner of such assurance, that it did not need the mention of his name or the obsequious attention of the carriage man to assure him that Mandel had at last appeared.

"Ruth's sweet boss!" he exclaimed bitterly, as he watched Mandel seat himself in his car and give orders to the chauffeur. Even the respectful way the man touched his hat, Brian took as a personal affront. All those things were what Brian had been accustomed to before he took her from her home where servants did her bidding, and where she was a pampered woman instead of a working one. He swung up the avenue in the wake of the car.

When he reached home, Rachel almost wished he had remained out, as usual, he was in such a vile humor and found so much fault with her.

To-morrow—Brian Spends the Evening with Mr. and Mrs. Roberts.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Toronto, Ont.—"As a wife and mother I can highly recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to tired and run-down women. I am the mother of eight children and have frequently taken a tonic but did not found what to take until my sister gave me some of the 'Favorite Prescription' which she herself had found to be good. It does exactly the same my system required and after taking one bottle did wonders for me, so I take pleasure in telling others of what they will find a splendid tonic, particularly for those who are run down in health."—Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor, 264 Osborne St., London.

Not a Bite of Breakfast Until You Drink Water

Says a glass of hot water and phosphate prevents illness and keeps us fit.

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated from the system each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste, toxins and ptomain-like poisons are formed and sucked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons and toxins and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headache, colds, biliousness, constipation, others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, gassy stomach after meals, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone, phosphate from the drug store, and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember inside bathing is more important than outside bathing, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing poor health, while the bowel pores do. Just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate set on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

THE ART OF CAMOUFLAGE.

The Allied Armies Now Have "Camouflage Dumps."

Camouflage has now become a high art at the front, and an absorbing feature of the war. It has saved countless lives and much property, at times completely baffling the enemy and causing great waste of ammunition. Our efforts in this direction have also given the troops in the rest billets a feeling of security.

It is now suggested that the Allied Governments should recruit or commission all the leading theatrical producers to co-operate with the soldier-artists in the development of this highly important arm of the service.

The Germans copied many of our tricks and wrinkles after discovering them on the ground taken in the a "drive." It is significant that enemy documents captured repeatedly urge more careful concealment of batteries and outposts and praise the British and French efforts in this direction.

Every allied army had "camouflage dumps"—stations for the storage of camouflage scenery, resembling almost a traveling circus with wings and property rooms, stacks of underbrush and saplings and enormous sheets of canvas painted to represent meadows, tilled ground, and patches of thicket. As the army moved forward, some of the railway trucks reminded one of the scenery carts to be seen at the rear of theatres at week-ends.—Tit-Bits.

The Austrian Scrap-heap.

There seemed no valid reason for Austria's continuing to be except that she did not know how not to be. She was the undefined and inhospitable refuge of fragments of population, peoples that wanted to be free but were not to be trusted with freedom. She represented Europe's quandary over quarrelling groups of Czechs, Croatians, Serbs, Slovenes, Poles, Hungarians and Austro-Germans, good haters all, who were hoked together to prevent them from using their fists. In short, Austria was an alternative to a bloody Central European Balkans. Her internal policy, whether it turned towards absolutism or universal suffrage, towards dualism, trialism or what not, was merely a means of keeping uncomfortably together, of maintaining a contentious unity, of seeking to develop a common loyalty, a "Gesammt-patriotismus." Her foreign policy also sought to avert the inevitable crumbling. Austria's allegiance to Germany, her bullying of Serbia, her inconstant attitude, alternately cringing and challenging, towards Russia were all parts of one ill-conceived policy. It was to keep alive, to prevent her own dismemberment, that Austria at last made the fatal decision for a war against Serbia, the final echoes of which we are hearing to-day.—The New Republic.

Winter Visitors.

London's winter visitors, the sea gulls, arrived particularly early this year. Never since the hard winter of 1895 first labelled them high up the river, and into hitherto unknown regions of parks and private gardens, have the birds omitted to make their yearly call to the Serpentine and Kensington Gardens' Round Pond. On the river, of course, the gulls, single or in flights, have been regular habitues for many years, perhaps centuries. Feeding the gulls from the bridges is a favorite occupation for many a Londoner, or rather it used to be, for now the feeding of birds is forbidden, on the ground of waste, by the Defence of the Realm regulations. The gulls will have to shift for themselves this winter, and Londoners' reputation for hospitality will suffer accordingly in the bird world.

Verse Added to Anthem.

Four hundred competitors sent in verses to the Royal Colonial Institute, which invited suggestions for an "Empire verse to the National Anthem." The adjudicators, Sir Herbert Warren, Mr. Edmund Gosse and Mr. Lawrence Binyon, decided in favor of the following verse:

Wide o'er the lipking seas,
Polar and tropic breeze,
Our song shall ring,
Brothers of each domain
Bound but by Freedom's chain,
Shout, as your sires, again—
"God Save the King!"

Keep Them Smiling

Soldiers Home Coming Campaign

The "Welcome" sign still hangs high on the doors of the Salvation Army Hostels. Help them to keep it there! While our soldiers have need of the comforts—spiritual as well as bodily—DON'T shut the doors in the boys' faces—Keep them smiling!

The Salvation Army appeals for a Million Dollars for the boys who won the Victory. This is the first time the Salvation Army has made a general appeal for its work. We urge you now, for the sake of the soldiers, and as a VITAL factor in the solution of Canada's Reconstruction problems, with the Homecoming of her boys, to give and to give liberally!

Our men in Khaki may not all be home for another year. While there is a company of Canadians in uniform over there or over HERE, there is work for the Salvation Army Lassie.

The weary waiting and the relaxed discipline spell dangers that MUST be guarded against. A happy smile and a comfortable body help to keep trouble at a distance. Do not let the Hostels shut for lack of funds!

The Salvation Army Million Dollar Fund

January 19th to 25th

"FIRST TO SERVE—LAST TO APPEAL"

A WORD ABOUT THE HOSTELS! Have you ever been inside a Salvation Army Hostel? If not, ask a returned man about the Hostels in Paris, London, Toronto, Hamilton, or any others that he has stayed in over HERE.

Let HIM tell you about the REAL beds, the home cooking, the fried eggs, and hot coffee—and hot baths. If he knows you very well, he may give you a hint about the spiritual comfort the Salvation Army Lassies give these men far from home and all it means!

Keep them smiling! We will not turn the men adrift after they have won so glorious a Victory! We will redeem our PLEDGE—"We will keep the home fires burning, till the boys come home"!

Next week the Campaign will be on! Help twice! First, by your liberal contribution—"To whom much is given, of him much is required." Second, urge upon your friends and neighbors the pressing needs of the soldiers, right up to the time they are safely settled once more into civilian life.

Try Magnesia For Stomach Trouble

It Neutralizes Stomach Acidity, Prevents Food Fermentation, Sour Gassy Stomachs and Acid Indigestion.

Doubtless, if you are a sufferer from indigestion, you have already tried pepsin, bismuth, soda, charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and you know these things will not cure your trouble—in some cases do not even give relief.

But before giving up hope and deciding you are a chronic dyspeptic just try the effect of a little bisurated magnesia—not the ordinary commercial carbonate, citrate, oxide or milk, but the pure bisurated magnesia which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powdered or tablet form. Take a teaspoonful of the powder or two compressed tablets with a little water after your next meal and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in the stomach, which now causes your food to ferment and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn, and the bloated or heavy lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat.

You will find that, provid d you take a little bisurated magnesia immediately after a meal, you can eat almost anything and enjoy it without any danger of pain or discomfort to follow and moreover the continued use of the bisurated magnesia cannot injure the stomach in any way so long as there are any symptoms of acid indigestion

Husband Was Dead a Month

BODY OF PATIENT BURIED AND WIDOW NOT NOTIFIED

Hamilton, Jan. 6.—To see her husband's dead body pass her home without her knowledge was the experience of Mrs. G. W. Hazell, 384 York Street, the mother of two soldier boys still on service overseas. The G. W. V. A., to whom the bereaved widow appealed for redress, demands an investigation. Her husband was an epileptic and had been an inmate of the asylum. For many days his body lay unclaimed at Blachford & Sons funeral apartemnts.

The first inkling Mrs. Hazell had of her husband's death was on December 1st last. She paid a visit to the asylum to ascertain what her husband would like for Christmas. She was then informed that Mr. Hazell had been dead and buried by charity one month previously.

According to Dr. English, asylum superintendent, the whole affair was an oversight due to the carelessness of one of the physicians who had since left the institution. His name was not given.

Mrs. Hazell desires the asylum authorities or the man responsible for the blunder to pay for having the body re-interred. Unless redress is forthcoming it is likely the affair will be reported to the provincial government and an investigation demanded.

WOULD SAVE RED FINNS.

Scandinavian Labor Demands Ending of Terrorism.

That the sharp protest against the reign of terror instituted in Finland by the German-backed White Guard regime voiced by more than 100 Liberal and Socialist members of the Swedish Parliament in a petition handed to the Finnish White Guard representative in Stockholm on Oct. 21, was the expression of the general sentiment of the labor and Socialist organizations of the Scandinavian countries is shown by the arrival of copies of a statement sent out several weeks ago by officials of those organizations. This statement, which was put out prior to the imposing of the death sentences upon nine members of the Finnish Diet by White Guard courts for their share in the Red Guards' vain effort to throw out the German-controlled forces last spring, but subsequent to the execution and exiling of thousands of the rank and file, reads, in part:

"The situation in Finland seems to become worse and worse. While the 'Red Government' abolished the death penalty as a legal measure, and at any rate tried to prevent such cruelties, often very inhuman, which, notwithstanding all efforts to the contrary, occurred in the whirl of the revolutionary period, the leading elements of the White Guard in many instances perpetrate or permit mass executions of armed as well as of unarmed men and women, often without any investigation or without passing sentence. If even has occurred, as official reports show, that military authorities have issued orders to execute persons known to be innocent, who were made to pay with their blood for offenses of such persons as had not been apprehended.

"In line with such practices is the treatment which, in spite of all assurances to the contrary, is meted out to 'Red' prisoners in various camps. Not only the workers and their relatives, but also persons belonging to the propertied class, maintain that great numbers of prisoners are dying of hunger or disease, because of insufficient nourishment. Recently a certain great employer of labor in Finland publicly admitted that 'prisoners in detention camps are dying like flies,' and that 'in Svenborg the misery among the prisoners is indescribable.'

"According to many concurrent statements which have been made in Parliament, many Socialist members of the Finnish Parliament are kept in prison even without an investigation or other judicial proceeding. Thereby substitute members are being prevented from taking the places of those detained, and their constitutional rights are thus infringed. Nor do the Finnish rulers live up to the revision of the Finnish Constitution, which calls for a substitute member in place of a deceased member of Parliament.

"The country is being ruled by a Parliament from which, by arbitrary military and administrative orders, are eliminated the representatives of those wage slaves who are most cruelly oppressed by the present plutocratic society. Such a state of affairs cannot be regarded as 're-establishment of law and order,' and it is clear that such an attitude is far removed from principles of justice, the observance of which is the only means to prepare for better times.

"The organized Socialist and Labor movement cannot silently contemplate the bloody persecution of the Finnish workers. In April, 1914, the Social Democracy in Sweden, Norway, and Denmark, irrespective of groups and different opinions on other matters, vigorously protested against the mass executions of Finnish workers, which had taken place already at that time. In order to emphasize that first protest all the Swedish Socialist parties and factions, as well as the Social Democratic Labor Party of Norway, once more want to express their deep regret and their emphatic condemnation of the aforesaid character of the new rule in Finland."

This statement is signed by Ernest Eriksson, Albert Forssell, Richard Sandler, and Chr. Sojestrom for the regular Socialist Party of Sweden; by Carl Lindhagen and Ernest Astrom for the Left Wing of the Swedish Socialist Party, by Ivan Oljelund for the Central Organization of Labor of Sweden, and by Kyrre Grepp and Emil Stang for the Social Democratic Party of Norway.

Aising Anderson, secretary of the Socialist Party of Denmark, refuse to the April protest and demands that the Government of Finland show clemency to the defeated part of the nation in order to prepare the way for a better day through a wise policy of conciliation.

ECZEMA ON BABY'S EAR

Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes "My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad and nothing seemed to do her very much good. Hearing of the remarkable cures Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some, and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's preparation too highly."

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro phosphate, which is inexpensive and sold by McDermid & Jury in Peterboro and most all druggists under a guarantee of entire satisfaction or your money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:—Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

ANYBODY WANT A CLUB?

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 16.—With a second mortgage on the St. Louis National Baseball Club of $89,000, exclusive of interest, falling due yesterday, no plans were devised to take care of the indebtedness at a meeting of the stockholders Tuesday, according to W. G. Schofield, secretary of the club, and there is no doubt that the club will be sold at auction under foreclosure.

Heart Palpitated

Could Count Every Beat

When the heart begins to palpitate, it will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over your whole system, accompanied by weak, fainting and dizzy spells.

When the heart gets into this condition, you become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to either social, business or household duties.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief to all sufferers from any heart weakness or nerve derangements.

Mrs. Walter Greives, Apsley, Ont., writes:—"I had been run down, and doctors told me I was anaemic, but did not help me with their medicines. I could not sleep nights, my heart palpitated so, and I could count every beat.

I used to have such dizzy spells I would have to go to bed. I was not able to do any work for eight months. A cousin of mine had taken Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and told me what they had done for her. I took eight boxes of them, and now I am able to help every day with the work. I am so thankful to tell others what they have done for me, so that they may try this great and wonderful remedy. I hope this may prove good to some one who is suffering the way I did."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

British Navy's Work.

Some interesting figures have lately been published showing the relative percentages of the Allied fleets that are engaged in anti-submarine warfare. It seems that in the eastern Atlantic 80 per cent. of the vessels are British, 14 per cent. American, and six per cent. French. The submarines engaged in the same waters are 78 per cent. British, 17 per cent. French and five per cent. American. Of the miscellaneous patrol craft, made up of yachts, motor boats, etc., 96 per cent. British, 17 per cent. French and three per cent. American. In the Mediterranean 38 per cent. of the destroyers are French, 27 per cent. British, 26 per cent. Italian, seven per cent. Japanese, and two per cent. American. Of the submarines, 50 per cent. are Italian, 16 per cent. French, and 13 per cent. British. Of the miscellaneous vessels, 65 per cent. are French, 23 per cent. British, eight per cent. American, and four per cent. Italian. Of the vessels engaged in convoying vessels across the Atlantic, 70 per cent. are British, 27 per cent. American, and three per cent. French.

The Coldstream Guards.

The Coldstream Guards is a regiment of footguards in the British army, forming part of the royal household brigade. It is one of the oldest regiments of the British service, dating from 1660. In that year Gen. Monk, who, after the death of Cromwell, took sides with the parliament and the army, organized the regiment at Coldstream, a border town of Berwickshire, Scotland, whence the name of the regiment, and marched with it into England. It has seen service in every British campaign of any magnitude, and has emblazoned on its regimental colors the names of many of the most brilliant victories of British arms.

SUITOR ARRESTED ACCUSED OF STEALING GIRL'S SAVINGS

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Accused by Miss Ellen Laine, twenty-five years old, of No. 63 East 126th street, with stealing $1,200 she earned while working as a maid in Boston during the last nine years, Walter Pleuss, twenty-four, a ship carpenter, of No. 113 West 127th street, was arrested by Michael Murphy and Edward Leonard, detectives of the East 126th street station. Pleuss was held on a charge of grand larceny.

Miss Laine told the detectives she met Pleuss at a dance in Boston two months ago, and after he had professed love for her they came to this city.

On Christmas Day, Miss Laine told the police, Pleuss and she entered the Harlem station of the New York Central Railroad, and Pleuss asked her to wait there for him. She waited until the station closed for the night. Then, returning to her room, she found her savings gone.

The detectives and Miss Laine were informed that a Finnish ball was to be held in Harlem, and they watched for the man. In 125th street Miss Laine saw Pleuss in a taxicab. The detective followed in another and arrested him when he stopped at a saloon in Second avenue.

THIS WEAK, NERVOUS MOTHER

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which added to my weak condition kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness."—Mrs. J. WORTHLINE, 2842 North Taylor St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The majority of mothers nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down, nervous condition with headaches, backache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. It is at such periods in life that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will restore a normal healthy condition, as it did to Mrs. Worthline.

TO GROW HAIR ON BALD HEADS

Specialist Gives Simple Recipe That Works Fine.

Thousands of people suffer from baldness, and falling hair who, having tried nearly every advertised hair tonic and hair-grower with out results, have resigned themselves to baldness and its attendant discomfort. Yet their case is not hopeless. The following simple home prescription has made hair grow after years of baldness, and is also unequalled for restoring gray hair to its original colour, stopping hair from falling out, and destroying the dandruff germ. It will not make the hair greasy and can be put up by any druggist: Bay rum, 6 ounces, Lavona de Composee, 2 ounces, Menthol Crystals, one half drachm. If you wish it perfumed add 1 drachm of your favourite perfume. This preparation is highly recommended by physicians and specialists and is absolutely harmless, as it contains none of the poisonous wood alcohol so frequently found in hair tonics. Ladies using this prescription should be careful not to get it on the face or where hair is not desired.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Bobolink—A Girl

By GRAVE MERCER DUNLAP

"It's Bobolink!"

A little ragged, barefooted urchin, playing "mubble-the-peg" with the brook of a pocketknife at the edge of a wooded stretch, allowed his hands to drop listlessly. A look of new interest came into his eyes, filled with mute rapture!

Liquid and pure as the tintinabulation of crystal beads dropped into a golden dish, from beyond a thicket there sounded forth a bird call. There was a rustle, and a dozen or more birds, twittering and responsive, flew over his head in the direction of the call. Then again the mellow strain, and then a series of trills that filled the woodland stretch with the most bewildering melody.

"Yes, it's Bobolink," repeated the little fellow, peering through the maze of greenery. It was to rest his ecstatic glance upon a young girl of about eighteen.

"If I could only whistle like that!" muttered the lad. "And she can warble the Star Spangled Banner and all the tunes better'n a fife and sweeter for a flute."

Eunice Darrell smiled down upon her varied brood. Then as if she were in the midst of a wildwood practice lesson, she began and finished a difficult gem from the greatest of operas.

"Will you pardon me, but that is genius, pure, unadulterated and marvelous!"

She whom half the town called "Bobolink" and the summer sojourners the "Whistling Girl" drew back abashed. There stepped into view a handsome, gallant young fellow in military costume, one arm in a sling. Because Bobolink doted on soldiers she became immediately indulgent.

"You mean the whistling?" she said, with an embarrassed smile. "I came way out here where I thought I could be alone, because Aunty says it is ungirl-like."

"Oh, so?" softly observed the young man. "Young lady, you have a rare gift and I must tell you so. I am Lieut. Gordon Worth, invalided from active service at the front," and he moved the bandaged arm expressively. "Down here for a few days loving the birds and all nature, as I see you do, and I envy you—you, who can call them at your own behest and talk to them in their own sweet language."

He did not deem it bold or unceremonious to speak his thoughts, nor Bobolink unhesitantly that she should linger with a spirit harmonious. She was at once interested as the conversation drifted into particulars of the war experience of her new acquaintance.

"It was a bit of a shell that took me above the elbow in a trench raid," Worth related. "I shall not lose the use of my arm, but they will not give me active work. I am starting a citizen alien recruiting office in the city next week."

And before long the artless two discovered that their homes were near together in the city. Bobolink told how she was going home in a few days and how ardently she had wished to become a nurse in the army, but her parents had discouraged her.

For three days they met and a pleasant sensible companionship resulted. The wonderful whistling gift of Bobolink did not cease to entrance Worth. The evening before he went away, he said:

"Miss Darrell, will you deem it effrontery on my part if I ask my sister to call upon you when you return to the city?"

"Oh, I should be delighted!" replied the outspoken young lady.

"You long to do some war work," continued Worth, "and my sister is in the midst of Red Cross activities. Besides that I have a grand idea of your co-operation in my especial line of duty."

He did not tell Eunice what it was. Miss Alma Worth did, however, a week later, after she and Eunice had become close friends. There was vast animation and interest on the part of the two fair patriots. They visited numerous bird and music stores. Bobolink acquired new bird calls and musical airs, and then—a climax that roused her up to positive enthusiasm.

Lieutenant Worth had opened headquarters for the enlistment of countrymen of foreign allies. He had secured speakers in all their languages. The various groups of prospective volunteers were invited to a specific entertainment upon set days. One of their own countrymen aroused them with an appeal to their duty to both native and adopted country. And then: "Come, hear the bird song of your native land and its national hymns."

English, French, Belgian, Italian and so through the entire list, the song of the skylark, of the mavis, the blue bird, the thrush, the nightingale, Bobolink, the gifted, the true vocalist of nature, made the hall ring with fervor and appeal. Men cheered, thrilled, even wept. Their inner souls awoke and the harvest was great.

"What was that?" inquired Worth one evening, as his sister at the piano, Bobolink was softly trilling a dreamy bird note.

Bobolink lifted her eyes to his face and flushed, and Alma, with a roguish smile explained:

"The Love Bird's Song," and Worth leaning over the fluttering Bobolink, whispered softly:

"Teach it to me!"

CUT THIS OUT

OLD ENGLISH RECIPE FOR CATARRH, CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES.

If you know of some one who is troubled with Catarrhal Deafness, head noises or ordinary catarrh cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. In England the scientists for a long time past have recognized that catarrh is a constitutional disease and necessarily requires constitutional treatment.

Sprays, inhalers and nose douches are liable to irritate the delicate air passages and force the disease into the middle ear which frequently means total deafness, or else the disease may be driven down the air passages towards the lungs, which is equally as dangerous. The following formula which is used extensively in the damp English climate is a constitutional treatment and should prove especially efficacious to sufferers here who live under more favorable climate conditions.

Secure from your druggist 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength). Take this home and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and hearing improve as the inflammation in the eustachian tubes is reduced. Parmint used in this way acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system and has a tonic action that helps to obtain the desired results. The preparation is easy to make, costs little and is pleasant to take. Every person who has catarrh or head noises or is hard of hearing should give this treatment a trial.

When King George was Prince of Wales he was fond of telling a story against himself in connection with his visit to Ottawa some years ago.

The prince stole a quiet bicycle spin early one morning, and in his ramblings met a farmer, hoarding marketwards, his wagon temporarily stalled by the loss of a nut belonging to the whippletree bolt. H.R.H. assisted in putting things right.

On parting the farmer expressed his thanks, and asked if he might know the name of the person to whom he was indebted. The cyclist replied modestly:—

"I am the Prince of Wales; and may I ask whom I have the pleasure of addressing?"

A broad amused smile beamed from the farmer's face as he said:—

"Me—me! Why, I'm you uncle, the Czar of Russia!"—Farm and Home. (British).

A live sheet is here discovered. Says the Jonesboro News: "The friends of this paper will please hand us items while they are fresh. We prefer not to publish a birth after the child is weaned, a marriage after the honeymoon is over or the death of a man after his widow is married again."

"THUG" INDIAN WORD.

Rudyard Kipling Tells Story of Origin.

The word "thug" has an interesting historical origin and comes to us from India. In a recent address in England Rudyard Kipling told the story as follows:

"Once upon a time, a hundred years ago, there was a large and highly-organized community in India who lived by assassination and robbery. They were educated to it from their infancy; they followed it as a profession, and it was also their religion. They were called thugs. Their method was to disguise themselves as pilgrims or travellers or merchants, and to join with parties of pilgrims, travelers and merchants moving about India. They got into the confidence of their victims, found out what they had on them, and in due time—after weeks or months of acquaintance—they killed them by giving them poisoned food—sweetmeats for choice—or by strangling them from behind, as they sat over the fire of an evening, with a knotted towel or a specially prepared piece of rope. They then stripped the corpse of all valuables, threw it down a well or buried it, and went on to the next job.

"At last things got so bad that the Government of India had to interfere. Like all Governments, it created a department—the department of thuggee—to deal with the situation Unlike most departments, this department worked well, and after many years of tracking down and hanging up the actual murderers, and imprisoning their spies and confederates, who included all ranks of society, it put an end to the whole business of thuggee."

Fishing for Drowned Ships.

The British navy, unfortunately, was not able to "depth-charge" all the German U-boats before they had done their foul work. So there are hundreds of men fishing for ships sunk around the coasts of the British Isles, and their catches have indeed been marvellous. More than 400 ships have come up in their nets.

These men work under the Admiralty Salvage Department, and have done what would have been thought impossible before the war. After vessels have been raised they are brought again to the shipyards, are repaired, and go to sea once more.

The methods by which they are brought up are various, and their perils are innumerable.

But down our men go to the ships—150 feet and sometimes more. One ship carried a cargo worth $15,000,000, nearly all food. She had been a victim of the U-boats, and had a hole in her side 40 feet long and 28 feet broad. At low tide there was just her shelter-deck showing 57 feet from the bottom. A wonderful new electric pump was used and engine-room and stokehold were cleared of water, causing the derelict to rise, and enabling her cargo to be cleared until she was high enough to be towed into safety. Practically all her cargo was saved.

Another vessel of 3,500 tons was "down" in an important channel. To blow her up was dangerous. The divers got sixteen 9-in. wire cables under her. By means of compressed air a great outflow of water was caused which reduced her weight to less than 3,000 tons. At that point she was lifted and carried a mile to safety.

Temporary repairs have actually been made under water to some vessels, which have then been brought up, docked, refitted, and sent to sea. Some time ago an oil tanker was mined and caught fire; after an explosion the decks were awash with blazing oil, and more explosions followed. She not only seemed doomed to destruction, but also likely to be a danger to other ships. She was shelled, not by a submarine by by the Salvage Corps, and sent to the bottom. Divers then went down, plugged up the shot holes and closed up the openings, and the vessel was raised and taken away for repairs.

"Children Love Cascarets"

Keep your little Pets healthy, strong and full of play by giving a harmless candy Cascaret at the first sign of a white tongue, feverish breath, sour stomach or a cold. Nothing else straightens up a bilious, or constipated youngster like these delightful cathartic tablets—Only ten cents a box.

TO MOTHERS! While all children detest castor oil, calomel, pills and laxatives, they really love to take Cascarets because they taste like candy. Cascarets "work" the nasty bile, sour fermentations and constipation poison from the child's tender stomach, liver and bowels without pain or griping. Cascarets never disappoint the worried mother. Each ten cent box of Cascarets contains directions for children aged one year old and upwards as well as for adults—absolutely safe and harmless!

Service Act Still in Force

Government May Make Another Attempt to Round Up a Few Defaulters.

OTTAWA, Jan. 16.—Important regulations under the Military Service Act, it is officially stated, are still in force. These include the regulation which requires each person of apparent military age and description to carry documents proving his status under the Act. They include also the regulations pertaining to the duty of employers to notify registrars of all Class One men taken on or off their employ, and of securing themselves that men in their employ, or taken on their employ, are in any way in default under the Military Service Act.

A number of other regulations passed under the Act have been suspended. Men becoming 19 years of age, Americans, British subjects coming to Canada to reside, and men becoming widowers, are no longer required to register. It is also unnecessary for any Class One men to make any further application whatever in connection with exemptions, as all exemptions current on November 11, 1918, are continued effective indefinitely.

Requirement of notification of change of address to the Military Service Act Registrars is suspended, as also is the provision requiring registrants to obtain permits to leave Canada.

To render the detection of defaulters as simply as possible, registrars are issuing a uniform protection certificate to all men under their jurisdiction and in good standing on their records on November 11, 1918. This certificate will replace all exemption and protection certificates previously issued by registrars.

With the exception of a nucleus staff, consisting of the registrar and five assistants, registration offices are to be closed on Feb. 15.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur or restoring faded, gray hair to its natural colour dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is musy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Fear Not Cowardice.

An English observer calls attention to the fact that our world war has destroyed the fear of being afraid. Heretofore, even to most distant antiquity, the one quality insisted on in the soldier was that he should be fearless and the more callously so the better. The faintest tremor of timidity was a black mark against the most resplendent knight as well as the lowliest bowman or halbardier and the schooling for war was an utter defiance of the personal risk.

The Germans, if we are to accept reports, induce an apparent bravery, but a counterfear—the terror of a discipline disobeyed — yet doubtless even among the enemy there are many deeds of the heroism of resolution and certainly among the Allies this quality has reached its highest developments. The men of Verdun admit to ghastly fears, but they gave no backward step.

Propose a Memorial Forest.

It is believed that with the close of the war the entire line of trenches in France, extending from Alsace to the Belgian border, may be converted into a sort of national sacred forest as a permanent tribute to the memory of the French poilus, who died there defending their native soil. A proposition to this effect has been prepared by the general council of the Department of the Meuse and will be submitted to not only France, but the entire world.

"WORTH A HUNDRED DOLLARS A BOTTLE"

Missouri Pacific Fireman Praises Tanlac For Wife's Improvement.

"My wife has taken three bottles of Tanlac, and says it has been worth a hundred dollars a bottle to her," said J. G. Nichols, a well-known railroad man now employed on the Missouri Pacific Railroad, and living at 4711 Summit Street, Kansas City, Mo.

"For three years," he continued, "my wife had suffered a great deal on account of the condition of her stomach. Her appetite was poor and the little she forced down disagreed with her and caused gas to form on her stomach, and she would be miserable for hours afterwards. She was very nervous and hardly ever got a good night's sleep, and would feel so tired and wornout in the morning she could hardly get out of bed. I couldn't find any medicine that would help her at all, so she just continued to lose in weight and strength until she was hardly able to keep on her feet.

"I fully agree with her when she says Tanlac has been worth a hundred dollars a bottle to her. I don't think I ever saw anybody improve like she did after she got started taking it. Her appetite came back in a very short time, and she can now eat anything she pleases, and as much as she wants, and it never gives her any trouble at all. Her stomach seems to be in a healthy condition, and she sleeps sound, and the nervousness has left her entirely. She goes about her housework now with her old-time strength and energy, and says she is in better health generally than she has been in a long time. We are very glad to have this opportunity to recommend Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

The plot of the modern spectacular play seems to have been hatched from the stage setting.

Demobilizing a Million Women

Branch of British Government Has Big Demobilization Task.

LONDON—To "demobilize" about 1,000,000 women war workers is the task assigned to a special department of the Ministry of Labour.

One of the most difficult problems will be to satisfy a munitions worker who has been earning $-18 to $20 a week now that she is called upon to return to her former task as a family servant at $3 to $3.25 a week. Officials realize that this is one of the big questions connected with the reconstruction period, especially as girls and women must sacrifice some of the freedom they enjoyed as munitions workers and submit to more exacting hours. They are appealing to the workers to adjust themselves to the new order of things as best they can and be willing to make sacrifices during reconstruction as they did during the war.

Employers are being admonished to give their workers long notice of dismissal and not to discharge large numbers at one time. The Government has decided to give each war worker $4.75 a week for thirteen weeks after she stops war work, if, during that time she does not find other employment. This is the only tangible bridge the Government has been able to provide to carry the workers over the transition period.

Other means of helping the situation are to be left to the new organization in the Labour Ministry. To solve the problem of demobilizing women workers, the country has been divided into eleven districts, each with a district council, which will be in close touch with the Ministry. These councils will be composed of representatives of each town or small district in which there is a labour employment agency and the latter agencies will organize committees to care for workers in each town.

A member of the Government recently said that the most serious difficulties could be expected in the first six months of peace. There was bound to be unemployment and dissatisfaction over wages and the cost of living. He hoped a reduction of the prices of necessities would help to relieve the situation.

Amazing Serie of Robberies

What a British "Contemptible" Accomplished in New York.

Now Caught—Was in 42nd Canadian Highlanders and British Army

NEW YORK, Jan 16.—The neat and nimble young man who has been taking Christmas presents for himself from the well-to-do sections of Flatbush, Vanderveer Park and Parkville for the last month, has been caught. He said he was Samuel Jackson, 29, a discharged sergeant from the Canadian army, and, according to the police, the acknowledged field marshal in a series of burglaries that have made "the wilds of Flatbush" something more than a mere phrase.

The investigation of the police showed he was one of the fastest workers who ever undertook to storm Brooklyn. The police have evidence that he engineered thirty-five robberies in as many days and that he relieved Flatbushers of $30,000 worth of valuables.

The prisoner at one time was a movie actor. It was while following this vocation that he became familar with the topography of farthest Brooklyn.

A British "Contemptible"

But the photoplays were only one feel in the thriller he furnished to the police. He had done his best acting, they learned, while he held the Boche back in the latter's frantic effort to make kultur contagious, incidentally reaping shrapnel wounds, citations and non-commissioned chevrons in his two enlistments, and doing his bit in another way in jail between enlistments.

His first enlistment was at the out break of the war, Jackson stating with a reminiscent smile that he was one of the early British contemptibles." He was readily accepted August 11, 1914, at a British recruiting station in Bridgeport, Conn., as he had already had a term in the British army in India, where he landed at 16 after escaping from the rooftree in this country. After going to England and being assigned to the Durham Light Infantry in the British expeditionary forces he participated in the first battle of the Marne, and, as he said himself, he "was in about everything after that."

This meant that he went through enough scraps to be gassed and wounded seriously in five different places, including a slash on the face from chin to left ear which a German gave him in No Man's Land.

The British army gave him a discharge on the ground of physical disability on December 2, 1915, and he filled in a little time with the American Steam Gauge Company in Boston as an engineer.

Sent to Jail.

The lure of the films drew him early in 1916 to the Vitagraph Company, which generally uses Flatbush locations. But palling of acting—of perhaps of Parkville—he drifted up to Boston toward the end of 1916 and there started an ambitious series of robberies among carefully selected homes in Brooklyn, Mass. But the police frowned upon his spirit of enterprise, and February 5, 1917, he was sentenced to an indeterminate sentence, not exceeding five years, for entering the wrong house.

The police here discovered this when they compared his fingerprints with those of a George Baker though Jackson had at first denied he ever was arrested before. But it was established that Jackson, alias Baker, was released from the Concord Penitentiary in April, 1918, on his offer to enlist again, having found No Man's Land more attractive than jail.

Joined 42nd Highlanders

True to his promise, he joined the Forty-second Battalion Royal Highlanders Canadians, and reached the other side in time to help Foch in June. But gas and bullets proved rather wearing on him, and November 22 he arrived here, discharged because of wounds again, but by no means decrepit.

Then, three weeks before Christmas began the series of robberies which mystified the police landed many Vanderveer Park family heirlooms in pawnshops, from which the police rescued a large number. Some of the depredations, it was said, were committed while the families were at home, but the robber never used a gun or was otherwise rough in his work.

In fact his slight build and mild air not only made it hard to believe that Jackson was this burglar but caused the police at first to be sceptical of his ever having taken part in any engagement more savage than a tea fight. But to prove his claim that he had twice been cited for bravery, Jackson displayed a certificate of discharge dated November 9, 1918, and exhibited the following assortment of wounds—a gash in the left knee, required a steel plate; shrapnel abrasions on both thighs, a bayonet cut on the stomach and the scar on his face.

Jackson was arrested outside a hotel on Forty-Seventh street.

The young man who marries an heiress has a soft snap— unless he marries a Boston gril, when he has a cold snap.

"As a Menace to Canada It May Be Dismissed From Our Minds," Senator Robertson Tells the Members of the Canadian Club —Describes the Plans of the Government for Repatriation.

PROBLEMS FOR CANADA

An interesting exposition of the government's plans for the demobilization and repatriation of Canada's army, coupled with an optimistic survey of the future of the Dominion, and a timely reference to the Bolsheviki menace—which, by the way he said, was not a menace at all—were features of the address given by Senator Gideon D. Robertson, Minister of Labour in the Dominion Government, in his address before the members of the Canadian Club, at their dinner at the Empress Hotel last evening. A large and representative attendance of members gave the Minister an attentive hearing, and followed his address with keen enjoyment.

Senator Robertson is not an orator. He makes no pretence to being one, but he is a pleasing and easy speaker, who has his facts systematically arranged and who quietly and effectively presents them. He held the attention and interest of his audience last evening without the slightest difficulty and his address was thoroughly enjoyed.

The Minister of Labour did not confine his remarks to the work of his own Department. On the contrary his speech consisted largely of a rapid sketching of the plans of the Government for bringing back Canada's soldiers and of finding employment for them and for the civilian unemployed. Much of what he said has already been given publicity through the advertisements of the Repatriation Committee and through the news columns of the press, but it is safe to say that the members of the Canadian Club went away with a more comprehensive idea of the proposals of reconstruction than they had before hearing Senator Robert-

In his opening remarks, Senator Robertson said that he was not there to defend or apologize for anything the government of which he was a member had done. He was not a politician, and as a labour man who would probably retire from his public position as soon as the problems of repatriation were concluded, he felt that he should testify that he had been convinced that the members of the government had been actuated by one motive, and that was to do what they thought would be of the greatest benefit towards winning the war.

To-Day's Problems.

Speaking of the great problems that are now before the Canadian people, and which were almost as important as those that had to be faced during the war, Senator Robertson pointed out that there were 280,000 members of the C. E. F. to bring home, as well as 50,000 soldiers' dependents, and 20,000 Canadian members of the Royal Aair Force. In addition, 200,000 civilians who had been engaged in war industries were affected by the coming of peace. Altogether, therefore, there were 600,000 people, or about one in every fifteen of Canadas population whose employment was affected as a result of the closing of the war. Such conditions could not be met without disturbing the industrial equilibrium of the country to some extent.

Figures given by Senator Robertson as to the civilians, who had been thrown out of work, were encouraging. Many of these had been absorbed by other industries, in fact more than the government had been expecting, although reports received by the government showed that there 15,000 who had been employed on November 11th, were without positions on Jan. 1st.

The government appreciated, he said, the assistance given by many manufacturers, who were, he said, operating without profit or even at a loss, and providing employment. He thought that the workmen of Canada had earned such consideration, and that anything an employer could do to tide his men over the winter was deserved by the employees. The workingmen of Canada, he said, had made great sacrifices; their increased wages had not kept pace with the cost of living, but they had been loyal and faithful, and in no belligerent country had there been so little industrial disturbance or unrest as in

WAR BETWEEN DEMOCRACY AND TERRORISM WILL BE DECIDED AT THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR CONGRESS

(By Lowell Mellett—United Press Service.)

PARIS, January 17.—The war between democracy and terrorism will be largely decided at the International Labour and Socialist Congress in Berne this month, declared Arthur Henderson, British Labour leader, in an interview with the United Press to-day. Henderson explained this was the reason the Government had tacitly supported the proposal of British Labour, that the German and Russian delegates be admitted to the Congress.

"The failure of the world's democracies is at stake," he said. "The issue is democracy versus terrorism. The western world cannot long delay its choice.

SPEAKING FOR ORGANIZED SOCIETY.

"We speak for organized society in its most real sense. We are prepared to stand between civilization and chaos. Now that the governments are beginning to realize that fact there is little likelihood of them reverting to the old idea that we (labour men) are to be feared."

Henderson said the Allied Labourites and Socialists have drawn a programme of their principles, the reforms they desire, etc., which they are ready now to present to the representatives of the Central Powers and neutral nations. The Berne Congress will differ from the Peace Conference in this respect, since the Allies will be occupied at Paris for months in reaching an agreement before presenting their programme to the Central Powers.

DR. KARL LEIBKNECHT AND ROSA LUXEMBOURG KILLED

Canadian Press:

BERLIN, Jan. 17.—Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the Spartacan leader, has been shot and killed while trying to escape while he was being taken to prison. Rosa Luxembourg, Dr. Liebknecht's lieutenant, was also shot dead after being beaten into unconsciousness by the crowd at Berlin.

When it became known yesterday that Dr. Liebknecht and Rosa Luxembourg were at the Hotel Eden in the western part of the city, the crowd rapidly congregated and stormed the hotel lobby. Both were spirited to a side entrance, but the mob forestalled the attempt of the troops to save Fraulein Luxembourg. She was beaten into insensibility and then thrown into an automobile by the crowd, which intended to take her to prison. A few blocks down the street the machine was halted by a second mob, and when the presence of Fraulein Luxembourg became known, a man jumped on the running board of the car and shot her through the head. The body was dragged from the automobile and thrown into the canal. In the meantime Dr. Liebknecht was hurried into another automobile by officers and troops and the car was headed for Moabit prison. While going through Tiergarten, the machine was halted by a punctured tire. While waiting Dr. Liebknecht made an attempt to escape and was shot dead by soldiers. When Dr. Liebknecht was arrested at the home of a relative in Mannheimer Strass yesterday morning he stoutly denied his identity. After being escorted to the Eden hotel he was searched and his monogram K.L., was discovered on his shirt.

History of Liebknecht.

Karl Paul August Friedrich Liebknecht was born at Leipsic, in 1871, graduated from university there and was a Socialist all his life, and radical opponent of Germany's militaristic policies. Several years before the war he charged that Krupps and many military officers conspired to bring on war with France. The names of the Kaiser and the Crown Prince were mentioned, and several officers convicted of receiving bribes. When the great war opened he refused to serve in the army and spent many months in prison. Finally he served with a German engineer battalion in Russia, and was injured there. He continued his attacks against German militarism, however, and in May, 1916, was arrested and sentenced to four years' imprisonment. He was released in October 24, 1918, and took a prominent part in the destruction of the German monarchy, but would not enter or recognize the Ebert government. Under his leadership the Spartacans (radicals) developed a reign of terror in Berlin for about three weeks, but were defeated by loyal troops, which finally effected his arrest. Rosa Luxembourg was formerly principal editor of the Socialist "Vorwaerts," and also opposed the war from the start. She was reputed to be more anarchistic than Liebknecht, and even opposed calling of Constituent Assembly, which her fellow leader favoured.

Officers Arrested.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 17. — Officers commanding troops escorting Dr. Liebknecht and Rosa Luxembourg, when these two radical leaders were killed, have been provisionally arrested, according to a Berlin despatch received here, which adds that all persons implicated in the incident will be severely punished.

Press Comment.

BERLIN, Jan. 17.—Virtually the entire Berlin press regards the fate of Dr. Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxembourg, Spartacan leaders, as having "something of divine justice in it," as the Tages Zeitung phrases it.

Of Dr. Leibknecht the Lokal Anseiger says: "He brought his fate upon himself." Continuing its comment the newspaper says: "The murder of Rosa Luxembourg shows how tremendous must have been the indignation ing occupied almost entirely by solwhich has seized the people of Berlin as a result of criminal activities of the Spartacans. Such summary jjudgments have ordinarily been foreign to the German manner of thinking."

The press in general, deplores the lynching of Rosa Luxembourg, but declares she felt a victim to the basest passions which she herself had awakened.

"Die Freiheit" alone tries to lay responsibility upon the government.

Revolution Revived.

Special to The Examiner:

ZURICH, Jan. 17.—The Spartacan revolution has been revived on a large scale in Berlin and several of the provinces, following the death of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luembourg, it was reported in a despatch received here to-day.

The government is expected to take violent measures in an effort to suppress the new disorders.

Five new divisions of government troops have arrived in Berlin.

OLYMPIC ARRIVES

DISEMBARKATION

Canadian Press:

HALIFAX, Jan. 17.—The transport "Olympic," with seven thousand returning soldiers aboard, including two thousand for Ontario points, arrived off the harbour at daybreak and docked about 10.30, amid an enthusiastic welcome from ships and crowds on the waterfront. Ontario men disembarked about noon and proceeded to trains All were scheduled to leave before six this evening. Scenes at the reception to the "Olympic" here to-day rivalled the rousing send-off given these men, according to cables, at Southampton, England, when they left. Scores of immigration, military and naval officials swarmed up the gangways as soon as the vessel tied up, and the work of disembarkation of the big "ship's company" proceeded quickly. Half an hour later the men for the Maritime Provinces, which were the first to disembark, started down the gangway to the shore, and were quickly seized by their admiring friends.

Serious Fire on George Street

Pool Room and Tobacco Store of Yeates Bros. Badly Damaged.

A fire started in Yeotes' pool-room last night at 8 o'clock and did about $4,500 damage to the cigars, cigarettes and matches stored there. Two ladies were having their shoes shined in the shoe shine parlour and noticed the pungent odour of smoke. The proprietors and the employees of the establishment used to the smell of tobacco smoke did not detect the adour but soon wreaths of smoke issuing from the top of the glass back of the shoe shine parlour and the smoke coming through the floor of the bowling alley, which is on the second floor, told that there was a fire in the building some place. Two youngsters at once ran off to ring the fire alarm box at the corner of Charlotte and George streets, box 25, and in a short time the fire brigade was on the scene. Only the quick action of Chief Grange and his men prevented a disastrous fire which might have wiped out the whole block. The storeroom in which the fire originated is just south of the shoe shine parlour, and was formerly an entrance to the flats above.

Cause of Fire.

The cause of the fire is not known, but in the opinion of the Fire Chief the rats had gnawed at the large supply of matches which ignited setting fire to the shelves of tobacco which reached nearly to the roof. The double flooring between the bowling alley on the second floor and the storeroom held the fire and this had to be cut away before the blaze could be extinguished. No water was used, but the motor-driven chemical engine was used to good effect, and no loss was suffered through damage by water. In the opinion of the Chief the big motor paid for itself by last night's performance, because if the water had got among the valuable stock the damage would have been more than the red demon cost the city. To the man on the street the fire was not very spectacular, mainly consisting of smoke which issued from every window and door in the building. If the fire had occurred at one or two o'clock in the morning, it might have been as bad as the fire which destroyed the Neill and Bradburn buildings last winter. The people living upstairs would have found it very difficult to find their way downstairs on account of the smoke, and it might not only have resulted in a heavy financial loss, but what is more, a loss of life.

The stock was insured for $5,000, which will not cover loss, although all the tobacco was not burned. Much of it was badly damaged by smoke, and will be unable to command its marketable value. The police were early on the scene and prevented the carrying away of some of the stock, which was thrown in all directions by the firemen.

Twenty thousand Montenegrins are said to have participated in an uprising against the Serbians.

Commissioner Richards Delivers Opening Shot in the Red Shield Drive

Campaign Officially Opens on Sunday Next—How the Money Will Be Spent—Caring for the Dependents of Soldiers.

SOCIAL SERVICE

As many as could be accommodated in Peterborough's modest Council Chamber listened to a stirring appeal last night delivered by the head of the Salvation Army in Canada, Commissioner Richards, of Toronto. He spoke in the interests of the Million Dollar Red Shield Drive, which opens on Sunday next.

Mr. J. A Aylmer acted as chairman of the meeting until the arrival of His Worship Mayor George Duncan, who attended the banquet given in honour of Senator Gideon Robertson, Minister of Labour, at the Canadian Club last night.

Commissioner Richards was at once called upon to speak, and explained that he came to tell the citizens of Peterborough why this money was needed and how it would be spent. The money is going to be spent,

(1) Across the seas.
(2) For returned soldiers.
(3) For hostels for returned men.
(4) For social service.

SOLDIERS OF CANADA.

The soldiers of Canada, although they have ceased fighting, still are in need of hot drinks and small comforts which are not included in the army's commissariat. Then there will be some confusion perhaps when the thousands upon thousands of Canadian, English, Irish and Scotch are landed upon English soil after the armistice is signed. This again is a fertile field for work for the Salvation Army.

Those soldiers who return to Canada will also be cared for. After a man has been in the army for some time and then suddenly returns to civil life, he is not as efficient and perhaps not able to do the same work that he did before the declaration of war. Prices of foodstuffs and everything else is high, as everybody knows, and a soldier especially, who has a wife and family, cannot afford to be idle until some job which he is suited to turns up. It will be the duty of the Salvation Army to see that these families do not want and that the breadwinner is able as soon as possible to secure suitable employment.

Hostels Needed.

Hostels are not only needed for returned men but for the orphans of those Canadians who have given their life to the cause of freedom on the battlefield. There will be many returned soldiers who, on arriving in this country, will have no place to go. These men will also be cared for by the Salvation Army Red Shield Fund.

Social service is a very broad field in this country, and requires diplomatic handling. No matter whether a child is illegitimate or not, it is an asset to the country, and if properly cared for, will grow up a useful and ambitious citizen. The distinguished speaker then quoted figures showing the number of illegitimate children that are at present in this country. In New Zealand a woman gets $25 for every child, legitimats or illegitimate, and in this country the Salvation Army are doing a good work by establishing maternity hospitals throughout the country in centres larger and smaller than Peterborough, and nurses in the pay of the Salvation Army are going around taking care of mothers. In this unlift work the Salvation Army is peculiarly adapted because it has been organized for a long time, and is accustomed to work among people who will need this kind of work most. The Salvation Army is not an organization which has sprung up since the war began to meet the needs of the men overseas, but has been doing this kind of work in Canada ever since the Army was established in this country, in 1885.

Commissioner Richards also spoke of the economy with which the money will be handled. The Army, it is well known, can make 100 cents look like a dollar and sometimes $1.50 and not 67c more or less.

In Sympathy.

Mayor Duncan said that he was in sympathy with the Salvation Army and its work, and although he is very busy at the present time, he will do all possible to make the campaign a succes. He always thought that a maternity hospital was needed in the city.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer suggested that the Barnardo Home as a maternity hospital. It was already furnished, and could be used at very little expense.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin, local secretary of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, stated that coming in contact with returning soldiers he found that they always spoke a good word for the work of the Salvation Army overseas. The teams for the campaign were well organized, and the campaign in this city should be a great success.

Ald. J. J. Turner, Mrs. K. Morris, ex-Mayor William Buller, Mr. Harry Rush, Mr. Walter Stocker, Mr. Hughson Johnstone, Mr. William Stock and Mr. D. M. Minnecola also spoke well of the Salvation Army's work.

Brigadier Morris, field secretary of the Salvation Army in Canada East, and Colonel Morehen, divisional commander for Eastern Ontario, accompanied Commissioner Richards to the city.

More School Accommodation

New School Will be Built to Replace the South Central School.

At a special meeting of the Board of Education, held last night to discuss increased accommodation for the pupils in the South Central school district, a committee, consisting of A. A. Fowler (chairman), Mr. J. M. Greene, Mr. E. G. Patterson and Dr. F. C. Neal, was appointed to look into the matter with power to visit other cities to obtain ideas on modern school buildings.

It was conceded that steps must be taken immediately, as the present accommodation is inadequate and unsatisfactory. To relieve the South Central situation a fourteen room school is required at once, and to provide for the future growth of that particular section a twenty room school appeared to be the only plan.

No definite plans were made as to the architecture of the building, but School Inspector A. Mowat was instructed to find out whether a three-storey school is permissable. This, with a sprinkler system, could be made safe from a fire standpoint.

Lieut. Jackson Arrives Home

Peterboro Man Was a Prisoner in Germany for Four Months.

Lieut. "Bill" Jackson, well known Peterborough member of the Royal Air Force, who has been a prisoner in German for 4 months, arrived home from overseas early this morning, and is receiving a warm welcome from his many friends. Lieut. Jackson, who is a son of Mr. Jas. Jackson, 212 Perry street, left for overseas in February of last year, having qualified as an airman, and in the eleven months that have elapsed has had his share of exciting adventures, culminating in his being shot down in a fight with two German planes. In the "scrap" Lieut. Jackson's machine was disabled and he "crashed," landing near the German front line, and he was made a prisoner. The two planes with which he had been fighting collided, and both came down, the German airmen escaping by means of parachutes. Lieut. Jackson is looking little the worse for his adventures, although he does not speak too highly of his treatment at the hands of the Germans.

PTE. F. ANDERSON IS ON HIS WAY HOME

Mrs. Mary Anderson has received word that her son, Pte. Fred Anderson, is on his way home from overseas. Pte. Anderson received three wounds on the 16th day of August, 1918, and was unfortunate enough to fall again on the field of battle on the 16th day of August, 1917, just one year after his first casualty, when he received a bad wound in his neck.

His mother, Mrs. Anderson, has been very ill with the influenza, but is now recovering and is looking forward to Pte. Anderson's return home.

She has another son overseas, who is yet in England.

INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION

Annual Meeting Was Held This Afternoon—Mr. R. Denne Was Re-elected President of the Board.

THE REPORTS

That success begets enthusiasm and attracts co-operation was indicated by the comparatively large attendance at the annual meeting of the directors of the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition in the Council Chamber this afternoon.

President R. Denne's introductory comment was to the effect that "It was not like this in the olden days." The deepest interest manifested and the untiring efforts of the past year was an earnest of the future.

A Special Canvass.

Mr. Denne recalled the days when the late Robert Leary had to drum up a quorum over the telephone. Last year public spirited citizens had contributed $1764.50 in a special canvass to meet the expenditure occasioned by the permanent improvements. The present overdraft was unavoidable, the President stated, for the reason that repairs so long deferred simply could not be longer put off.

MR. R. DENNE.

Mr. Denne thanked the members for their untiring work and the special efforts of last year.

"The only trouble I see is that the exhibitors go in for the prizes rather than for the purpose of improving the stock," said Mr. Denne. From an educational standpoint it would be better if less attention were paid to the prizes for it does not pay the exhibitors to prepare their stock for the paltry prizes that are offered. At that we should endeavor to increase our prize list and make it as attractive as we can. I believe, however, that the advertisement that comes from the mere winning of prizes of producing first class stock, should appeal to more exhibitors. We could get some of the big exhibitors, like Graham of Claremont, Richardson and others, who are attracted by the advertisement of winning stock competitions rather than the prizes offered."

Had a Deficit.

Mr. Denne stated that the Board had a deficit of $2100 in the bank. "If the boys stay together as they did in the past we can get into line with the biggest fairs in the country, London, Ottawa and Toronto. If we could get Lakefield and Keene to cooperate we would have one of the best fairs in Ontario, especially from an educational standpoint. I would like to see a horse barn with accommodation for 150 horses built as soon as possible."

Among those present were Messrs. Roseborough, R. Denne, W. J. Cox, W. Reg. Turner, John Gillespie, R. M. Glover, Wm. Steinkrauss, J. O. Ball, David Jordan, J. A. Storey,

TRANSPORT CONDITIONS

The Toronto Saturday Night suggests that newspapers should desist from criticizing the conditions under which Canadian soldiers are being brought home from overseas, pointing out that many of the hardships are unavoidable and that some of the difficulty is caused by the fact that discipline has somewhat relaxed and that with the end of the war the men have got out of hand. There is a good deal of truth in this diagnosis of the situation and many of the complaints made by the returning soldiers are trivial and should be taken up with the proverbial grain of salt. On the other hand there is enough in the charges that are being made and in the evidence of soldiers in the Northland inquiry to spur the Government on to deal with this matter in a more vigorous manner than has hitherto been done. It is easily understood that in view of the large number of troops to be transported it is not possible to bring them home under the most ideal conditions, but at the same time it should be possible to relieve some of the grievances. For one thing it should be possible to secure conducting officers who will not feel it beneath their dignity to personally visit the quarters of the rank and file and ascertain at first hand if everything is being done for the comfort of the returning soldiers. Some of the conducting officers, to their credit be it said, have not worried about the etiquette of the case, but have satisfied themselves that the conditions were as pleasant as the circumstances would allow and, as a result there has not been the same complaints in regards to the transports where they have been in command as have come from other ships where the officers in charge have failed to show a similar interest.

THE MINISTER'S ADDRESS.

The chief feature of the address given by Senator G. D. Robertson, Minister of Labour, before the Canadian Club last night outside of his description of the government's demobilization and repatriation plans, was his declaration that there was no danger of the Bolshevik policy gaining a hold in Canada. The Minister of Labour remarked that he did not care a snap of his fingers about the movement that has caused such terrible conditions in Russia. Senator Robertson should know the Labour men of Canada—he is one of them—and his emphatic statement that there is no likelihood of the infection spreading in Canada, is of great importance. The press of this country, the Minister of Militia argued, could do a great work by showing just what the results would be of adopting a policy such as has been carried out by the Bolsheviks. Probably the newspapers have not said as much on the subject as they might because they felt that the people of Canada were clear-headed and sane and were therefore able to see for themselves what Bolshevism really meant. The Minister made it clear that there was not the slightest danger of the returned soldiers lending themselves to the support of a Bolshevik policy. Men who had fought for liberty and freedom in France, who had suffered in the cause of democracy, were not coming back to overturn that liberty in Canada. And that is what Bolshevism would mean.

Senator Robertson's reference to the movement that has turned Russia into a chaotic condition, was probably the most interesting portion of his address.

THE NEW LIQUOR SYSTEM

The announcement that the Ontario Government proposes to take over the sale of liquor in the province will be received with satisfaction. The system at present in vogue has been a farce and satisfied nobody except the seven vendors who found in it a veritable gold mine. The Government would have done well to have profited by the example of other provinces and kept the sale of liquor in its own hands from the moment the Ontario Temperance Act was introduced. The Government has reached the conclusion that methods provided for dispensing liquors that may be lawfully sold for medicinal and other purposes through licensed vendors have not proved satisfactory' said Sir Wm. Hearst in announcing new plan and it must be admitted that the Premier has not over-stated the case. Through Government handling of liquor private gain will, of course, be eliminated and the authorities will be able to more closely check the sale of liquor throughout the province. In this way if proper methods are adopted many of the abuses possible under the old system should be eliminated. At any rate, the person for whom liquor has been prescribed by a doctor will have the satisfaction of knowing that he will be getting a purer article and that he is not being robbed by profiteering vendors.

The legislature that is to be introduced at the next session might contain some changes to protect the physicians of the province. In this regard the Kingston Standard remarks with much truth:

Certainly some alteration will have to be made in the Temperance Act which has made members of an honored and invaluable profession referred to in some cases as "bar tenders." It is not reasonable that doctors should be placed in the position they are. We all know the influences which can be brought to bear upon them, and it is wrong that these worries should be added to the existing harrassing and hard work of attending to the sick.

"It would appear that there is an additional source of annoyance and worry. The reputable physicians of Toronto were subjected to constant hounding by unscrupulous "whiskey spotters," and in many instances almost compelled to commit a breach of the Ontario Temperance Act. Was changed by Dr. H. W. Burgess, president-elect at the annual meeting of the East York Provincial Conservative Association. Dr. Burgess stated that while he had exercised unusual care in prescribing liquor for medicinal use, and had repeatedly declined to issue prescriptions for this purpose, he had been persistently hounded by "whiskey spotters" who upon being refused, resorted to numerous tactics in an effort to induce him to "strain a point." Dr. Burgess said that he was not the only physician in the city who had been besieged by "spotters." There were others, who were doing their utmost to discourage the issuing of whiskey prescriptions, who resented the action of these men.

"This amounts to a positive outrage and should not be allowed. It is bad enough for doctors to have to put up with supplying liquor to the public by their prescriptions, but it is infinitely worse that they should have the chance of their reputations and practices being ruined by tete spotters. We trust that at the coming session of the Ontario Legislature provision will be made by which doctors will be relieved from duties which are not fair to them."

LAND FOR SOLDIERS

Sir Wilfrod Laurier's criticism of the Government's land settlement scheme in his speech at Ottawa might have thought to be vigorous but the current issue of "Turner's Weekly," edited by the blind hero of the Princess Pats goes far beyond the Liberal leader in condemning the authorities at Ottawa for their dilly-dallying with this important question.

Says Turner's:—

"In the matter of providing land for returned soldiers who wish to take up farming, the government of Canada has been woefully negligent. While the soldiers were away on the country's business in Europe, it was the least that the Canadian Government could have done to provide for them when they returned. It is four and a half years since the first Canadians left for overseas, and it was generally conceded that some of them would return. Within a year from the time war broke out, it was apparent, or should have been apparent, to any leading Canadian public man that the end of the war would bring forth great problems in connection with re-establishing the returning soldiers in civil life. Has the Government successfully grappled with the problem which confronted it? The answer is a large "NO." Commissions were established and investigations made, and officials appointed and salaries paid, and much talk talked, and printer's ink wasted, and promises made, but at the end of four and a half years of war, with thousands of men back and thousands more on their way, the problem of settling them on the land is about as much advanced as it was the day Lord Kitchener went into partnership with Sir Sam Hughes. Some soldiers have received land, but it is safe to say that scarcely one received any better deal in his transaction with the Dominion Government than if he had been the most benighted immigrant from the lowest slum in the dirtiest city in the most uncivilized country in the world. There is plenty of land in Canada: It is tied up in various degrees of tightness by the easy-going governments of old, but it is possible to loosen some of it from the mass for the use of the returned men. Men who ought to be shoving a plough or nursing pigs to market strength are twiddling their thumbs and getting brain decay. The fault lies with the Government of Canada. Their land policy in relation to returned men has been inefficient, fiddling, paltry and stupid. Returned men in greater and greater numbers are clamoring for land. If the members of the government are so incompetent that they cannot grapple successfully with this problem, they should call a garbage wagon and have themselves removed to the nuisance ground."

LIEUT-COL. MARY MURRAY,
Of the Salvation Army Forces in Belgium. (Daughter of the late Gen. Murray of the British army.) She was decorated for bravery in the South African war, and her care of British troops. The war broke out August 14th, 1914, and ten days afterwards she was on the field in France superintending installation of the Salvation Army work in the field.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Canada's soldiers in Germany are said to be getting a taste of real luxury during their watch on the Rhine. Rather poor training for conditions on the transports when they start home.

Turner's Weekly suggests that a good job for a totally incapacitated soldier would be taking a moving picture of the hard Settlement Board because he would only have to snap his camera about once every two years.

The Sinn Feiners have appointed three delegates to the peace confrence. It has not been stated how they hope to get them admitted.

To Give Spies Due Penalty

French Prisoners and Civic Officials Who Were Betrayed.

PARIS, Jan. 17. —Captain Salangon, attached to the fourth court-martial, has had Toque and Marguet; the Laon spies and denouncers, brought to Paris. The police are on the track of several other men and women who at Laon and Fournies acted as spies for the German General Staff or denounced to the military police of the German army a number of French soldiers stranded within the German lines after the retreat from Charleroi.

Aided by a woman named Verlon, the German detective, Emil Thomas, delivered up to seventh army court-martial a terrible list of victims. Thanks to these infamous agents, forty Frenchmen were shot and several hundreds sentenced to penal servitude for life and lesser terms down to ten years. The Laon third court-martial, of which Captain Richter, a Magistrate of Mulhouse, was an officer, reporter, accuser and interpreter, alone pronounced the capital sentence on five soldiers and nine civilians. The sentences were carried out at the Laon citadel, the victims being buried where they fell.

BARRIE'S SALE OF FURS

This Season's Fur and Fur garments are a triumph of the Furriers' Art. Perfect Skins, Faultless Workmanship and Clever Fashioning, combine to make Our Stock the VERY BEST.

You can have any Fur Garment in Our Stock at a Special Price during this sale; and IT WILL PAY anyone to BUY NOW as good Furs last many years and prices are advancing on all kinds of Fur Skins.

We do not quote discounts or write fervid statements, but for REAL VALUES in Furs we guarantee that none of like quality or style can be procured at as low prices. We leave you to be the judge as you look about and compare among the countless sale values you are solicited to inspect.

Many lines of Furs will be much HIGHER NEXT SEASON; and we know of none that will be lower. This is owing to the increased demamd—the fact that there is a meager supply on hand—a new European demand, and a growing scarcity of Fur bearing animals.

This sale, therefore, means much to those who buy wisely NOW.

We ask all to spend wisely now—keep men and women at work and they too can spend. So start and keep things going—an endless chain. Guarantee prosperity.

That OUR RESPONSIBILITY in this matter be fully met, we are going to let the question of profits go for the next two months, that our Fur factory be kept going to full capacity and at the same wage scale as has prevailed. We want to do our bit to help over the transition period. This is the only way we can accomplish it, and we ask support from all branches of industry to a similar end—the maintenance of wages.

Some Solid Reasons for Business Confidence

and the Object Underlying This Sale

Farming

There are many armies to be fed—armies of the Allies, of the Prisoners, of the Disabled; there are multitudes of destitute in the war-stricken zones, throughout Central Europe, in the Balkans, in Turkey and in Russia.

It will be a year at least, maybe two, before the supply of food will meet the world's demand.

Clothing

Every returned soldier will require a new outfit of clothing. The demobilized armies of Great Britain, France and Belgium also will need to be clothed.

Moreover, there will be a great demand on the part of the civilian population for all articles of leather, wool, cotton and silk. There is hardly any article of temporary or permanent use in which we have not more or less stinted ourselves during the past four years.

For the period of demobilization, estimated to take three years, the clothing and textile and all allied industries will be working to capacity.

Building

More houses are urgently needed in Canada. Owing to the scarcity of materials and labour, depreciation of buildings and machinery has gone on almost unchecked. It must be made good.

In England the need is even more acute. And in Northern France and Belgium, in Serbia and parts of Russia everything will have to be rebuilt from the ground up. They will look to us for supplies.

General Manufacturing

Ships are needed, railroad engines and cars, electrical traction, and every means of transportation. All coal mining machinery and the machinery of the lace, silk and textile industries of Belgium and Northern France must be replaced. One authority estimates that there is a need of one million plows in France alone, and other agricultural machinery in proportion.

The steel industries, the machinery factories, the lumber yards, the shipyards will be called upon to the limit of their output.

Immigration

Authorities prophesy a gradually increasing immigration. Our almost unlimited natural resources only need men to develop the wealth that lies waiting.

We have the materials, we shall get the men.

The needs of Canada and Europe guarantee prosperity, if we live up to our opportunities and responsibilities.

No Bolshevism Among Canucks

Discipline Is As Good To-day As Before Armistice Was Signed, Says Officer.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

HALIFAX, Jan. 17.—"There is no Bolshevism among Canadian troops," declared an officer who has had considerable opportunity for studying Dominion overseas soldiers. Discipline to-day is as good as it was before the armistice was signed. There was no drunkeness and no looting, and while Canada's army on the Rhine wants to get home as soon as possible, there is no discontent or chafing.

Manuel's Friends Becoming Active

Royalists Gain Strength in Portugal—Despatch From Madrid.

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The possibility of the Royalists seizing the present opportunity to restore the monarchy in Portugal was forecasted in an agency despatch from Madrid to-day. It was stated that the fight between the Democrats and Republicans for control of the Government has weakened their position to such an extent that the Royalists have a chance for a successful coup d'etat.

Peterboro Pastor Elected to Board

TORONTO, Jan. 17.—At the Baptist Convention being held here, Rev. Dougald Brown, of Peterborough, was elected to fill one of the vacancies on the Western Mission Board.

Baptist Ministers' Low Pay.

"There are a number of pastors of the Church receiving less than $1,000 a year, and the high cost of living is threatening to overwhelm us," was a declaration made at the Convention.

Mr. Harvey Stillwell, treasurer of the Home Missions, presented the board's annual financial statement: In 1916-17 the total regular receipts were $56,602.38, and during 1617-18 they were $56,387.03.

The bank balance on October 1, 1917, showed a sum of $8,697.62, and on October 1, 1918, $5,613.38.

The gross expenses for last year exceeded by $10,800 those of the previous year.

Junior Church Hockey League

Three Games Were Played Last Evening.

The Junior Church Hockey League played their first games last night when Trinity and All Saints' teams were unable to break a 3-3 tie. The second game was between George Street Church and St. Paul's, with the Methodists on the big end of an 8-3 score.

In the third game Murray Street team was kalsomined by the Knox

THE BELMONT CLUB DANCE.

Will be Held in Empress Hotel — Linton's Orchestra for Dancing.

Invitations have been issued for the Belmont Club's ninth annual dance, to be held Friday, January 24th, in the Empress Hotel. Extensive preparations are being made by members of the Executive, and everything promises to be a success.

The main attraction of the evening will be the music, provided by Linton's Orchestra, of Toronto, consisting of saxaphone, violin, piano and drums.

The Club dances have always been very popular, but the coming event is most eagerly looked forward to.

Ten Killed When Molasses Explodes

Tank Containing Two Million Gallons Blows up in Boston

BOSTON, Jan. 16.—At least ten persons are known to have been killed by the explosion of a storage tank of molasses in the yard of the Purity Distilling Company near Cutts Wharf off Commercial street. The explosion blew away two of the supporting pillars of the Atlantic avenue elevated railway structure, demolished several buildings, blew an electric freight car off the track, overturned a number of heavily loaded trucks and killed about a dozen horses.

The men who were killed were teamsters, and employes of the city who were at work in the city street department yard adjoining the electric freight yard where the explosion occurred.

The molasses spread over the street to a depth of two or three inches. Many of those killed or injured were covered with molasses and could not be readily identified.

The tank contained 2,000,000 gallons of molasses. There was not the usual great detonation accompanying such blasts, but rather a low rumbling sound more like an earthquake. Fragments of the great tank were thrown into the air, buildings in the neighborhood crumbled as though the underpinnings had been pulled away from them and scores of people in the various buildings were buried in the ruins, some dead and others badly injured.

The top of the tank first shot into the air and then the walls collapsed. The force of the explosion knocked over the fire boat house of Engine 47. One of the firemen was blown into the harbor. Two others were pinned in the ruins and a fourth was not accounted for. A nearby tenement house fell in. Two women and a man were taken from the ruins, all injured.

Thirty-five persons were removed to hospitals and many others received medical attention and were sent to their homes.

A One-Legged Gets in Army

One leg is all J. H. Clements possesses. One leg is all he had when the United States went to war with Germany. One leg is all Clements had at the battle of Chateau Thierry, yet he went through that fight and several others with the 55th Railway Engineers.

Back in the spring of 1917, Albert Stinchcomb, who had two good legs, bet Clements $25 that Clements couldn't get into the army. Clements applied to the Adjutant General for induction into the Railway Engineers, as he had been a storekeeper for the Grand Trunk since he had lost a limb in the railway service. The Adjutant-General order his induction and the draft board after a cursory examination passed the one-legged man.

Passed as a Joke.

The surgeon at the training camp passed him as a "joke" and said that he would be turned back at the embarkation port. But luck was with Clements and he sailed away to France to be assigned to the Sixth French army. He built railways in the Toul sector.

Then the Sixth Army was rushed to Chateau Thierry one night last July to check the German drive. Clements marched 15 miles through the bud and was in the fighting from July 15 to 21. He was on the "chow" detail one night when a German shell dropped on the field kitchen. Six out of ten of the detail didn't take any "chow" up front that night.

"I was lucky enough to get back to the front with some grub for the boys, so they made me a corporal," Clements explained simply.

Good Foot Causes Trouble.

It was the corporal's good leg that caused the trouble and forced his discharge. On the morning of July 21 he went on sick call to see if he couldn't get a pair of lighter shoes, as his trench boots had chafed his good foot until he could hardly walk. The corporal exhibited the wounded member

"Let's see the other," the surgeon demanded.

"It's all right."

"Well, I want to see it, anyway," the surgeon insisted.

"How did you get here with that?" the amazed surgeon blurted as he looked at the artificial limb. About that time a German bomb dropped. Another and another followed. The corporal was slightly wounded. But the surgeon came through unscathed and ordered Corporal Clements back to "God's country."

The corporal's home is at Mishawaka, Ind.

Contracts For 160,000 Homes

How British Government Is Assisting in the Reconstruction of National Industrial Life.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Regarding the Government's building programme of 500,000 houses, Sir Eric Geddes declared here that 160,000 had already been arranged for on financial terms agreeable both to the local authorities and the Local Government Board, and it was hoped that the remaining 340,000 would come along very fast. It was anticipated that these houses would cause a great deal of competition in subsidiary trades, such as house furnishing and fitting, and Sir Eric hoped that they would be able to assist in the reconstruction of national industrial life.

To Bring Home the Americans

Vessels Which Have Been Conveying Canadian Soldiers to Transport Yanks in February.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Nine British vessels with a total carrying capacity of 27,750 men have been placed at the disposal of the American Government for the transportation of troops home, it was announced here yesterday by British Ministry of Shipping. These vessels are the Caronia, Adriatic, Minnekahda, Celtic, Canopic, Saronia, Pannonia, Cedric and Orca.

In addition it is announced, the Olympic, Mauretania and Aquitania, three of the largest British troop ships, will bring additional American troops home during February.

The Olympic and Aquitania have been employed in bringing home Canadian troops during the past months.

JAIL-BREAKER CAUGHT.

PORT HOPE, Jan. 17.—Wm. Robertson, who is charged with having assaulted Mr and Mrs. McLaughlin at the Cobourg Jail and then escaped from custody, was arrested in Montreal. He has been taken to Toronto on a charge of desertion from the army, and upon his release will be sent to Cobourg to stand trial for assault and jail-breaking.

Cutting Off Omsk Supplies

Difficulties Facing Kolchak's Government Being Vigorously Met

OMSK, Jan. 17.—Undismayed by the staggering problems facing them the All-Russian Government here is seeking constructively to organize the nation on a solid and lasting foundation. Admiral Kolchak, the head of the Government, is surrounded by many young Ministers, and they are working day and night to bring about harmony.

Much attention is being given now to the movement of freight across Siberia from Vladivostok. Transportation by way of Lake Baikal has virtually ceased. There is much congestion and disorganization due to lack of materials. East of Irkutsk forty freight trains are stalled. To improve the situation the Government has inaugurated a weekly express service from Vladivostok, the cars being guarded to prevent intrusion by the forces of Gen. Semenoff, the leader in the Chita district, who has been in controversy with Admiral Kolchak over questions of authority.

A brick manufacturer needs the earth in his business.

Chronic bargain hunters soon begin to look shopworn.

Movement to Have Eligible Women Voters in Peterboro Placed on the Voters' List

Local Council of Women Will Take the Matter Up—A Resolution Respecting the International Council.

Active propaganda to get all women who are entitled to vote on the voters' list for the Municipal elections for 1920 will be spread by the Local Council of Women during the coming year, and a comprehensive summary of the qualifications required will be published by the Local Council presently. Mrs. W. R. Morris, the convenor of the Taxation committee, stated that a large number of women who could have qualified for the recent election did not do so.

At the monthly meeting of the Local Council held yesterday, at which the above decision was made, a letter was read from the Victorian Order of Nurses asking the assistance of the Council in the proposed visit of Miss Gibbs to address the nurses and high schools in the interests of the Victorian Order. A committee of the President, Secretary and President of the Graduate Nurses Society was appointed to make further inquiries into the matter.

The President of the Council, Mrs. Harstone, gave an interesting account of the proceedings of the meeting of the executive of the National Council, held recently in Kingston. After a short summary touching on the great amount of discussion held, she paid a tribute to the hospitality of the Kingston hostesses.

In Abeyance.

One of the main features in the agenda of the meeting at Kingston, and which took up considerable time, was the discussion of the attitude of the International Council of Women towards the enemy countries. It was proven beyond any doubt that the International Council has been in abeyance absolutely since the war broke out, and that the attitude of the International Council of Women had been the same exactly as that of any of the other great International Associations.

The resolution adopted at the end of the discussion was simply a re-affirmation of the resolution passed at the annual meeting of the National Council in Brantford in May. The fact, however, of the signing of the armistice, has made it possible to be more explicit in stating the resolution.

The Resolution.

The resolution passed unanimously, was as follows:

"Whereas the object of the National Council of Women is to further the application of the Golden Rule to society, custom and law, and whereas the German nation has often broken the Golden Rule and expressed no repentance for the action; therefore it is not possible to contemplate that Germany and her allies, while they are unrepentant should continue to participate in the work of a society whose object is to secure the enforcement of a law they have broken, and therefore this Executive committee requests the President of the International Council, after peace is signed, to call a meeting of allied and neutral countries only, since the National Council of Women is unwilling to be associated with the women of the Councils of Germany and her allies."

New Executive.

Another matter which took some time to dispose of, was a resolution from the Toronto Local Council, asking that the sub-executive of the National Council be asked to secure from the State Attorney of New York a statement of the finding in regard to the monies collected by Lord and Lady Aberdeen in aid of child welfare work in Ireland, and that this statement be published in Canadian press. Also if these charges are proved to be of such a character as to discredit the work of Lord and Lady Aberdeen, the National Council should take action in the findings of this report.

A Letter.

The evidence submitted by the Executive, however, was sufficient to absolutely dispel any suspicion of wrongdoing on the parts of Lord and Lady Aberdeen, and the President of the Council, bringing in the above resolution, expressed herself as absolutely satisfied as to its correctness and withdrew the resolution completely. The following letter to Mrs. Cumming, is one of several which helped to make the matter clear:

Dear Mrs. Cumming,—I have interviewed the Hon. Edwin P. Kelsoe, Asst. District Attorney of New York, who is in charge of the investigation of certain charitable organizations collecting money in and about the city of New York during the past year and was informed that his office had no evidence whatever in any way impairing the honour and integrity of Lord and Lady Aberdeen on either of them, and that the stopping of their collections did not reflect in any way upon their personal integrity and that all activities of a similar nature were stopped at the same time. I am authorized to make this statement of Mr. Kelsoe and you may have the same verified by telegraph if desired.

Minister of Labour

Canada. The Canadian workers, as a whole, he said, had been absolutely loyal in spite of the temptation that the conditions offered of exacting many demands from employers.

Demobilization.

Senator Robertson went into the governments demobilization plans at length, referring to the difficulty there was in finding a satisfactory plan that would be pleasing to all concerned. The Minister of Militia he said received an average of four hundred letters a day from people who wanted husbands or sons brought home as soon as possible. It was manifestly impossible to accede to these requests. Canada had been divided into twenty-two disposal sections, and it was planned to bring the men home in units of 500 to these areas. The railway transportation was the biggest problem, and 30,000 men a month would be the maximum number that could be handled in view of the heavy demands that would be made upon the facilities of the railways.

Senator Robertson explained the work of the Soldiers' Civil Reestablishment Department, in dealing with the returned soldier, referring to the hospital work and vocational training. The pensions system was described, and the war gratuity announced a short time ago, was explained. It was felt that it was not possible to immediately make a civilian out of a soldier, by merely changing his clothes, and accordingly the war gratuity plan had been provided to give him a chance to accommodate himself once more in civil life and to find employment.

The Employment Question.

It would be a physical impossibility to find positions for all of Canada's soldiers if they were home at the present time. But the soldiers could not all be brought back until next September at least, and in the meantime the position is not as bad as might have been expected, because the number of civilians unemployed is not as large as was anticipated. The majority of workmen had tried to be frugal, the speaker said, and would be in a position to endure unemployment for a year or two. There would be, he felt sure, a large quantity of work in the spring. Canada's foreign trade was bound to develop; the building of public works by the Dominion and Provincial governments and by municipalities would take care of most of the surplus labour and the orders already given by the government and Canadian Pacific Railways for rolling stock and materials, would provide employment for 40,000 men for nine months. The land settlement scheme of the government as well as the grant to aid in the building of houses, were referred to by the speaker as helping to solve the problem, while the building of highways would be of great assistance. Eastern Ontario would build 520 miles of road at a total cost of $9,000,000.

Bolshevikism.

Senator Robertson dealt briefly but emphatically with the question of Bolshevism. "Don't let that worry you," he said. "There was no danger of the policy gaining a hold in Canada he said, and as a menace to the country it might be dismissed from our minds. "No man can be a believer in Bolshevikism who owns a stake in the country," remarked Senator Robertson, "and eighty per cent. of our people are in this position." The history of the strike in Winnipeg and Vancouver last year were referred to by the speaker as proof that there was no danger of the spread of the Lenine-Trotsky doctrines. As for the returned soldiers, men who had fought and suffered for liberty overseas were not coming back to Canada to tear down and destroy that liberty here.

The speaker remarked that there would not for a year or two be any great immigration into Canada, nor was it desired until conditions were restored to normal. However, the number of soldiers to be brought home, plus their dependents, and plus the number of civilians thrown out of employment as a result of the end of the war, was not as great as the average number of immigrants who were absorbed yearly in Canada before the war. With the opening of Spring, he thought that there would be no difficulty in absorbing every returned soldier and every unemployed civilian.

In referring to the pensions, Senator Robertson said that the government was criticized because they were not considered high enough; as all other assistance given to the soldiers had been criticized for the same reason. He agreed that they were not as high as they should be but remarked that Canada had to purchase a suit of clothes that would fit the pocket—pointing out that the allowances and pensions had been made as adequate as the financial situation would permit.

Col. Walker expressed the thanks of the Canadian Club to the Minister of Labour for his instructive address after which the singing of the National Anthem concluded a most enjoyable and profitable function.

...eel Plate Order At a Higher Price

... Sheets Have Been Offered at Lower Figures.

There seems to be a tendency in ...e very well informed quarters to ...k that the U.S. Steel Corporation was rather premature in announcing a reduction in prices which ...luded a three-cent base price for ...te. To show that it does not consider the situation it is worth noting ...t the biggest plate order sent from ...ada since the war ceased was ...ced inside the last week or so at a ...e price of 3.75, which is well in ...ance not only of the Corporation ... price, but of the fixed price of ... that ruled during thelife of the ...S. War Industries Board. Certain ... that the three-cent price has not ...ulated business.

...ther lines continue to make con...ions in prices. Sheets, for instance, are at a seven-cent mark from the ware houses. Sheet mills, both in U. S. and Canada, are out looking for business. Many mills were taken off sheets during the war, and are now returning from the rolling of plate or other war material. Their books are empty and any business offering is keenly pursued. The tube situation also shows a tendency to weaken, although it must be said that these reductions are more in the form of voluntary action on the part of the dealers, because the stocks all over Canada and the States are still very low and it will take a considerable time to replenish them.

Dealers in machine tools report some enquiries that will mean immediate business, and they are all satisfied that there is a good turnover not far ahead. The making of adjustments with the U.S. Government following the cancellation of war contracts is going to take up considerable time, and this work has hardly been brought under way yet. It seems likely that the office for attending to this work will be located in Toronto as that place is the logical centre for the majority of the shell shops that have been handling these orders.

The scrap metal market remains disorganized and stagnant. There are no sales being made. Sellers who have any material feel inclined to hold out for better terms, but dealers at present are well stocked and are not inclined to raise the rather low levels to which they have recently marked the price list.—"Canadian Machinery."

"AT HOME" WAS A SUCCESS.

The "At Home" held last evening by the West-End Knitting Club in St. Alphonsus Lyceum proved a big success, the amount realized being $85, which will be devoted for a charitable purpose. The ladies' prize, which was donated by Miss J. McCarthy, was won by Mrs. W. Young. The gentlemen's prize, donated by Mr. A. Murty, was won by Mr. T. Cronin.

A man isn't necessarily crooked because he is unable to keep his face straight.

PSALM-SINGING HUN STRAFFERS.

The Salvation Army has proved that the so-called "Psalm-singer" is not lacking in courage on the battlefield. Some of the bravest deeds have been performed by men who before the war did no sterner fighting than knocking the devil out of fallen and depraved beings, though sometimes that was stern enough.

Lieut.-Col. McKenzie, the Australian chaplain, who won the V.C. at Gallipoli; Pte. Fynn, of South Wales, who won the same coveted honour in France, and many others who got lesser decorations for acts of heroism in the fighting line, showed of what stuff Salvation Army soldiers are made. No wonder Sir Douglas Haig said: "I value their presence here as being one of the best influences on the moral and spiritual welfare of the troops."

Labour Spirit Strengthened By Senator Robertson's Visit

His Simple Address and Personality, With the Fact That He is a Trades Union Man Still, Kindled the Pride of Large Audience That Greeted Him at the Labour Hall Last Night.

WAS WELL RECEIVED

Labour greeted Senator Gideon D. Robertson with a crowded house last night, when, after addressing the Canadian Club at the Empress Hotel, he visited the Labour Hall and found the only vacant seat to be that which had been reserved for himself. It was a splendid meeting of members of the Trades Unions of the city and of other citizens, including quite a number of women, who tendered the Minister of Labour a very cordial reception. Incidentally this event must be accounted as another success for the Trades and Labour Council, who, after receiving an invitation from Senator Robertson to meet him prior to the Canadian Club luncheon, replied that the workingmen of the city would be deprived of the conference they desired and requested him to alter his programme to provide for an address to an open meeting of the Council. The Minister at once acquiesced in this suggestion, the fulfillment of which, it may be said, left no disappointments with either the audience or their guest. Even standing room was at a premium when Senator Robertson arrived, another proof of the awakened interest that the workingmen of Peterborough are taking in their own and in public affairs. Mr. A. J. Bolwell, president of the Trades Council, acquitted himself well as chairman, and grouped around him on the platform with the Minister were members of the Council, including the Labour aldermen.

It may be too much to assert that Senator Robertson "came, saw and conquered" the large audience, but certainly he made a deep impression, and left the feeling that the working men have at least one staunch friend in the Cabinet and also in the Upper House. In his address he touched more than one responsive chord. His advice that labour men should elect representatives from their own ranks to the Federal, Provincial and Municipal Governments coincided exactly with the opinions of apparently every person present, judging by the warm applause it evoked, and accorded with the views of the Trades Council.

Is a Union Man Himself.

Senator Robertson's personality enhanced the impression his address created. He spoke with evident sincerity and in a colloquial, man-to-man style that had none of the politician's rhetoric and posings. The fact that he had stepped up from the ranks of Labour to one of the most responsible posts in the Government struck the fancy and the pride of his audience, and called forth Mr. Joseph Begley's comment that the Minister was an example of Trades Unionism and a testimony of the ability latent in the Labour ranks. He prefaced his address with a personal reference that recounted his industrial struggles and strides to success from the time he became a telegrapher at the age of seventeen. In Qopi he became general chairman of the telegraphers' organization on the C.P.R., and was vice-president of the Canadian Brotherhood.

"I am still vice-president of the old organization," he said, "and my name still stands on the roster of the old division with which I used to work. If necessary, I could go back to that work to-morrow, for I still carry my union card."

Senator Robertson told how he had secured the semi-monthly pay day for the 170,000 railwaymen in Canada. This movement had been twice defeated in the Senate before his appointment. Sixty days after he entered the "red chamber" this measure was introduced in the Senate itself, and since January, 1918, the railway men have been enjoying their semi-monthly pay days. He recalled with satisfaction his encounter with the late Senator Hon. McKenzie Bowell, who had at first declared his opposition to the bill. After the second reading the "old man" said—"Robertson, you didn't convince me, but I won't vote against you."

The measure was thoroughly discussed in the Railway Committee, and Senator Bowell himself moved its adoption.

"I mention that to show you that if you get your representatives into the halls of government you will accomplish the things you wish. Lay the facts before the lawmakers and you will find they are not unreasonable. That has been my experience. If you could place ten Labour men in the House of Commons you would wield a great influence. It is not necessary to have a majority. Select able, sincere and honest men to explain the needs of the working people and Parliament will respect their appeals.

For one reason, most of the members began their careers as working men, and while they have drifted away they retain a regard for the old realities. I remember how Senator Bowell took pride in relating how he had worked for $8 a month as a printer. He who had been regarded as a bitter enemy of organized labour moved the adoption of that bill when it had been fully explained to him."

The Minimum Wage Question.

Mr. T. Tooms asked Senator Robertson if there was any assurance that the Government would consider the establishment of a minimum wage and an eight-hour day for all workers, two allied problems about which Labour was much concerned.

"That's a very pertinent question," the Minister replied. "The organization with which I have been connected always agitated for a minimum wage, and this was established in 1896, following a big strike on the C.P.R. We succeeded in getting a minimum then of $40 a month. I had considerable to do in getting the Canadian Railway War Board to accept the McAdoo award and its amendments. I am not sure that they fully appreciated the real significance of the amendments, but they have kept their word, and the eight-hour day went into effect for the 170,000 employees of our Canadian railways. The telegraphers have secured a minimum wage of $111 a month, but the Federal Government has no jurisdiction over the wages and hours in manufacturing plants. Those powers were vested in the provincial governments by the British North America Act. The railways hold federal charters, and this places them under the jurisdiction of the Federal Government.

Enemy Aliens in Canada.

Mr. Hugh Robertson asked Senator Robertson what the Government intended to do with enemy aliens who have been employed or interned here during the war. "We don't like them any better since the armistice," he remarked.

"Neither does the Government," replied Senator Robertson, who explained that this question was in abeyance until the Peace Conference had decided what each country would do with its enemy aliens.

"We can't do anything until Parliament meets and we receive some indication of what the Conference decides. But I may say that from the registration cards, which seemed to be more or less useless to us, I obtained the names of all the enemy aliens in Canada. If their deportation is decided I can hand these names to the Minister of Justice within fifteen minutes after the decision is made."

The postmen's troubles last year, the pension law and other matters that were obscure to some of the audience were illumined by the Senator's explanations, and at the close of the meeting he met a group of C.G.E. men to discuss a phase of the C.G.E. award, the nature of which was suggested in the statement that some employees were being laid off without any consultation of the workers' representatives.

Outlook is Good.

Senator Robertson's story of the organization that has been set up for the return of Canada's soldiers and the efforts to open up employment at once throughout the Dominion, including the appointment of a chain of employment bureaux, were interesting if not entirely new announcements.

He offered the suggestion, declaring it as a personal view, that Labour men in Canada should follow the example of the American Federation of Labour in its political policy of supporting men who were sympathetic to Labour, irrespective of party considerations, rather than adopt the plan of British labour in forming its own Labour party. In England, he said, there were many industrial centres where Labour predominated, and the country as a whole was densely populated, unlike Canada, where industrial centres are scattered, and the country is essentially agricultural. Senator Robertson appealed to the Labour men to maintain the good reputation they had won during the war as the industrial army that had supported the soldiers with less labour troubles than in any of the belligerent nations.

A vote of thanks, moved by Mr. Joseph Begley, and seconded by Mr. Wm. Stevens, was tendered Senator Robertson.

The removal of United States restrictions on flour also will extend to Canada.

A Deficit of $174.63

The financial statement presented by Secretary-Treasurer, F. J. A. Hall, for 1918 was in brief as follows:
Receipts ..... $16,717.64
Expenditure ..... 16,892.27
This report was audited and therefore accepted by the Board.

Superintendent's Report.

Mr. W. J. Cox presented the report of the superintendent, Mr. Tom Brown, who was unable to attend. He recalled the work carried out on the grounds last spring and summer and particularly acknowledged the assistance of Mr. Cook of the De Laval Co., who had placed one of the De Laval tractors at the disposal of the Board. This assistance had been invaluable.

Because of the lack of stables it was decided on a motion by Mr. Glover and Mr. Turner not to hold a Stallion and seed show next Spring but the field crop competition in wheat and oats will be continued this year.

Chaning the Dates

Mr. Denne introduced a proposal to change the fair dates from the last three to the first three days of the week. He pointed out the possibility of postponements under unfavorable weather if the fair was held on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Besides the business of the merchants would be helped and not hurt as at present.

The advantage of fitting into the fair circuit with Toronto and Oshawa, thereby securing attractions and horses, was emphasized by Mr. Glover, who was opposed to the change, but suggested that the days of the fair might the extended back into the week by adding Wednesday and making it a four day fair.

Mr. R. H. Turner argued that with the proposed change Peterboro could get attractions that at present go to Ottawa. They would stay here two or three days in the first half of the week on their way to Ottawa.

A Consideration.

Mr. Glover contended that the Saturday afternoon city crowd was a consideration that should not be lightly surrendered. "We are simply proposing to take the first days of Lindsay's week, and before we begin that movement we should take it up with Lindsay.

Mr. Harry Webber stated that Peterboro's fair falls in the week of the Ottawa and London fairs and exhibitors who might come here during the first half of the week following the Toronto Exhibition cannot remain unengaged until Peterboro's present dates in the last half of the week.

This contentious question was referred to the new Board.

Officers Elected.

Mr. Roland Denne was unanimously re-elected President, on a motion by Mr. Glover, seconded by Mr. C E. Moore.

"I don't believe that the Peterboro Exhibition would have amounted to what it has but for Mr. Denne's work and the leadership he has given the directors," said one of the members.

Mr. W. J. Cox was re-elected 1st vice-president and Mr. Albert Roberts second vice-president.

Rev. Benj. Greatrix and Rev. C. J. Phelan were made honorary directors, and as an appreciation of the De Laval Company's co-operation Mr. W. R. Breyfogle was appointed to the active directorate.

Voice of The People

Jan. 9th, 1919.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—While reading the Evening Examiner I noticed that our soldiers' wives and children are experiencing some difficulty over getting their passage home from England. Perhaps they are not worthy of any consideration.

We sincerely hope that all the men who have not taken part in this terrible war be called out first should hostilities break out again.

Our soldiers' wives and children are sure to be neglected, while we receive this criticism—she is a soldiers' wife. Make her pay for what she receives. We can't afford to assist a poor soldiers' wife. Now we soldiers' wives have to fit on our own stovepipes, chop our wood, light the fires in the morning, actually crawl around every morning, sick or well, to keep the home fires burning.

Our hero husbands, likewise, have to endure many hardships. Now, when our husbands volunteered for service overseas, every protection was promised their wives. However, some of them have not been properly treated since our hero husbands have left us.

Now, why can't the government send our husbands home at once. Perhaps we don't deserve any consideration. Now if every family lived under the same circumstances that our soldiers' wives have to, the government would certainly arrange things differently.

There is a rumour that some of the boys are being held over there for a whole year after the war. Why not send the persons who circulate this rumour over there. Perhaps they would enjoy it.

MRS. SHAW.

ARMISTICE EXTENDED.

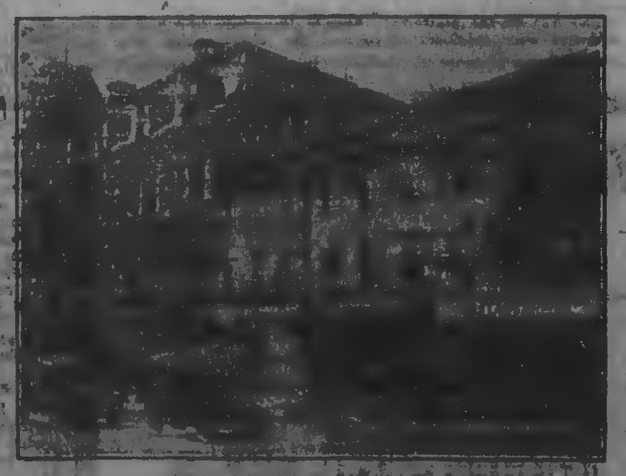
Canadian Press:

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 17.—The armistice between the Allies and Germany has been extended and an agreement to that effect was signed at Treves late Wednesday, according to a Berlin despatch.



SALVATION ARMY HOSTEL, KINGSTON.

The illustration shows the Salvation Army Hostel at Kingston. Many of the Peterborough men, while waiting discharge at No. 3 clearing depot, live at this hostel. All are firm in praise of the comfort, convenience and the extremely moderate charges. These hostels are being established as a part of the Army repatriation work all over the country. They combine the comfort of a good hotel with low cost to those who frequent it. In addition the man without a home or money is taken in and cared for. Peterborough, as a result of the Big Drive now on may have one of these hostels opened out at Peterborough.

Wants to Join Wilson's League

Attempt to Create a Stable Government in Germany.

By Frank J. Taylor.
(United Press.)

BERLIN, Jan. 17.—Foreign Minister Brockdorff Rantzau, in his first public statement to-day, called on the German people to unite that their peace representatives may offer a stable government as the country's contribution to the League of Nations.

Helmut Topfear, a Stettin merchant, has been appointed to a position in the Foreign Office. The newspapers hail this appointment as evidence of the government's new policy, as Topfear is the first merchant ever to enter that service.

President Havenstein of the Reichsbank, has been sent to the Spa at the suggestion of General Foch here. He will confer with the Allied representatives regarding their financial demands on Germany.

(Recent despatches stated that the Allies had demanded that all the gold in the Reichsbank be transferred to Frankfort, where it would be safe from the Spartacans.)

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SPORTING COMMENT

Eugene Brosseau, world's amateur welterweight boxing champion, is going to join the professional ranks. It's about time. He might just as well get the money for taking the bumps.

Commander J. K. L. Ross, the Canadian horseman, is now trying to purchase The Brook, the greatest steeplechaser in America. He has offered Owner Griffith $15,000 for him.

Dick Loadman's chances of meeting Pal Moore, Jimmy Wilde's supposed conqueror, appear brighter today. Moore's manager is now talking of allowing the Lockporter to enter the ring at a little higher weight than 120.

Bill Clymer has been deposed as manager of the Louisville club of the American Association. He is seeking the position as leader of the Toronto club. However, President McCaffery says he is not going to make the apointment before February and he prefers a playing-manager.

Bill Donovan will not be with the Detroit Tigers this season. He may manage a minor league club. Hughey Jennings is sure to lead Cobb & Co., so Navin says.

Billy Moore, the former track and football star of Princeton university, was not killed at Chateau-Thierry, as was reported. Billy's father, James R. Moore, of New York, has received word that his son is alive and well and has received the French croix de guerre.

Modern Boxers Have Less Science Now

Ever so often the question comes up as to whether the present-day boxers are as good or better than those of the long ago. There is no question that the glove men of the present time are better business men than their predecessors, for getting the money seems to interest them more than the matter of winning or losing a contest. But those whose memory goes back a few years will agree that as a rule, the modern boxers are not as clever or scientific as those who have passed away. And there are still a few of the old-time glove artists living who can prove the assertion. Some time ago Young Griffo, the famous Australian lightweight, took part in one of the New York boxing shows arranged for the benefit of the war fund. The reports of the show were all to the effect that the feature of the night was the clever boxing of Griffo, who, although now an old, white-haired men, well on to sixty years of age, showed many flashes of a boxing style that was a revelation to those who were accustomed only to the boxers of the present generation. While his strength lasted, Griffo could hit, block and get away in a manner that seemed marvelous, and yet he was woefully out of practice, not having had a glove on for many months.

Philadelphia was famous for years back for its clever lightweight boxers, and Arthur Chambers, Joe Holland, John H. Clark, Billy Tees, Owen Ziegler, Jerome Quigley, Billy Yeager, Jimmy Mitchell, Bull McCarthy, Walter Campbell and a host of others will be remembered by the light fans. Of all these, Campbell is still boxing once in a while, and last Wednesday night in his bout with Harry Walton, he made the big crowd that attended the church benefit boxing show sit up and take notice, and his clever work was a splendid exhibition of boxing such as used to be common twenty years ago, but is rarely seen to-day.

Campbell's pose, his style in leading, blocking and countering were well worth seeing, and there were few who saw the contest who did not admire it in a man of middle age, and those who could judge high class boxing skill were unanimous in their decision that there is not a local boxer to-day who can equal it.

Magistrate Frees Kenneth Randall

Hockey Player Acquitted on Charge of Receiving Stolen Goods.

TORONTO, Jan. 17.—Kenneth Randall, the well known hockey player, was acquitted in police court yesterday, on a charge of receiving stolen goods, Colonel Denison declaring that Randall had merely happened to get in with a thief. The man thus designated was Alexander Watson, formerly a clerk, but now serving a term at the Jail Farm for theft. At the last hearing of the case, he was brought from the Farm to give evidance for the Crown, but although he admitted having sold a quantity of goods to Randall at a greatly reduced rate, he denied that any arrangement existed between them. The latter statement was corroborated in the box to-day by Randall, who stated that he had selected a number of necktties, and on inquiring the price the clerk named so low a figure that he remarked that there must be some mistake. The clerk left the counter for an instant, and the arrests followed. 'I never lifted the parcel from the counter, and I would not have taken it until the matter of price had been cleared up," stated Randall.

Jockey Club, With Government Sanction, Announces Dates for 233 Days of Turf Sport Next Season.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Copies of the English Racing Calendar which have reached here brought the gratifying news that the newly elected British government has given assurance to the Jockey Club that no lack of transportation for racing next season need be feared, except insofar as it may be necessary to temporarily curtail train service in connection with the demobilization of the army. It was on the ground that transportation for spectators and horses could not be provided without interfering with England's prosecution of the war that the government requested the Jockey Club, in 1915, to suspend all meetings except a very few short ones at Newmarket, the ancient headquarters of the English turf. The request was observed not without protest, and for three years the world famous courses at Epsom, Doncaster, Ascot, Goodwood and other racing centres have been closed, the grand stands and other buildings serving as hospitals, barracks or store houses.

Acting on the assurance given by the government for the coming season, not only as to transportation, but as to a full supply of hay and oats for all race horses in training, the Jockey Club has sanctioned dates for 233 days of racing in 1919. Practically all of the important meetings suspended during the war are to be resumed and not only the Epsom Derby and Oaks but the Doncaster St. Leger, Ascot Gold Cup, Prince of Wales Stakes, Goodwood Cup, Sandown Eclipse Stakes, Liverpool Grand National Steeplechase and many other fixed events of great value and historical interest will this year be run for the first time since 1914.

The Lincoln spring meeting will open the campaign on March 24 with the Lincolnshire Handicap, and other well known events, and the sport will be continued until November 21, when the campaign is scheduled to close at Lingfield Park.

BOWLING NEWS

BOWLING NEWS.

Next week's games at the Water Street Alleys are:

Monday—West Lawn Bowlers vs. De Laval.
Tuesday—Grocers vs. High Rollers.
Wednesday—Clerks vs. Shamrocks.
Thursday—Maple Leafs vs. Eko Club.
Friday—Rex vs. East Lawn Bowlers.

KNOCK FOR GIANTS.

John McGraw talks of the great left-handed pitching staff he will have next year—maybe. It is well that McGraw can figure on pitching. His infield certainly does not offer much of a prospect, with the lame Larry Doyle, the fading Art Fletcher, and nobody knows what at first and third. Possibly Daubert will be on first base, but his legs are admittedly bad. Heine Zimmerman says he won't play any more, and the best hope is for Artie Shafer to full a doubtful comeback. As to McGraw's outfield? Well, he figures on Benny Kauff, and Dave Robertson coming back, but are they going to make such a team a championship affair?

JIMMY WILDE IS TO MEET ERTLE

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Despite his defeat by Pal Moore, the American featherweight, Jimmy Wilde, is in greater demand than ever. In addition to the prospects of another encounter with Moore and his arranged match with Johnny Ertle to take place in New York some time in April and May, he has also contracted to meet Charles Leloux, the French champion, in London next month. This is a match that should draw a record crowd. Ledoux, who is to weigh 118 pounds, is a very formidable proposition for the English "terror."

Issue For Peace Conference

Representation for the People Through the Press.

(By Fred. S. Ferguson—United Press).

PARIS, Jan. 17.—The question of representation for the people themselves through the newspaper correspondents, to-day took precedence over every other problem before the Peace Conference. The importance of this matter was evidenced by the fact that the League of Nations, the Russian situation and other vital subjects have been subordinated to arriving at an amicable solution of the manner in which the proceedings at the peace table are to be made public. President Wilson is understood to be leading the fight for one of his principal points.

There was every indication to-day that a satisfactory agreement would soon be reached between the correspondents and the peace delegates.

Italians Angered Over Thought of Modifying Claims

DOCUMENT SIGNED IN APRIL, 1917, ASKS FOR EXPANSION IN THREE CONTINENTS

Rome.—The recent speech of Leonida Bissolati, in Milan, in which the one-time Cabinet Minister expressed the opinion that Italy should not claim the Brenner Pass in the Tyrol or Dalmatia has caused an outburst of indignation in virtually the entire Italian Press. Among other things, the utterance has drawn out the publication of a document setting forth the claims Italy should make at the peace conference, which was drafted in April, 1917, by Senator Leopoldo Franchetti and signed by 3,000 persons, Senators and Deputies of all the parties, including followers of Signor Bissolati, socialists, clericals, radicals, etc., and which was presented to the Premier.

Only three copies of the document are in existence. In it the Italian claims are set forth as follows:— "In Europe, the annexation of the Irredentist lands, namely the Upper Adige, the Trentino, Gorizia, Triest, Istria Fiume and Dalmatia; possession of the natural boundaries, with a strong strategical frontier on the Austro-Hungarian side; in the Adriatic, exclusive Italian domination, with freedom of navigation for all for commercial purposes and with the cession to the peoples east of the Adriatic of the outlets to the sea necessary to their commerce."

There was also stipulated the right of Italy to construct a railway which would unite the port of Avlona with the Macedonian railway. In Africa there was claimed renewal of the recognition by England of the protocols signed in 1891 and 1894; the cession by France of the small possession of Djibouti (French Somaliland); in Libya, the rectification of the Italian boundaries of East and West Libya; in the Red Sea, possession of the Farsan Islands; in Asia and the Eastern Mediterranean, the assignment to Italy of continental Asia Minor with all its ports on the coast of Alegian and Mediterranean Seas including Alexandretta, with the Islam (Turkish?) islands which owing to their nearness to the coast, form an integral part of the continent.

MONTREAL, Jan. 17. — Before the Dominion Railway Commissioners to-day, W. T. Henderson, representing the smaller Ontario cities, against the increase in Bell Telephone rates, declared that the smaller Ontario cities were contributing a full share of the dividends earned, whereas such cities as Montreal and Toronto were not doing so.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. Fordyce Strickland left this morning for Kingston to join Captain Strickland, who arrived yesterday from overseas.

Mr. Dyson Worth sustained serious injuries about his face and a bad shaking up last evening at eight o'clock when a child who was coasting down Weller street ran into him knocking him over. The injuries received were of so serious a nature a physician was called.

Staying at the King Edward Hotel is R. R. Hall, ex-M.P., of Peterboro, one of the outstanding Laurier Liberals of the East, who contested Peterboro West for Laurier last year. Although the Union Government candidate, J. H. Burnham, was elected, Mr. Hall continued his fight for greater production and more proper conservation of the food products of the nation. It was Mr. Hall who called attention to the fact that farmers were feeding wheat to their hogs, owing to the increased value of barley and oats, and the stationary price of wheat. Mr. Hall is in Toronto on personal business. A lawyer by profession, he owns vast limits of timber in British Columbia and large tracts of land in Mexico.

WEDDING BELLS

MAXWELL—CHAPMAN
The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Chapman, Seeley's Bay, Ont., was the scene of a pretty wedding, when their only daughter, Vera Irene, was married to Morris C. Maxwell, Rev. W. H. Smith officiating. The house was prettily decorated with ferns, carnations and narcissi. The bride, who was unattended, was given away by her father, and wore a gown of ivory charmeuse and Georgette, with Brussels net veil and bandeau of orange blossoms. The wedding marches were played by Miss Jean Johnston, B.A. of Kingston. During the signing of the register, Mr. E. Findlay of Peterboro, sang. Among the many beautiful presents received by the bride was a handsome Hudson seal coat, the gift of the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell will live in Detroit.

Harden Admits Boches' Crimes

No Wonder World's Voice Is Against Nation, He Tells Readers.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—One of the bitterest and most humble specimens of German self-analysis conceivable is made by Maximilian Harden, editor of Die Zukuntt who consistently opposed Germany's career of infamy throughout the war. Harden is in the habit of speaking the truth, and he persists in the latest number of his journal, in which he says:

"We had 51 months of domination in Belgium, accompanied by the theft of raw materials, machinery and merchandise of all sorts and of $750,000,000 in money, currency and bank notes, with the violation of individual rights, forced labour, deportations, and even at the last moment with pillage and destruction of towns.

"Then there has been the devastation of Northern France, with the deliberate destruction of cathedrals, monuments, factories and fruit trees; also air bombardments, such as are contrary to the usages of war, and the torpedoing of passenger steamers and hospital ships.

"The list of our deeds comprises also secret compacts with the Irish and the Flemings, the introduction of disease zacilli by means of shells. On all sides there has been corruption, fraud, theft, the open or secret violation of all rights, while entire fields have been soaked with blood, as in the case of the Armenians.

"With all that we have been defeated. Can we wonder that not one voice is raised in favour of Germany?"

ONE OF THE BUSIEST MEN IN CAMPAIGN

Commissioner Richards Impressed With Progress of Campaign in Peterborough.

Commissioner Richards, head of the Salvation Army in Canada, who spoke in the Council Chamber last evening in the interests of the Red Shield campaign, had not included Peterborough as one of his "ports of call" for the million dollar drive, but when Adjutant Buntin, in charge of the Peterborough corps, showed him the active advertising campaign and the news that was devoted to the drive, the Commissioner said, "I'm coming to Peterborough next Thursday."

So that is how Peterborough was able to hear Commissioner Richards, one of the busiest men in Canada.

CATTLE MARKET

Features of the live stock markets this week have been the strength of the cattle market, as against weakness in the small meats. Lambs and sheep have steadily declined during the week, heavy lambs in particular becoming a heavy drag on the market, as there was practically no demand for them the latter part of the week. Even the lighter lambs failed to hold the high prices of the early part of the week.

Hogs early in the week suffered a sensational drop of about $2 per cwt. from the previous week's closing price. The reason for the sudden drop in the market was the report to the effect that the British Allied Purchasing Commission had cancelled certain contracts, and had decided on no more purchases of Canadian pork meat products for at least the next three or four months. This report was subsequently found to be "slightly exaggerated," but with sufficient truth behind it to warrant a genuine scare on the part of the big packing houses, with the result, of course, that for a day or so they were not "in the market." Nobody, in fact, knew just where they were at, and nothing in the way of a reliable quotation on hogs could be had. Finally the confusion became less confounded, and at first a quotation went out taking $2 off former prices, but this did not go far, and the market finally settled down to a basis of $17 fed and watered or $1.50 below last week.

Cattle prices throughout the week were good and strong, an active demand for all grades of butcher cattle keeping a very firm market.

Union Stock Yards—Total Receipts this week 635 cars, with 6,468 cattle, 563 calves, 6,493 hogs, and 4,546 sheep and lambs.

OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS.

Mrs. J. A. Ballantyne, Sturgeon Falls, Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitis and the doctors ordered an operation. But he would not consent to an operation and began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Since doing so he has had no need of an operation or even of a doctor as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for his cure."

The New Lloyd George Ministry Considered Strong

New Members are Credited With Plenty of Expert Knowledge and Driving Force.

Mr. Lloyd George's new Cabinet is an amazing amalgam to one who has been in touch with public affairs in Britain in the last ten years. Thus it must be remembered is a ministry for peace not for war, for reconstruction and social development at home, and it provides an indication of the new state of affairs. Socialists are included with members of the Tory aristocracy; hard-headed business men with idealists.

Taken as a whole, however, it is a very powerful team that Lloyd George has got together, with plenty of expert knowledge, driving force, and courage. Here and there is an element of compromise—which is to be expected in a coalition—but the Prime Minister has made no mistake about the big offices.

Prothero for Agriculture and Fisher for Education are the two men above all others who would have been selected by unformed nonpartisan opinion and by nonbigoted leaders on both sides in politics. Comparatively new to politics, they each know their jobs from A to Z.

F. E. Smith, the brilliant Tory lawyer, who becomes Lord Chancellor and presiding officer of the House of Lords, is only 48. He entered the House of Commons and made his first speech there a dozen years ago. Fluent, sarcastic witty, with the innocent face of the stripling, he is the infant prodigy of British politics. Since his Oxford days he has been a star turn as an orator. He is not a great lawyer, but is of fascinating personality.

Cecil Harmsworth, a younger brother of Lord Northcliffe, is a stalwart but moderate Liberal, never influenced by family opinions, extremely able, who previously had minor office. His new position as colleague of Mr. Balfour as Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs is remarkably important in view of the present state of world affairs. On him will undoubtedly fall much of the work in connection with new international arrangements. He is a journalist and an author and at the same time the capable head of a successful publishing business. His modesty and ability have made him a great favourite in the House of Commons. John Burns once described him as "the gentleman of the family."

Studied Law.

Another journalist who has become a Cabinet Minister is Sir Gordon Hewart, who, a comparatively few years ago, was a working newspaper man employed on The Manchester Guardian. He studied law, practiced at the bar, and within the last eight years has sprung into fame for his ability in winning cases. He has recently shared with Sir John Simon the biggest and most lucrative case in the English courts of justice. He is a Liberal. Apparently to balance him his colleague, the Solicitor General, rather lower in position, is Sir Earnest Pollock, an amiable Conservative lawyer.

Food Controller Roberts is a Labourite, whose sternly enthusiastic patriotism from the day war was declared, helped to steady the whole labour movement in that first trying period. But when war was imminent the labour movement, strongly opposed to war in theory, was much disturbed. At a private gathering where were many theorists and pacifists, his friends and colleagues, George Roberts showed his colours. "If there's war," he said, "I'm down the streets of Norwich, my constituency, with the Union Jack over my shoulder."

Another Labour Man.

Stephen Walsh, another labour man in the Ministry, was working as a boy in a coal mine when 10 years old. He is the idol of his Lancashire constituency. He has touched the extremist side in labour, but is a very well read man, particularly well versed in Shakespeare, and of courageously independent views. I once witnessed him make a stand in Parliament against his party. "I am a citizen before I am a trade unionist."

Lord Crawford, descendant of a famous Scotch family, has already done very well in a minor office in a Conservative minority, but is better known as a student of art and belles lettres. He is the twenty-seventh Earl of his line.

An Indian in the Ministry is a novelty. Sir S. H. Sinha as Under Secretary for India, will have sympathetic appreciation from all sides of the House of Commons. The forceful Winston Churchill as War Minister, and the capable and painstaking Austen Chamberlain as Chancellor of the Exchequer, fit harmoniously into the picture. It is a Cabinet of interesting personalities, many of them strong men. Only a strong Prime Minister would have selected them or will be able to guide them.

LIKE CARTHAGE'S FLEET.

Germany's Surrender of Vessels Finds Parallel in Pages of Livy.

LONDON.—The Bishop of Durham has found an historical precedent for the surrender of the German fleet in the pages of Livy. That ancient chronicler tells how, as an article of the peace agreement which ended the Second Punic War, Carthage had to surrender to Rome the whole of her battle fleet.

Rome, the article points out, was the great military power and Carthage was the great naval power of antiquity, just as Germany and England in modern times. Rome beat Carthage—the soldier beat the sailor. In the conflict Rome revealed an extraordinary adaptability for naval warfare, and Carthage grave internal weakness.

"The German writers," The Manchester Guardian comments, "anticipated a similar course for a war between Germany and England. They were confident that the German military mind applied to naval warfare would prove its superiority to the English, and that England, put to the test, would be proved rotten—a great illusion."

Explaining why the parallel of antiquity was deceptive, The Guardian proceeds:

"It should not too hastily be assumed that the British Navy displayed an intellectual superiority derived from long tradition which no young navy could hope to overcome. We are on safe ground if we say that the German Navy, unlike the navy of ancient Rome, showed itself singularly wooden and unadaptable. Sir David Beatty has pronounced its strategy and its tactics contemptible.

"If the comparison of Germany with Rome was false, still falser was the comparison of England with Carthage. Carthage was a narrow oligarchy resting upon a peculiarly harsh slave system, and defended by a mercenary army recruited from all the Mediterranean peoples. Carthage's lack of freedom was her weakness, and England's freedom her strength. But gentlemen of the school of Treitschke could not be expected to see that, for they despised political freedom."

An excellent salad is made of cabbages and beets with French dressing; the cabbage should be shaved and the beets thinly sliced.

An Unsuccesful Attempt at Robbery

NEW YORK, January 17. — Selecting a time when the traffic was at its height in the vicinity of the Long Island Railroad, in Brooklyn, three young bandits made an unsuccessful attempt to hold up and rob the office of the Rialto Trading Company, on the second floor of No. 1 Hanson Place, Julius Seaman, of No. 102 West Thirty-fourth street, Manhattan, was alone in the office when the men entered.

Two of the bandits leaped over the counter. One of them struck Seaman over the head with an improvised slungshot made from a piece of lead suspended from a cord as the second man aimed a revolver at him. Seaman grappled with the two men. Thereupon the one with the revolver fired a shot at him. The bullet penetrated Seaman's coat but did not lodge in his body.

Seaman continued to scream and the three men, fearing capture, fled down the stairs to the street.

They were met half way by four young men who had been eating in the restaurant on the first floor when they were attracted by the shot. The bandits succeeded in getting away, and darted up Hanson street.

Seaman telephoned to the Bergen Street Police Station, and detectives were sent out to look for the trio, but have so far failed to locate them.

GUARD THE BABY AGAINST COLDS

To guard the baby against colds nothing can equal Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are a mild laxative that will keep the little one's stomach and bowels working regularly. It is a recognized fact that where the stomach and bowels are in good order that colds will not exist; that the health of the little one will be good and that he will thrive and be happy and good-natured. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GRAIN MARKET

The export embargo on flour and garin has very effectually put the lid on whatever business there was, which was small before the embargo. The trade is now practically at a standstill, both locally and export. Efforts are being made at Ottawa to make some arrangement which will permit of some movement in business. The option markets were inactive and prices very little changed.

War Cost Germany One Hundred Billion Dollars

Said to Have Practically Equalled the Nation's Total Capital—People Spend Money Recklessly in Fear That It Will Become Worthless.

RAILWAY REVENUE GONE

AMSTERDAM—Confronted with dangers from without, Germany is internally torn by political dissension and in the grip of practical bankruptcy and starvation.

As regards her economic state, I have learned the following details from an observer who has been closely watching the course of events:

The war cost Germany some $100,000,000,000, which practically equals her total capital. Should the war loans be honoured, the interest charge would involve an increase in taxation over the last peace budget of about $3,500,000,000. The handsome surplus previously yielded by the Prussian State railways has now disappeared and the result of working the railways is more likely to be a deficit.

The financial situation is aggravated by the loss of the feeling of security. A traveller who recently returned from Berlin says that money is now worth only a day's purchase, as no one knows what may happen the following day.

With no incentive to save, the people are indulging in a wild orgy of expenditure, determined to enjoy money while they have it. This desire for immediate expenditure, I am told, is prompting many of the strikes for higher wages which are impeding the restoration of the country.

Iron Ore Sources Lost.

As evidence of the state of affairs regarding raw materials with which Germany is faced, my informant gave me the following figures about iron ore: In order to produce her annual product of some 14,000,000 tons of iron, Germany required 50,000,000 tons of ore. Her own output of ore, exclusive of that from Alsace, amounted to only about 8,000,000 tons, the difference having to be imported mainly from France, Luxemburg, Spain, Sweden, Norway, Tunis and Algeria, while about 21,000,000 tons were obtained from Alsace.

With the French and French-controlled markets closed against her, and Luxemburg probably lost to the German Customs Union, Germany will be hard put to it to find raw material to feed her furnaces. The effect is felt already at Krupp's, whose employees have been reduced from 120,000 to 10,000.

It must be remmbered that Germany's purchasing power is heavily reduced because of the fall in the mark, which now equals about one-third of its normal value.

As regards food, my informant, who followed the Food Dictator's announcements and distribution cards for a period of two years, tells me that these cards entitle people to only one-fifth of the nourishment considered necessary by scientists, and the supplies authorized by the cards are not always forthcoming.

Prior to the war Berlin consumed about 1,200,000 litres of milk per day, while the supply now available is only some 180,000 litres. Practically there has been no milk, butter, eggs or cheese for months past.

Fats Almost Unobtainable.

The sugar ration per person is now a pound and a half per month, that of potatoes about seven pounds per week, bread—and that very bad—half a pound daily, with until lately twenty grammes of fat per day. But fat has now practically disappeared.

With the Russian food supplies lost to her, with home production of food reduced to one-sixth of the previous output, and with the potato crop left to be frostbitten in the ground owing to lack of labour, it can be said that Germany's food supplies have really broken down. Her potato supply will last only a few weeks, her cereals only until February.

How this has affected the population can be gathered from the following statistics, prepared by the old regime, but only lately made available: In 1917 the mortality rate for the whole of Germany was 32 per cent. higher than for 1913, anad for only the first three-quarters of 1918, 34 per cent. higher. In towns having populations of over 15,000, deaths from tuberculosis amounted in 1913 to 40,334 and in only the first half of 1918 to 41,800. Deaths from respiratory troubles amounted in 1913 to 46,000; in 1917 to 61,000; and in only the first half of 1918 to 34,500. These statistics do not contain the very large number of deaths from the Spanish sickness.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Brian Spends the Evening With Mr. and Mrs. Roberts.

CHAPTER XC

More than ever a martyr, did Brian feel as he hate his solitary dinner; more than usual did he blame Ruth for leaving him. Rachel had prepared a delicious dinner, and he ate heartily, but even the food did not cause him to cease "grouching" and he often mumbled to himself between mouthfuls.

He had been a fool to feel at all conscience stricken because of Mollie King, when Ruth was spending her time with that man Mandel—that was the way he thought of Ruth's work-filled days—as being spent with Mandel. He wouldn't sit alone all the evening, not if he knew it!

After he had finished his dinner he read the paper for a while, then he crossed the hall and rapped at Roberts' door. They were at home and greeted him warmly. They would play a three hand game of gridge if he liked. He willingly agreed; anything to pass the time.

Brian felt a little ashamed that he had not called before and tried to atone by being as entertaining as possible. And when he put himself out he really was a most agreeable companion.

"How nice Mr Hackett was tonight," Clara Roberts said when he had left them. "I like him ever so much."

"So do I! but someway he doesn't strike me like a fellow with any great amount of pep. He's too easy-going to be much of a success, I'm afraid."

"Just because you drive yourself to death, dear, you must not be critical of those who don't. You see he has a clever wife who can earn more than most men, while you have a little goose who can only cook and keep house for you."

"That's all I want you to do! And I haven't a sneaking idea that Hacket wouldn't care if it was all she did. He's a queer fellow in some ways. He's egotistical, yet unlike most egotists, not disagreeably so. I have an idea that he cares very little for money or luxuries. He was one of the Greenwich Village set before he married, I understand, and they pride themselves on their disregard of such things."

"But don't you think he is ambitious?"

"Not particularly. I imagine Mrs. Hackett is for him—he said, you know that she was pleased when he took up typing so that he could be independent of office help. They are separated so much that many women would have found fault to have him take his evenings even for study. She has a very unselfish nature I think."

"I think so too! She is very clever. I like her so much. I only wish I could help you by earning something."

"You do help me, dear. I guess I am not very different from most men when I say I prefer to work a little harder and have you right where you are, and what you are: my little homekeeper in my home."

It was fortunate that Brian could not hear this conversation. It was too much like the thoughts surging through his brain after eh returned to his lonely apartment.

"She's a dear!" he muttered, referring to Mrs. Roberts. "He's a lucky dog to have a wife who is satisfied with what he can give her. I'm sure they are comfortable, even if they don't have things artistic," the last word he emphasized bitterly.

It was early and he sat down to read. He was in no mood to go to bed, and had no notion to lie awake another night. He would read until he was sleepy.

He became very much interested in a magazine article he was reading concerning the war in Europe. For over two years the nations on the other side of the world had been fighting; and from the very first he had been absorbed by the news. He often thought, that, had he not been married, he would have volunteered with the Canadians, although he never had mentioned it even to Ruth.

He had been so engrossed that he started when the insistant shrilling of the telephone warned him that it must have been ringing some time.

"Hello!" he said, as he took off the receiver, wondering who could be calling him at eleven o'clock at night. The clock had just struck the hour.

"Hello Brian!" it was Mollie King's gay voice, "were you asleep? I have been ringing for the longest time."

"No, I was reading."

"Reading! lend me the book. I'd like to get hold of something that would make me deaf to the telephone. Say, Brian, what's the matter? I expected you for dinner."

"I had some business to attend to—see you to-morrow night."

"Must have been awfully important! I called you three or four times. The servant answered, but I couldn't make anything from her talk. Sure you weren't out with some other girl?"

"Sure, Mollie! you know better than to say such a thing. There's no one but you and—Ruth."

"There'd better not be! I'd be horribly jealous," she laughed, then said good-night, after cautioning him not to forget to come to her the next night.

Hotel Owner's Wife Names "Jane Doe"

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—A bottle of cocktails plus an attractive young woman described as "Jane Doe," featured a divorce action brought by Mrs. Frances Marmaduke which came up before Justice Finch, of the Supreme Court, on her application for alimony and counsel fees. Before the opening chapter closed with her husband, Wilbur Marmaduke, agreeing upon an allowance of $35 a week and $250 as expenses, Mrs. Marmaduke supplied affadivits of alleged happenings in the Markwell Hotel, which was acquired recently by a corporation in which she is interested.

Mrs. Marmaduke originally asked for alimony of $150 a week, saying all of her independent wealth had gone to the defendant. She finally agreed to accept a lesser sum.

Last year, says the plaintiff, she was informed of an opportunity to buy the Markwell Hotel, of No. 290 West Forty-Ninth Street, and when the Marmaduke-Green Corporation was formed to take over the establishment, she was named president of the company. She asserts she then gave Mr. Marmaduke $5,000 to invest in the corporation but has never received any certificates of stock.

Her husband, she says, became active in the management of the hotel and soon she heard stories of his interest for a young woman stopping there.—William Hartwell, formerly an employee of the hotel, told of sending the cocktails to the young woman's room when his employer was there.

Mrs. Marmaduke declares her husband's income from the hotel ranges from $460 to $600 a week, and that he had stated the investment would net him $100,000 in profits. The couple were married in 1910 and have one child, Wilberta, four years old.

Tells How to Stop a Bad Cough

If you have a severe cough or chest cold accompanied with soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up during the night with croup and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes 1 pints of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes with such promptness, ease and certainty that it is really astonishing.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds.

There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

$5.00 for $4.00 and each Dollar worth more

GROWING! GROWING! GROWING!

What is $4.00 today? It is a question of purchasing power. What will $4.00 buy at present prices? Just over one third of a barrel of flour. Before the war flour was selling at $5.00 a barrel.

No one can say just how much more the purchasing power of the dollar will be in 1924, but you can see that the four dollars you put into War-Savings Stamps now, will grow, not only in number, but in value.

Your investment in War-Savings Stamps is like the snowball rolling down a slope. You give it a start and it grows by itself!

Your four dollars becomes five, and every dollar will be worth more.

Whether you buy one W-S.S. each day, or each week, or each month, or only two or three in a year, your money is growing, growing, GROWING all the time.

Those who cannot invest $4.00 at a time, can buy Thrift Stamps at 25 cents each. Sixteen of these on a Thrift Card will be accepted as $4.00 in exchange for a W-S.S.

A MENACE TO MANKIND

Why Not Intern Wm. Hohensollern on Devil's Island?

While Richard of the Lion Heart was in jail in Austria the Christian kings and Moslem potentates knew where to find him; but when he made his escape the Austrian monarch was justified in sending a message to the French king announcing, "the devil is loose!" The interesting feature about Richard's troubles in Austria is that he inaugurated the payment of alimony—a most pernicious custom, more degrading to womanhood than polygamy.

As long as Richard was free to make trouble there could not be any guarantee of peace in Europe.

The same was true of Napoleon I. He abdicated and was sent to Elba; a reaction followed in France, and he returned for the historic "Hundred Days," in which he caused the slaughter of about two hundred thousand men.

Not until he was lodged upon St. Helena, in the midst of the South Atlantic, was Europe safe to live in.

Similar conditions exist at this hour. Former Kaiser Wilhelm talks of returning to Potsdam. He has now formally abdicated, but he can have only one purpose in re-entering Germany, namely, to start another war.

He should be caught and turned over to the French or Belgians for trial and sentence.

Flight into Germany should be made impossible for him.

The Allies ought to issue a requisition upon the Queen of Holland for the wretch who inflicted such awful misery upon the human race. He is credited with saying he "did not feel safe in Holland." There ought not to be a place of safety for him on this earth.

The German people cannot be trusted so long as "their dear kaiser" is where they can rally round him.

They like being walked over by the military class. They would welcome a return of the Potsdam autocracy, were Wilhelm to unfurl the banner of the Hohensollerns.

Germany must be dismembered and restored to the form of a confederation of small states and free cities. Not until that is done will France be safe from another assault.

Shall Welhelm go to Devil's Island or to St. Helena? The former place gets my vote.

THE PROBLEM OF INDIA.

Details of Plans Suggested for Home Rule.

Under the scheme put forward by Mr. Montagu and Viceroy Chelmsford real power and real responsibility will for the first time be given to Indians. Its authors believe that it would be premature and unwise to subject the central government, i.e., the Government of India, to the strain of sudden changes until their effects have been tested by experience in a less vital sphere. That sphere must be sought within the provinces, and an Indian province, which often has a population of thirty or forty millions, provides a wide enough sphere—some think too wide. The provinces being thus endowed with a large measure of autonomy, a purely Indian element is to be introduced into the executive, and whilst the British governor-in-council retains his present control over the departments upon which the maintenance of peace and order must ultimately depend, Indian ministers will be entrusted with very considerable, if not at first entirely unrestricted, powers over the departments that more closely affect the daily life of the people, such as public works, sanitation, primary instruction, excise, etc., and for the exercise of those powers they will be responsible to popular assemblies in which a large majority is to be elected on the broadest possible franchise. Indians will be given definite work to do and they will be accountable to Indians for the way in which the work is done. They will thus begin to acquire at once the knowledge and experience that will enable them in the course of time to take over more and more departments until power and responsibility for the whole province is ultimately transferred to them. Decennial enquiries under the authority of the British Parliament are to decide how far and how rapidly such further transfers can be made to Indian ministers, and when the transfer is complete in the sphere of provincial governments, the time will arrive for extending a similar process to the sphere of the central government.—Asia Magazine.

SOCIALIST BROTHERLY LOVE

We have noticed that usually the socialist is stirred to black wrath at the spectacle of a man grown successful and independent. Socialism knows more about hate than any other creed that ever came into this world. It has set new standards for haters. Professing brotherly love, actually there is less of brotherly love in its creed and practice than in any other creed. At sea, the unwritten law, even among pirates, is that the crew shall stick together in the hour of peril. The idea is to save all hands from the commander down to the cook. Socialism, however, would save the cook, the potato peeler and scrubman, and let the commander and subordinate officers sink.—Montgomery Advertiser.

The Causes of Backache Can Be Remedied

Many people are apt to disregard backache as being of slight importance. This is wrong. A backache should be accepted as a very grave warning that the kidneys are not performing their proper function, and need immediate attention and assistance.

One ingredient of gin is a most beneficial agent in the toning up of the kidneys and restoring these vital organs to their normal duty of eliminating the poisons from the blood.

Gin Pills contain this ingredient, together with other tested diuretics and antiseptics, without a suggestion of alcohol.

Gin Pills are made from a formula produced from the results of scientific research, and contain only ingredients of tested and proven value.

When you feel backache coming on, be warned and take Gin Pills at once. It may save you a great deal of suffering. Should you neglect the backache or pains in the side, you stand in danger of more serious ailments, such as Sciatica, Lumbago, and Swollen Ankles and Joints, with their excruciating pains and prolonged dreaded suffering.

Gin Pills can be obtained from almost any dealer, and the price is only 50 cents a box. You buy them on a guarantee of satisfaction or your money refunded.

The makers of Gin Pills will be pleased to send you a free sample if you address your request to the National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto. Dissatisfied residents should address Na-Dru-Co., Inc., 202 Main St., Buffalo, N.Y. 193

32,000 SHELL BOXES FOR MONTREAL POOR

Montreal, Jan. 16.—The poor of the city will not be as big sufferers from the cold as was anticipated owing to the scarcity of coal and the high prices charged for it. Thanks to the generosity of the Imperial Munitions Board, 32,000 munition boxes, which were made for handling shells, but the manufacture of which was stopped on the signing of the armistice, have been given to the mayor to distribute among the poor. It is estimated that each box contains about ten feet of lumber, so that there will be available 320,000 feet of lumber, which, split up will make quite a respectable woodpile for the benefit of the poor.

REV JOB ROADHOUSE, 80 YEARS OLD.

Rev. Job Roadhouse, on Thursday celebrated the eightieth anniversary of his birth. Mr. Roadhouse is the oldest superannuated Methodist minister in the Montreal Methodist Conference, having entered the ministry in 1861; just fifty-eight years ago. He has been a resident of Kingston for a number of years, a quiet devoted Christian gentleman, who has enjoyed his rest amid happy circumstances. He is a member of Queen Street Methodist Church. A large family revere him. One of the sorrows of his later years was the death of his son fighting in France.

The Home Circle

EFFECTS OF GOOD READING

Childhood is truly the time to acquire knowledge; a healthy child is never still or idle. Every moment he is awake he is learning something. And all his knowledge of the world is as some count them, but he learns what he is told, from what he sees, most, as we guess we all do, from and from reading. Before he knows one letter from another he will look at pictures for an hour at a time and if he can find any one to read or tell him about what he sees, his tongue is as busy as his eyes. His little brain must do something to keep both members busy. What he learns from a picture book cannot be calculated.

As soon as the child is old enough to read, if he is not provided with reading material, there are only two ways for him to do, either to find books and papers for himself, or to spend his time in some other way. As what a child reads has such a power over his whole life, it is very important that parents be careful about what their children read. If a taste or desire for reading or study is not formed early in life it is probable it never will be, or if a passion for the worthless, sensational print be acquired it will be difficult to eradicate such a desire. Negligence or thoughtlessness of parents on this question is often the cause of lifelong regret.

Kill the spirit of fault-finding as you would a serpent.

In too many families the mother assumes the care of everything and her daughters are but genteel loungers in the household.

No boy or girl can ever come to be utterly bad who remembers only love and tenderness and sweetness as associated with father and mother in the old-time home.

HOME AS HEAVEN

The earthly home is only a type Our home is "a city of homes." In my Father's house are many mansions, said the homeless one of Galilee. Birds of the air had nests, foxes had holes in the ground, but he had not where to lay his head. John Howard Payne, who wrote, "Home Sweet Home," was also an exile, like his master. In a little village graveyard a tombstone to a mother has this homely epitaph: "She Made Home Happy." Sounds like Christ's "She hath done what she could." A real home is surely a happy place built on the hilltop of cheerfulness. No shadow rests there. Morning comes early; evening stays late. Life is a stormy sea, home a harbor.

A gentleman hands us the following scrap and we presume that he knows better than we do as to the statement being a truthful one. From the bit of confusion we have noticed in approaching these masculine groups we rather suspect the words are not wide of the mark. "It is certainly amusing, when one has a little leisure to approach a group of men on the sidewalk, and listen to the conversation, just to hear how carelessly profanity mixes in. This man tears off an oath and that one tips off a dozen bad words in no time. All of a sudden the loud laugh ceases and the most refined language the "group" is capable of using takes its place. Goodness what a change—and what caused it—O; nothing, only a lady was approaching them, and they have a little more respect for her than themselves. Well, well, a lady is a missionary, wherever she may be."

He who can suppress a moment's anger may prevent a day of sorrow.

A man will grant his wife any right more cheerfully than the right to be sick when he feels bad himself.

Men frequently lose interest in their homes by their failure to make them interesting and pleasant.

IMMORALITY

The following oratorical gem is said to have fallen from the lips of Hon. W. J. Bryan. It is not only a beautiful word painting of immorality but contains much food for thought:

"If the Father designs to touch with divine power the cold and pulseless heart of the buried acorn and make it burst forth from its prison walls, will He leave neglected the soul of man who was made in the image of his creator? If He so stoops to give to the rosebud, whose withered bossoms float upon the autumn breezes the sweet assurance of another springtime, will he withold the words of hope from the souls of men when the frosts of winter come? If matter, mute and inanimate, is changed by the force of nature into a multitude of forms that never die, will the spirit of man suffer annihilation after it has paid a brief visit like a royal guest to this tenement of clay?"

One wiser than Bryan has said: "And whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die," "Because I live ye shall live also," And Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live," "Because I live ye shall live, also."

"K. OF C." OFFICERS WARM IN PRAISE OF Y. M. C. A.

CAMP CUSTER, Battle Creek, Mich.—Indignant at criticism directed at the Young Men's Christian Association as an army adjunct, officers and secretaries of the Knights of Columbus are distributing propaganda furnished by such papers as the Catholic Advance praising the "Y" for its work and its neighbourly willingness to assist the Knights and Catholic chaplains. Catholic soldiers and civilians alike are warned to turn deaf ears to this attack on the "Y," "whatever may be the origin of the present criticism or what object the agitators may have in view."

At Custer the "Y" buildings have been turned over to the Catholics for mass and to Jewish Welfare workers for their services, while "K. of C." secretaries recently campaigned for funds in "Y" huts, and vice versa, during the war fund drive. Finer harmony could not possibly be asked for.

Specks Floating Before His Eyes

When specks start to float before the eyes, when everything turns black for a few seconds and you feel as if you were going to faint, you may rest assured that your liver is not working properly.

The essential thing to do in all cases where the liver is slow, lazy or torpid, is to stir it up by the use of a medicine that will clear away all the waste and poisonous matter from the system, and prevent as well as cure all the troubles arising from this accumulated mass which has collected in the system.

Keep the bowels open by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and you will have no liver trouble of any kind. They will clear away all the waste and effette matter which has collected and make the liver active and working properly.

Mr. John R. Morrison, Grand River Falls, N.S., writes: "Several months ago I was troubled with a sour stomach, and had specks floating before my eyes. I took five vials of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills which cured and cleaned my blood before any length of time. I told my friends about it and they got some, and they, too, find themselves different since they took them. I recommend your pills very highly."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

7,000 LOST, ALLEN ASSERTS.

Governor Charges 35th Division Was Ill-Equipped in Argonne.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 16.—Lack of equipment, airplanes, and transportation facilities were responsible for the heavy losses suffered by the Thirty-fifth Division in its drive against the Germans in the Argonne Forest, declared Gov. Henry J. Allen in an address at the City Auditorium.

This address, following the inaugural exercises, was the first Mr. Allen has made on his experiences on the battlefront while in the Y.M.C.A. service.

Governor Allen asserted that the Thirty-fifth suffered 7,000 casualties in the six days' battle, or half the strength of the division.

Reconstruction Problems in Clothes

Novelties Fill the Shops for Early Shoppers.

New York, January——

With the reconstruction of devastated Europe comes the reconstruction of last year's gown. Of course we will be allotted more finery now that the war is over, but the feminine world discards, to a certain extent, this privilege and decides that it is far more fashionable to be doing reconstruction work. Whether it is a gown or a village of beautiful France my lady is intensely interested.

Attractive Skirt and Blouse

The "reconstruction" of a gown is in reality quite simple. If the lines of the frock are good, some little added touch, like a collar or cuff set or some unique way of draping the skirt, will give an entire new and fresh look to the dress.

Bits of Lace.

Lace, the beautiful. There is always something about this filmy texture that bewitches even the most cautious of women. There is just a myriad of various fittle things lying about the shops ,and each individual taste may be satisfied. Vests of filet lace, to be worn with velvet dresses are at present very smart. In some cases there is a collar and cuff to match the vest but one must be very careful not to overdo with an abundance of lace. Just enough refined, but too much is inclined to look cheap, even though the lace be of the most expensive quality.

Many dainty boudoir caps are developed from this network of design, and those that are particularly pretty are those fashioned after the style of Marie Antoinette. With this period one usually associates the most feminine modes of the history of dress. And as lace is one of the most feminine trimmings, it follows that developed after the Marie Antoinette style they are just glorious delights.

Boudoir Gowns.

One of the shops is showing an attractive selection of boudior gowns, the inspiration for which was found th and fifteenth centuries. These the and fifteenth centuries. These show batiked velvets, chiffons and brocades all in colorings typical of that period. For the woman of slender grace these models are shown. For, indeed, it is quite out of quite out of the question for one of awkward stature to adopt any of the costumes.

Mrs. Lebaudy May Be Freed Without Trial For Shooting

Doctor Says Her Husband Was a Paranoiac From His Birth—Witness Before Grand Jury Expressed Belief That Shooting of Jacques Lebaudy Was Justified.

SYMPATHY WITH WIFE

WESTBURY, L.I., Jan. 16.—Cheered by the belief that she may not even be tried for the killing of her eccentric husband and by the whole-hearted sympathy offered by almost the entire county, Mrs. Jacques Lebaudy is experiencing the first days of real peace that have come into her harrowed life since the birth of her daughter, Jacqueline, nearly fifteen years ago.

Letters by the score have reached Phoenix Lodge, the Lebaudy country estate here, since the details of the tragedy on Saturday night have become public with the reason Mrs. Lebaudy has stated caused her to act—the defence of her daughter's honour. So many have arrived that they form a good sized stock by Mrs. Lebaudy's bedside. Friends say that the sight of that volume of good wishes is as cheering to the woman as the flowers and fruits with which those friends have sought to brighten her room.

The stories from the servants at the Lebaudy house and the statements of Father William F. McGennis and Dr. J. A. Kerrigan have corroborated the declaration of Mrs. Lebaudy that her daughter was in continual danger from her father. According to her lawyer, Mrs. Lebaudy was forced to use chains, barricaded doors, bodyguards, and police signals to protect her and her daughter, because it was hopeless to attempt to send the man to an asylum. While Lebaudy had been confined in hospitals for observation after some of his acts, he was always able, it was stated, to assume a business-like gravity and calmness when his reason was on trial before observers. While alienists had come to the conclusion that he was a paranoiac, their opinions never weighed in court against the apparent clearness and acuteness of mind which Lebaudy could exhibit when he was under a judicial examination.

Dr. Cleghorn, who performed the autopsy, discovered that Lebaudy's brain was abnormally small.

"I have no doubt that this man was insane from the time of his birth," Dr. Cleghorn declared later." He certainly has exhibited every symptom of paranoia during the three years that I have known him. Whenever I encountered him he had that peculiar glitter in his eyes common to insane persons.

"He was shrewd and keen on many points, it is true. Lebaudy's affliction seems to have been a very violent one."

Paranoia is described by authorities as a chronic mental disease, usually congenial and often inherited, of which systematized delusions, with or without hallucinations, are the prominent characteristics.

The dead man's estate is said to be at least $15,000,000, and may be as much as $26,000,000, a sum sufficient to start a legal battle for possession of it.

The assertion that it amounts to such figures was made by Professor G. Ph. Laumain de Lormes, of Sea Cliff, L.I., who lived in Paris when Jacques Lebaudy also lived there, and who has met him occasionally in America.

Tells of the Family.

"When I lived in Paris I knew the Lebaudy family as one knows the prominent families of the city he lives in," Mr. de Lermes said. "But there has been gerat exaggeration about the family's wealth. When the father died his estate was $40,000,000, not $75,000,000, as the newspapers say. Of that sum one-half was left to his wife, who has since died, and the four children were to share equally in the $20,000,000 remaining. Thus Jacques' inheritance was only $5,000,000, not $15,000,000.

"Jacques was the oldest of the three sons. Max, the youngest, soon spent his fortune and died. Robert, the second son, was steady going. He came to America recently, and while in Chicago donated $1,000,000 to French aviation. His fortune I am sure, is now larger even than was Jacques'.

"Jacques did not object to military service like his brother, and was honourably discharged in 1890. His marriage to Mlle. Deliere was in 1897. He was always eccentric, but I do not think he was crazy, as is made out here. He was graduated from the University of Paris. He spoke fluently in three languages—French, Spanish and English. He plays the piano very well. He also wrote verse, but none of it was for publication.

"The Lebaudy home was a palatial mansion at the avenue Velasquez and the Boulevard Malesherbes in Paris. After the father's death the three sons lived there until Max set up his own establishment. I recall that in 1903 or 1904, there was a difference between Jacques and his wife and she lived for a while in a little flat by herself."

Mr. de Lormes said that Lebaudy was forty-six years old, and that he was not a citizen of the United States.

Just before he left here to appear before the Grand Jury in Mineola Father McGinnis called on Mrs. Lebaudy.

"She is still very weak, but looks more composed to-day," he said. Little Jacqueline accompanied him to the door and the priest told her to "spend this hour in prayer." Upon returning to Westbury Father McGinnis told reporters:

"Homicide is justifiable only in two cases—when life or honour is at stake. In this case I think both life and honour were at stake. I believe Mrs. Lebaudy reasonably came to this conclusion that the lives of both herself and her child were threatened, and I believe that she was justified in taking the life of her husband."

Mrs. De Saulles and Mrs. Emily Ladenborg were again among the callers at the Lodge. From them and from other neighbours numerous offers of sympathy, advice and even financial assistance have been coming to the mother and daughter.

Two other callers were Dr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Kerrigan of Hempstead; Dr. Kerrigan has been Mrs. Lebaudy's physician in her illnesses and Mrs. Kerrigan has been a warm personal friend.

expressed pleasure over the kindly feeling toward her, and when they delicately veer the conversation around to the momentous matter of a possible trial, she says: "I'll tell nothing but the truth—but that is sufficient."

Nevertheless the extremity of her act is realized by Mrs. Lebaudy it seems.

"I can never get it from before my eyes," she told Mrs. Kerrigan. "It will haunt me as long as I live. If I had ever done anything like that except in defence of my daughter I'd never be able to live."

Women Are With Her.

After telling how she had caused tradesmen to bring food to the Lebaudy household in midwinter, when Lebaudy had allowed his family to be short of funds, and after describing a "terrible scar" she saw on Mrs. Lebaudy's arm, which Mrs. Lebaudy said was received in a quarrel with her husband fourteen years ago, Mrs. Kerrigan continued:

"All the women around here are with her. She is known as the kindest hearted woman in Westbury. She has a great compassion for injured pets. She read me somely letters today, that I would say were spontaneous offerings from the heart. One was from a former messenger boy, now in the army in Brooklyn, who said that he trembled when he read of Mr. Lebaudy's threats, for he knew him from personal experience."

Mrs. Kerrigan also related that a friend of hers, employed in a bank, had seen Lebaudy with an armful of bankbooks, one of them showing that he had opened an account in the name of Theodore Roosevelt instead of his own.

Dr. Kerrigan said: "I was often called to the house, to find that Lebaudy was gone and the women locked in their rooms, Mrs. Lebaudy in hysterics. On the Saturday after New Year's Lebaudy came into the house and announced: 'I am the Sultan. This is my harem and these are my wives, and when my favourite wife gets too old she must give her daughter to the Sultan. Give me the girl! Where is she?' Then there was a chase until the girl was locked in her room. At another time he chased Mrs. Lebaudy with a bayonet.

"Lebaudy tortured his wife continually," Dr. Kerrigan declared. "One method was to call her up on the telephone every half hour during the night to spoil her sleep. At other times when she had a guest at dinner, he would telephone her and through the power he had over her keep her talking for two hours or so.

"On one occasion he kept her, Jacqueline and the servants locked in the house for four days. To tantalize them he would knock on the door so that they would come to the front windows. Then he would hold bottles of milk and articles of food before their eyes. Then he would pour the milk upon the lawn, scatter the food around and trample upon it. Mrs. Lebaudy finally signalled to a passerby, who rescued them."

War Service Gratuity

As soon as a soldier is discharged from the army his first concern is to find a job. He may not find a job at once. During his period of unemployment he will however be in receipt of his War Service Gratuity.

Before the Armistice was signed "post discharge pay" was granted to discharged soldiers. Upon the signing of the Armistice it was felt necessary to make certain changes.

A larger grant will now be made to all who have served at the front whether discharged before or after the Armistice. Those who were on active service on the date of the Armistice, but had not served at the front, will also receive a gratuity on a higher scale.

The War Service Gratuity is given over and above any "back pay," pension or clothing allowance to which a man may be entitled.

It is given in addition to all the care, attention and service which the Government will devote in order to restore our fighting men to civil life.

To Whom Awarded.

All soldiers discharged on or after November 11th, 1918, who have served with good conduct will receive War Service Gratuity according to their class.

Soldiers discharged before November 11th, 1918, will receive War Service Gratuity only if they served at the front in any actual theatre of war.

If a soldier discharged before November 11th, 1918, did not serve in an actual theatre of war he will be entitled only to post discharge pay—according to his class on the old scale.

The Amount of the Gratuity.

The gratuity consists of a continuation of a soldier's pay, field allowance and separation allowance for a period beyond his discharge.

This period is graded according to the length and character of service.

If his service has been in part overseas his gratuity is figured on a higher scale than that of the man who has served only in Canada.

The maximum gratuity for the man who has served overseas is six months. This is given to the man whose total service amounts to three years or more.

Three months gratuity is the maximum for the man who has served in Canada only, and it is given for three years' service.

If the monthly pay and allowances for a man whose dependents have been receiving separation allowance should be less than $100 he is given $100 per month as gratuity. A part of the gratuity equal to separation allowance will be paid direct to the dependent entitled to it.

If the monthly pay and allowances for a man without such dependents should amount to less than $70.00 he is to receive $70.00 per month.

Further, every gratuity granted will amount to at least one month's pay, field allowance and separation allowance.

When Payable.

Men who have already been discharged will be given the gratuity to which they are entitled (less any "post discharge pay" they have received) after February 1st, 1919.

Application for an adjustment must be made to the paymaster of the district from which the soldier was discharged. The necessary forms to be filled out in support of each claim for adjustment may be obtained from the military headquarters of each district, from district and unit paymasters and from officers commanding militia units.

Men who are still in the service will receive their first month's gratuity immediately upon their discharge—unless they are "boarded" to receive treatment and full pay and allowances from the Department of Soldiers Civil Re-Establishment.

Men who are in the care of the Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment will get their gratuity as soon as they cease to receive full pay and allowances.

By this token Canada will record her appreciation of her soldiers and sailors—to a degree more generous than that shown by any other nation.

Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and W. S. Hart.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 15.—Miss Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, William S. Hart, Charles Chaplin and D. W. Griffith have been banded together, and the actress and actors will hereafter produce their own pictures, according to announcement made here to-day by Douglas Fairbanks. The part of Mr. Griffith, who is a producer, in the new alignment, was not definitely announced.

Mr. Fairbanks said he and his associates planned to produce their own pictures, and that they would also operate their own releasing corporation, handling films from their inception until they reached the exhibitors.

The motion picture actors, Mr. Fairbanks said, had been watching "with keen interest and some apprehension" a meeting of picture producers, which had been in progress here for several days. He said certain interests were combining and if they perfected their plans they would be able to dictate the entire future of the film business and the exhibitors would be the greatest sufferers.

SHIP SPAGETTI TO ITALY

New York, Jan. 16.—The topsy-turvydom of war has caused an upset so strange that if someone seriously suggested sending coal to Newcastle it would seem hardly more surprising. They are going to ship spaghetti to Italy. The Italian auxiliary here of the American Red Cross will soon forward with the relief ship San Giovanni sailing from New York, a large consignment of the Italian food invention, manufactured in the United States.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

"Blue Sky"

By G. VAN DE VEER REYNOLDS

"I fear I do not understand you."

She was the daintiest, loveliest little lady possible and he a manly looking, clear-eyed young man, Gerald Thorne, lawyer for a year and surprised yet glad that a case had come to him unsolicited, and gladder still that his client was a radiant vision of youth and beauty.

"Pardon me," he spoke, "the phrase is so comprehensive," I casually used it. "'Blue Sky,' Miss Wayne, precisely expresses the fact that the two mining companies named in the memoranda you have submitted to me are stock jobbing propositions of the most virulent type."

"Then the fifty thousand dollars invested in them is lost," questioned Miss Barbara Wayne anxiously.

"Absolutely and irretrievably."

A veil of sudden tearfulness crossed her clear blue eyes. She sighed and sat like one striving to recover from a shock.

"I hope you have not invested all that money in this wild-cat stock," he now said.

"Not myself, but my half-uncle and guardian has," replied Miss Wayne. "There is a man named Girard who has visited our home frequently for several months. I never liked him, but my uncle seemed to have some business with him and I did not interfere. Just today I saw something in a newspaper about the bankruptcy of refining companies. My uncle broke down, charging himself with having lost my fortune, and confessed how he had been hoodwinked. I see the futility of hoping to recover anything from the wreck. There is another matter of business I wish to refer to you," and the fair speaker removed from her handbag a roll of bills.

"There is fifty thousand dollars," she said, "which I wish to entrust to you for legitimate investment. Except sufficient to house my guardian, Mr. Wayne and myself in a modest way, that is all there is left of the fortune I inherited from my father two years ago."

"My dear young lady," exclaimed Thorne in amazement: "I cannot understand how you can unqualifiedly trust to me, a stranger."

"You are not a stranger," she gently corrected. "Among some papers of my father I found several where his attorney was named as Mr. Gregory Thorne. I naturally thought of placing my tangled affairs in his charge. From inquiries made I learned that he was dead, but that you had succeeded to his business. Surely I can trust the son of a man in whom my father had the utmost confidence."

"I thank you," bowed the young man greatly moved. "I will act in your behalf as though you were an own sister," and then after an hour's consultation, those two parted, she relieved and trustful, he feeling that a sweet entrancing presence had come into his life.

Barbara went home, full of resolve to make Robert Wayne feel that she could forgive the ruin he had caused. He was her only living relative, he was old and ill, her father had loved and trusted him. What little they had she would share with him to the last.

To her surprise as she reached home Barbara caught the echo of voices. The high-strained tones of her uncle well raised to an echoing pitch.

"You serpent! you scoundrel!" he shouted and Barbara discerned that his visitor was the swindler, Girard. "You dare, after robbing my niece of her fortune, to propose to marry her if she will give you the remnant left to work up some new nefarious scheme to rob confiding investors," and the old man ran to the fireplace, seized a heavy pair of tongs, started for his unwelcome guest, suddenly threw up his hands and fell prostrate in a fit.

Girard fled the house precipitately. Within the hour the afflicted girl knew that her uncle was in a critical condition, and that even if he recovered it would be months before he would be able to be about as formerly. In a half-dazed condition Mr. Wayne lay helpless week after week. Barbara found comfort and co-operation in the visits of young Thorne.

It was five months later when Robert Wayne felt his way slowly back to normal living. He lay on a couch in a room strange to him. The air was soft and balmy, the soothing odor of flowers filled the house. Barbara, by his side, quieted him as he burst forth in self-accusations of his part in wasting her fortune.

"That's all past, Uncle Robert," she said brightly. "Do you know where you are? In the sunny South, right on the ocean and this pretty bungalow is ours, and beyond it acres and acres that are daily growing in value. A friend invested my little all in this place, knowing of its prospective boom, and we will never want. The doctor said you needed blue sky." He groaned and winced. "Oh, real blue sky, and health and air, and forgetfulness of the past and hope for future. See."

Barbara drew up the shade. Through the open window space Robert Wayne viewed a panorama of fair vernal beauty.

"And we are going to make you happy," she continued.

"We," he questioned.

"Yes. Oh, so much has happened since—since the old life. There be is now," as a welcome footstep sounded, "Uncle Robert—my husband, Gerald Thorne."

SEA PORT IN WAR TIME.

Strange Sights, Tremendous Bustle, and Unusual Restrictions.

Nothing is altogether "as usual." In the first place, the war has brought about a radical change in the shipping of the port, the lighting of the port, and the habits of the people of the port. The liners, the tramps, the Government tugs, and the hundred and one other kinds of craft that come alongside the quays, for instance, can surely hardly know themselves, in their new guise. For they have changed both their masters and their externalities. No longer are they distinguished by "house flags" or by "blue peters" or red or yellow or any other kind of distinctive colorings. Their funnels or their hulls are no longer blue or red or green or black, or "half and half," as the case used to be, and even the Plimsoll line seems to be inconspicuous. But all alike have undergone an overhauling and repainting, in an effort to remove the telltale signs of ownership, and have been reduced to a common level of uniformity peculiarly suited to these democratic times.

But there are some strange exceptions to the common rule of drab uniformity. Color still lingers on them. Perhaps "linger" is not quite the right word. It has a fluid quality. It appears to have run in a variegated mess from funnel to deck or from deck to hull, to have spilled itself over everything in wanton irresponsible riot, in order to play a droll trick with the human eyesight. Camouflage! The bows of the ship are inextricably mixed up with the waist or stern. It is difficult at a distance to tell where she begins or ends, whether she is two ships or one, or whether she is going north or south. Alongside her are two leviathans of the sea. Only their names, now almost obliterated by the uniform coating of battleship grey, tell the story of their former glory as palatial ocean liners. Troopships! Guns protrude from her upper decks fore and aft. Men in khaki pour out through the sides, line up on the overhead quay in thousands, and, forming fours, march off to the waiting trains.

Outside, off shore, a procession of ships goes ceaselessly on. Small ships mostly, but one and all pursuing a certain well-defined course. Sometimes they are in groups, sometimes scattered and independent. Sometimes they draw up in the roads, as if awaiting a signal. A "blimp" flies seaward and hovers over them, and a couple of seaplanes return inland from a scouting trip. On the horizon line there is a smudge of smoke. A streak of white foam lips the bow of a tiny moving speck, which resolves itself into a low hull and a row of funnels. A T. B. D., or torpedo boat destroyer, darts up with astonishing suddenness, and swinging round, leads the waiting convoy away in the direction of warring France.

If one looks at dusk, for the customary light which marks the shoals in the offing, as likely as not it will fail to put in an appearance. Or a light suspiciously like it will begin to wink or to stare at one from some other point of the compass. The pierhead of the sea front is in darkness, and as one looks in the direction of the long and graceful sweep of shore line, the familiar objects which dot it begin to vanish from view. Instead of the long row of lights that used to pick out the front, and turn it into a scene of entrancing interest, the houses lose their outlines, and in their place a solid wall, of formless black. Not a light is to be seen. "Lights Out" is the universal order.

The people of the port chafe under the restrictions. But there is no complaint, no open rebellion; only a silent loyalty with set lips and a stout heart, awaiting the dawn which will bring mankind a welcome relief and a nobler future.—Christian Science Monitor.

British Chivalry at Mons.

Who shall tell the story of chivalry that has made Mons to a Briton the most sacred soil the world holds? Perhaps some poet will breathe it into the English tongue. Perhaps some sculptor may raise a monument there to Thomas Atkins, his face set doggedly to death, slowly giving way to overwhelming numbers, faint with wounds, pallid with pain, but resolved with [illegible] for the present let patriotic Americans, who love courage and truth, set about to purge our school books of the unworthy aspersions upon British arms they now contain, and let the passages that deal with Britain lead with the matchless story of the retreat from Mons.

As the German envoys signed the armistice, the British army entered Mons again. It is one of the dramas of God.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Admiral Keyes.

Admiral Keyes, of the Dover patrol, was present at the siege of Pekin in 1900. He was then a lieutenant and naval A.D.C. to Gen. Sir Alfred Gaselee, commandant of the British force, and in that capacity took part in the famous march to the relief of the Legations. The British were the first to effect an entrance to the Chinese capital, which they did by the watergate under the city wall. Besides Admiral Keyes, there were present two naval officers whose names have become famous during the war just ended, Admirals Jellicoe and Beatty.

AND TICKLING SENSATION IN THE THROAT.

This trouble is most distressing, and is caused from a cold that has settled in the throat.

How many people have lost a good night's sleep by that nasty, tickling, irritating sensation in the throat?

The dry, hard cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs and barks, combined with the lung healing virtues of the world-famous Norway pine tree, will give almost instant relief in all cases of this nature.

Mrs. G. C. Routley, Bright, Ont., writes: — "I take great pleasure in writing you of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

For several weeks I was troubled with a severe cold, and a tickling in the throat. I tried numerous remedies, but found no relief until I used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I had heard so much about, and on taking one bottle got instant relief. I highly recommend it to those who need a quick cure."

So great has been the success of "Dr. Wood's" in curing coughs, colds, bronchitis, etc., it is only natural that many imitations have been placed on the market. The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 35c. and 50c. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

British Manufacturers Are Now Fully Prepared For Peace Time Problems

GREAT BRITAIN has been at work reconstructing its vast industrial war plant for the purpose of peace for a great many months. The ministry of reconstruction was established long before the end of the war was in sight and under the administration of Dr. Addison is now an effective machine. The primary incentive of British manufacturers in the past four years, next to producing the sinews for overthrowing Germany in the field, has been to gird themselves for meeting German trade competition more effectively in the future.

Probably the war has destroyed forever John Bull's habit of refusing to make for himself anything he could buy on comfortable terms abroad. He is determined henceforth to be his own general provider so far as British resources permit. A few days ago Frederick G. Kellaway, M.P., Under Secretary in the Ministry of Munitions, speaking before the Industrial Reconstruction Council in London, delivered a striking address on the British mid-war preparation to break what have hitherto been German monopolies in this market.

"The war revealed with pitiless accuracy," said Mr. Kellaway, "the defects of the British industrial system. Many of these defects have now been overcome with the consequence that the United Kingdom is now first in the world in almost every sphere of industrial effort. Among the industries in which Britain will no longer be content to allow the Germans to be the cocks of the walk are the electrical trade high speed, ferro chrome, tungsten, spelter machine tools, magneto engines for aircraft, scientific and optical glasses, needles for the manufacture of hosiery and toys.

"In most of these lines Germany enjoyed practically a monopoly in the British market."

Mr. Kellaway did not deal with one point as to which I think American industry ought to make a prompt note, namely, the effort of the whole manufacturing world to induce labor to join hands in two cardinal directions—cheapening the cost of production and the abandonment of all customs designed to restrict the output.

The man who says that he never had an opportunity probably would not recognize one if he saw it.

NERVES ARE EXHAUSTED

When you have frequent headaches, feel discouraged and down-hearted, cannot rest and sleep well, and find appetite fickle and digestion bad, you may know that the nerves are in bad condition. Don't wait for these symptoms to become chronic but start in early with the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and head off disaster.

Negro troops from Louisiana have a linguistic advantage over other American soldiers. Many of them through living in sections where French is still spoken, are more or less familiar with the language when they get to France. But they have their difficulties nevertheless. "It's dis way," explained one. "Ah talk French purfectly, but not de kind dey talk in his country. You see, Ah learned French from mah fathah—de pure, classical, ole New Orleans French—and dey don't speak dat kind ovah heah."—Argonaut.

The Leader of them all

COAL RESTRICTIONS.

In Olden Days Contributors to the Smoke Nuisance Were Hanged.

The present-day restrictions with regard to the use of coal would have seemed very mild to our ancestors. There is no doubt that the use of what used to be called "sea-coal" to distinguish it from charcoal, has had its drawbacks.

Many look forward to the time when there will be no more smoky chimneys in Britain, when the atmosphere of London will be as clean as it must have been in the days of Good Queen Bess, and when a new building will not be begrimed with soot almost as soon as it is built.

In the reign of Edward I. the inhabitants of London petitioned the King against the growing use of coal, declaring that it was "a public nuisance, corrupting the air with its stink and smoke, to the great detriment of their health." Whereupon the King prohibited its use, offenders to be punished for a first offence by a fine, and for a second to have their kilns and furnaces destroyed.

The practice of using coal was at length made a capital offence, and a man was tried, condemned, and hanged for burning coal in London.

In those days the population of the country probably did not exceed four or five millions, and wood was plentiful and cheap from the vast forests that covered tens of thousands of square miles where now are great towns.—Tit-Bits.

If Thin, Nervous, Run Down, Depressed, This Will Help!

The wear and strain of life has tended in recent years to produce nervous debility in a large percentage of our population.

Thousands are affected with a feeling they can't exactly describe. They are always tired and droopy, lack ambition, have poor appetite, look pale and suffer from depressing headaches and insomnia.

This condition is full of peril. It is the stepping stone to invalidism, the beginning of a shattered constitution.

We advise everyone in this condition to take a good medicine at once and try to get well while yet there is time.

Probably no better advice can be given than to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which have become famous in restoring the sick to good health. A general toning up of the system at once takes place. The whole body is vitalized by rich and purer blood. The appetite is increased, food is digested and naturally strength rapidly increases. Headaches go because the bowels are regulated and all wastes are carried off.

There is no experiment about using Dr. Hamilton's Pills because they certainly restore the sick, as a trial will quickly prove. Just as good for the old as the young, and suitable to the needs of women and children. This grand family medicine should be in every home.

KINGS THAT REMAIN.

Hold Thrones Because They Are Men Who Deserve Admiration.

There is still a baker's dozen of crowned heads in the world, but the king business has, during the past eighteen months of two years, suffered a slump which is ominous for the whole list.

Those who have gone out of business include the Czar of Russia, the German Kaiser, the Emperor and King of Austria-Hungary, the King of Bulgaria, Constantine of Greece, the Kings of Saxony, Bavaria and Wurttemburg, and numerous German dukes or kinglets who have found that their crowns will not stay on straight. It is true that the leadership of Serbia has been passed on to Prince Alexander as regent, but he doesn't seem to care much for such baubles as crowns, is a very democratic gentleman and more likely to be elected president of a Jugo-Slav republic than to dally very long with royal titles and trinkets.

The kings that are left are for the most part an inoffensive, harmless lot, holding their thrones more by courtesy and good will than by any real necessity for their existence. George V. of England, in his $14 suit, is determined to be a good mixer and succeeding pretty well. King Humbert is a more important factor in the direction of Italian affairs, having been active in the management of both civil and military affairs during the war. He is exceedingly popular now with his people. The King of Spain is a man of good intentions and average ability and is for the time being serving a good purpose in a country whose people are inclined to be turbulent.

The Emperor of Japan, of course, is in a class by himself with traditions of divine origin and regarded with feelings of reverence due to divinity. The Kings of Scandinavian countries are figures of some importance in their national life and are not threatened seriously as yet by the trend toward republican institutions so strongly pronounced at the present time. The Queen of Holland is a unique figure, warmly intrenched in the affections of the most conservative people in Europe, but straining the loyalty of her people just now by furnishing asylum to William Hohenzollern.

But the monarch who rises highest in the love and respect of his own people at the present hour is Albert of Belgium. This man, without relying upon any of the glitter and show of royalty, thoroughly democratic, sharing in the trials and sufferings of his own people, will return to his throne more firmly established in the place of authority than ever before.

But the war has been a severe test to that ancient and traditional type which "loves a lord," and no more certain outcome of the war is to be expected than the ultimate supplanting of royalty by democratic leaders, swing their position and power and influence to popular approval, and holding them subject to the continuance of that approval.

Mr. Maxwell Suffered Years With Pimples Healed by Cuticura

"I suffered for years with pimples and blackheads on my face. The latter one could hardly get a pin point between, and the former itched and burned so that I could tear my flesh to pieces. I could not sleep at night, and my face was just a mass of eruptions.

"I decided to give Cuticura Soap and Ointment a trial, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." (Signed) R. B. Maxwell, Upper Sackville, N. S., August 10, 1917.

You may think that because Cuticura does such wonderful work in soothing and healing severe itching and burning eczemas it is not adapted to the gentle uses of the toilet. On the contrary, that is just where it is most effective in preventing these serious skin troubles.

For Free Sample Each by Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. A, Boston, U. S. A." Sold everywhere.

Nelson at Spitzbergen.

Apropos of Spitzbergen, which has suddenly come into public notice as a prospective supplier of coal to Europe, it should not be forgotten that it was in Spitzbergen waters, on one of the Seven Sister Islands, that Horatio Nelson, then aged 14, had his famous adventure with the bear. The well-known story is told in Capt. Mahan's biography. That Nelson should have been with the Phipps Expedition at all was due solely to his ardent entreaties. Boys were not allowed, but he begged so hard that he might be allowed to accompany Capt. Lutwidge on the Carcass that this officer consented.

"As I fancied I was to fill a man's place," said Nelson in after years, "I begged I might be his cockswain; which, finding my ardent desire to go with him, Capt. Lutwidge complied with, and has continued the strictest friendship to this moment." The bear escapade on the part of the cockswain caused Capt. Lutwidge some hours of anxiety, and it is on record that, though he could not help but admire the boy's fearlessness, he was somewhat stern in his reprimand.

Gramatski.

The story of an original German spy is told by Le Mercure de France. It appears that this man, Gramatski, condemned to imprisonment by the Norwegian courts, and doing time in his cell, wrote an advanced mathematical treatise and composed an opera. Owing to his good conduct his sentence was reduced by half, and he was about to be liberated when he begged to be allowed to finish his sentence, declaring that he was engaged on a translation of Lund's treatise on mathematics, a work of national importance. Gramatski offered to play some of the airs of his opera on the flute for the entertainment of the court, but the court did not appear particularly inclined to hear them. The Norwegian authorities are considering what had best be done with Gramatski.

Workmen Who Have Titles.

A baronet's wife recently opened a hotel in the West End of London which is expected to be well patronized by those who like to feel that they are guests of the aristocracy. And this leads the Manchester Guardian to point out that before the war an authentic marchioness—the Marquis de Torcy d'Etallonde—kept an inn at Carnac, France, much frequented by tourists, and that many French aristocrats are driven to earn their livelihood in less pleasant and profitable callings than that of an innkeeper.

M. Xavier de Limal states in his "Nobles en Noblesse" that the present Marquis de Feligne is an omnibus conductor, the Comte de la Marche is a house painter, the Baron de Dosgrand works in a flour mill, the Baron de Soigny is a postman, and the Comte de St. Paul is a clerk. M. Jean de Retz of the same family as the famous cardinal, is grave digger in a Brittany village, and the Vicomte de Bardenenche (whose title dates from the eleventh century) used to clean lamps at the Gare du Nord for five francs a day.

Couldn't Manage French Names.

The British Tommies find the French names—especially when pronounced in the correct French manner—rather, difficult to remember. A certain regiment was given the name of the French town of Armandvilliers for a countersign one night. A soldier approached one of the sentries along toward midnight and was promptly challenged. "A friend with the countersign," he replied in proper form. "Advance and give the countersign," directed the sentry. The soldier stepped forward, began to scratch his head sheepishly, and at last said: "Blowed if I ain't forgot it!" "So have I," said the sentry. "Pass, friend."

Doctor Tells How To Strengthen Eyesight 50 per cent In One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Philadelphia, Pa. Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eye two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." It is sold in this city by Warne Drug Co. and Others.

New Year's Day.

During the past year there were only eighty-four days on which the banks were open all over the world. On every one of the other 281 days some nation was celebrating a civil or religious holiday, or observing the Sabbath.

Only one of those holidays is universal. This is New Year's Day and eleven different dates are observed by various countries as the beginning of a new year. Five Christian countries do not observe Christmas as a legal holiday.

Brazil leads the nations in the number of its holidays. It has eighty-four, and the United States is second with fifty-four. France observes eighteen formal holidays during the year, and Italy twenty-three. Among the other nations, Germany, it is presumed, will observe twenty days; Great Britain sixteen, Japan fifteen and Russia seventeen.

Among the favorite months for holidays the world over, November leads, with twenty-six out of its possible thirty days. May comes next with twenty-five.—Tit-Bits.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If your Back is aching or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water and eat less meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralise the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

The Railway Committee Met and Discussed the City's Transportation Problems

Effort Will be Made to Improve C. P.R. Service to This City—Street Railway Extensions Wanted in the South End.

BOARD OF TRADE

The first meeting of the Railway committee under the new Council met last night and discussed questions of vital interest to the citizens. Those present were Ald. Edgar (chairman), Aldermen Morrison, Taylor and Murray and Mayor Duncan.

The train service on the C.P.R. was thoroughly discussed and not only will an effort be made to have the service improved, but also to restore the Sunday afternoon Montreal train. Vice-President A. McTier of the C.P.R. lines will be asked to come to the city and have a discussion with the members of the committee.

Members of the Board of Trade will also be invited to interview Mr. McTier.

Street Railway Extension.

Ald. Edgar mentioned that the street railway extension from the end of the Charlotte street line to Patterson street had been completed. Cars have already been ordered, but the Hydro-Electric have no idea when they can start the service. He also thought that the line should be extended from Patterson street to meet the line in Browntown and also to extend the line down to the De Laval Company and link up a complete service.

From the Hydro Commission.

A letter was read from the Hydro-Electric Commission expressing a wish to meet the demands of the city, but also hinted that there was some divergence of opinion between the City Council, the Board of Trade and the citizens. However, they are willing to send an engineer to the city and discuss the question. Ald. Murray objected to calling in outside advice.

"The City Council have the supreme power in the city, and I think we can do it ourselves.

Both Labour aldermen thought that the Council should take the lead and leave the Board of Trade out.

A Close Corporation.

Mayor Duncan concurred with them and said that the Council should map out a comprehensive plan.

"We are the elected representatives of the people and we do not need to consult the Board of Trade, the Trades and Labour Council or any other organizations.

City Engineer Parsons will be asked to draw a plan of the further extension of the street railway which the Board will expect in the near future.

More Extensions.

A motion was passed asking the Hydro-Electric Commission to extend the street railway from Albert street to Lansdowne street, and from Lansdowne street to Lock street. Also to extend the railway from Patterson street to Chamberlen street, and also from Albert street to the De Laval. They will also be asked to consider a northern route around Aberdeen avenue and the Normal school.

"Do you think that the city should buy the street railway?" asked the chairman.

"We should let them run it till it is a paying concern. They can borrow money cheaper than we can," said the Mayor.

"The city keeps putting off all the time, and we never get anywhere. I think we should buy it," observed Ald. Murray.

DO NOT HESITATE.

Why put off such an important thing as bettering your seeing power. We are fully equipped to render you all the aid that glasses will give and assure you of a service that you will appreciate. Do not hesitate any longer but consult Dr. Lacey, 410 George street. Open on Wednesday evening.

NO CUT RATE.

When considering the fair prices obtained at the average grocer and then compare them with prices at The Groceteria at the old market arcade, you wonder why the latter can sell at so low a price. There is nothing to wonder at as you only pay for the best goods and the small cost of handing them out to you.

WAS KILLED BY THE SOLDIERS.

(Canadian Press.)

Liebknecht, who was shot nad killed on Thursday, did not attempt to escape from the escort of troops, but was shot through the forehead at a few paces distance by soldiers guarding him, according to a Copenhagen despatch. ## Escape From London Jail

Elroy George Was Being Held on Charge of Theft.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 18.—One of the most startling jail breaking escapes perpetrated in London since the escape of Texas Burdell ten years ago, was effected last night by a prisoner known as Elroy George.

George was taken into custody some days ago, charged with stealing an automobile owned by Kent Campbell of London, and another machine belonging to W. Wedlake, of Brantford.

Last night the Turnkey and night watchman of the county jail were engaged in the process of locking up for the night when they heard footsteps in the corridor beyond the tier of cells at which they were engaged. They raced to capture the prisoner, but he slammed the heavy barred door and locked both in. The turnkeys set up a lusty shout and attracted the matron, but while she was obtaining keys with which to let the custodians out, George smashed a locker, obtained keys and let himself out into the north exercise yard. Armed with an iron bar he came over the wall into the arms of a man and woman. Threats to kill them gave the escaping prisoner the right of way and he fled in the darkness south on Ridout street. A policeman, attracted to the scene, gave chase, but efforts to locate the prisoner proved futile.

HUM ATROCITIES ARE EXPOSED

Kill American Prisoners During Football Game—Bolshevik Want Peace.

AMERICAN HEADQUARTERS IN GERMANY, Jan. 16.—(By Courier to Nancy.)—Americans who were prisoners in Germany will make affidavits exposing a number of new German atrocities, Gen. Harris stated to-day. The worst of these occurred when Germans, without provocation, fired upon prisoners playing football, killing and wounding a number of them. The last of the American prisoners are now on their way home. Gen. Harris said a Commission has been appointed to assist in repatriating Russian, Siberian and Roumanian prisoners.

HUMBERT IS EXONERATED

Former Member of French Senate Has Been Under Investigation for Some Time.

BOUGHT INTEREST

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Jan. 18. — Investigations have established the falsity of the accusations made against Charles Humbert, who was charged with communicating to Germany the contents of two documents relative to national defence. Charles Humbert, a member of the French Senate, and former editor of the Paris newspaper "Le Journal," became involved during the trials of Bolo Pasha, who was executed for treason, and the directors of the Germanophile newspaper, the "Bonnet Rouge." Revelations during the inquiry into the Bolo Pasha case led to the arrest of M. Humbert, in whose newspaper Bolo Pasha had bought an interest with money that came from the German Foreign Office through banking houses in New York.

BOLSHEVIK ARE LEAVING CAPITAL

Uprising Forces Trotsky and Co. to Leave—Bolshevik in Esthonia Have Been Called Back to Help.

Special to The Examiner:

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 18.—Bolshevik forces are retreating in Esthonia on account of a counter revolution which has broken out in Petrograd, according to a despatch from Helsingfore, received here to-day. It is believed here that the Bolshevik Government may need strong forces to suppress the uprising and that this is the reason for calling the Esthonian army back.

Annual Meeting of St. Andrew's Sunday School

Gratifying Progress Made During the Year.

The annual meeting of St. Andrew's Sunday school was held last evening at the home of the Supt., Mr. J. A. McKone. There was a good attendance of the teachers and officers. The secretary's report showed a total enrollment of 330, including the cradle roll of 67, an average attendance of 167, a decrease of 7 from the 1917 report, caused chiefly by the influenza epidemic during the last three months. The treasurer's report showed an increase of $69.82 in income over 1917, an expenditure of $371.62, leaving a balance of $18.20. The following officers were elected for the present year: Supt., J. A. McKone; Asst. Supt., J. A. McNab; secretarys, Miss Edith Richardson and E. Walton; treasurer, J. E. Latimer; librarian, Miss Grace Evans; asst., Miss Marjorie Evans; electrians, Mr. G. Henry and G. Hill; supt. cradle roll, Miss M. Eaton; supt. primary dept., Mrs. Geo. Laing; asst., Miss Myra Evans.; supt. beginners' dept., Miss M. Rae; asst. supt., Miss H. Eaton; pianist, Mr. H. C. Trenear; asst., Miss Mae Shearer.

Supts. McKone and McNab expressed their appreciation of the valuable work that the teachers and officers had done through the past year, and hoped that the spirit of harmony that existed in St. Andrew's Sunday school would ever continue.

A social hour was spent after the business meeting, during which refreshments were served. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. and Mrs. McKone for a most delightful evening.

A $500 Fine Was Imposed on Faux

Sentence Was Handed Down This Morning by Police Magistrate Dumble.

COSTS ADDED

"I find that Faux sold liquor to Bourgon and find him guilty. He is fined $500 and costs ($514.10), or six months in jail with hard labour," was the sentence handed down this morning in police court by Magistrate Dumble.

Faux did not move a muscle when the sentence was read, but seemed somewhat relieved that the tension of the last few weeks was over.

In commenting on the case the Magistrate said the regrettable part of it was that two men had lost their lives, but Faux could not be made to pay for supplying these men with such a fatal concoction.

Faux is undecided whether he will go to jail or pay the fine.

Wants More Co-operation

Interesting Epistle From the Hydro-Electric Commission.

The appended letter was read at last night's meeting of the Railway Committee of the City Council:

Toronto,
December, 20, 1918

G. H. Duncan, Esq.,
Mayor,
Peterboro, Ont.

Dear Sir:—

Dear Sir,— As you are aware, the Commission for several months, has been making a study of traffic and operating conditions with a view to planning comprehensively for the future development of the electric railway.

The Commission is aware, also, that the Board of Trade and the City Council have been giving considerable thought and study to this question and it also seems evident that various private individuals have been more or less interested in the question. The general result, as near as we can learn from press comments and local reports, is that all the parties iterested are working along divergent lines and, instead of the evolution of plans satisfactory to all concerned, it would appear that opinion has not crystalized in any one direction.

The Commission is sincerely anxious to arrive at a solution of the problem which will be most completely in the interests of the citizens of Peterboro, as it is recognized that the Peterboro Railway is a purely local line and should be operated for local benefit. The general policy of the Commission has been, first, to give the very best possible service consistent with the earning power of the road and to provide additional transportation facilities strictly in accordance with this policy, taking fully into account the further development of growing sections of the city not at present served. There are many factors entering into the study of the systematic development of railway extensions, all of which should be taken into account by those qualified to do so locally.

Summing the matter up, we may say that the Commission is anxious to secure the benefit of the advice of valous local parties and in this connection takes the liberty of making the suggestion which it is hoped will be a constructive one, viz.: that a joint Committee should be appointed by the City Council and the Board of Trade when elected for the coming year, to thoroughly study the Street Railway situation and to recommend to the Commission a plan having the backing of both the City Council and the Board of Trade for future developments as well as present needs. The Commission will then have this plan studied in detail by its engineers in conjunction with the representatives of the joint Committee and it is hoped that a final plan can be reached which will meet with the approval of all concerned.

The Commission will be very greatly pleased to learn the views of your body concerning this suggestion and if adopted, to co-operate in the fullest possible way.

Yours truly
Hydro Electric Commission,
Frederick A. Gaby Chief, Engineer

First Session of Peace Conference

Formalities May Be Disposed of at the Initial Gathering—A Big Programme.

THE DELEGATES

(United Press.)

PARIS, January 18th. — The peace conference is convening for its first official session at 3 p.m., to-day.

Delegates representing 26 nations met in the famous clock hall of the Quai Dorsay. President Poincaire made the opening address. The peace delegates sat at a huge horse shoe shaped table, the secretaries at the smaller tables nearby.

This being the first session, it was open, and the newspaper correspondents were permitted to be present. None of the tremendous issues of the peace settlement were to be be taken up. The sitting was to be devoted to the formalities attendant to the convening of the most important gathering of statesmen in modern history. The gathering at which President Wilson, leading the peace delegation of the United States, intended to put through his League of Nations plan, and other measures, which he believed will stop wars and make the world safe for civilization.

A BIG PROGRAMME.

The formation of a definite policy toward Russia, involving possible recognition of the Russian Soviet government, indemnities to be collected from Germany, the final disposition of the German fleet, future of the German colonies, the regulation of national boundaries, the demand of Greece for Constantinople, the disposition of the Holy Land, Ireland's demand for Home Rule, under the principle of self-determination, adjustment of national boundaries along racial lines, freedom of the seas and reduction of armaments, were among the important questions confronting the peace majors as they assembled. The delegates present represented all the nations associated in war on Germany, and in addition, Peru, Ecquador, Uruguay and Bolivia, which severed relations with Germany.

The Central Powers were not represented. When the peace treaty has been drawn up the delegates representing the German government, and its former allies, will be asked in to sign.

When the conference starts regular proceedings, the League of Nations will be the first issue taken up. This will be done at the insistence of President Wilson. Premier Clemenceau is the one who is expected to bring it up for discussion.

THE DELEGATES.

United States—President Wilson, Secretary Lansing, Henry White and General Bliss.

Great Britain — Premier Lloyd George, Foreign Secretary Balfour, Chancellor Bonar Law, George N. Barnes.

France — Premier Clemenceau, Foreign Minister Pichon, Marshal Foch (as Generalissimo of the Allies.)

Italy—Premier Orlando, Foreign Minister Sonnino, General Diaz.

Japan—Viscount Chinda, Ambassador to Great Britain, Baron Matsui, Ambassador to France.

Belgium — Foreign Minister Hymans, Emile Vandervelde, Minister of Justice.

Greece—Premier Venizelos and Foreign Minister Politis.

Serbia—Premier Pashitch.

The faces of some of the diplomats were very grave as they waited for the moment of opening of the world's greatest peace conference. An honor guard saluted the commissioners as they entered.

FREQUENT CHEERING.

The crowds waiting outside had glimpses of motor cars, the flags of the nations that drushed Germany fluttering from trom as they whisked the delegates into the court yard. There was frequent cheering and applause.

Under the alphabetical arrangement by which the delegates were seated in the conference room, the Americans were placed at the head of the table, on the right hand of Premier Clemenceau. The other Commissioners were ranged about the big horseshoe table in alphabetical order.

Great doors leading to the clock hall were thrown open so that the diplomats and others invited to witness the initial sitting could observe

THE DAWN OF A NEW ERA

Interview With Premier Hughes of Australia—Is Opposed to Secret Diplomacy.

FIGHTING RECORD

(By John De Gandt—United Press).

PARIS, Jan. 18. — Australia as a free and an independent nation has its own peace demands for consideration at the Conference, Premier Hughes declared to-day in an interview with the United Press.

Australia, he announces, considers that it won its independence on the battlefields, and that, politically, it stands now where the United States stood at the end of its revolution.

It is in this spirit that it enters the Peace Conference with its own programme.

The recognition of the British Dominions by the Peace Congress marks the dawn of a new era, the Premier declared. It is taken to mean that the world recognizes Australia, Canada, South Africa, New Zealand, and India as autonomous nations, tied only by sentiment to the Motherland.

"Our fighting record surpasses that of any nation," he asserted. "Now we want self-determination."

Above Board.

Australia, Hughes made plain, throws its cards face upward upon the peace table. His committee, he said, being the most democratic and a firm foe of secret diplomacy, frankly and openly makes public its aims and desires in the great settlement.

Hughes announced Australia would demand—

Indemnities;
The Island of New Guinea;
A League of Nations with certain restrictions;
Military support to Poland, if that country is threatened;
A hearing on all questions concerning Europe or the Far East;

Australia, he declared, would oppose the freedom of the seas if this means taking Britain's supremacy from her;

Any restrictions upon the right of making whatever economic arrangements she pleases;

Further intervention in Russia.

"Australia," said Hughes, "feels that she stands politically to-day pretty much where the United States stood at the end of the revolution. She has won liberty on the fields of France, and deserves recognition as an autonomous nation.

"Australia lost nearly 60 thousand killed and 260 thousand wounded in the war. She spent a billion and a half dollars. She clothed her own troops in uniforms of wool grown in her country. Her fighting record surpassed that of any other nation.

"Now Australia wants self-determination. This means she insists on a policy of a 'White Australia.' We do not want promiscuous immigration."

We are a white nation in a sea of blacks. We might have the New Guinea islands which, beginning only eighty miles from our shores, stretch 1,800 miles toward Asia. They are full of possibilities of naval bases and U-boat nests if they pass into unfriendly hands.

An Indemnity.

We believe we ought to have an indemnity. We helped beat Germany, who wilfully forced the war, thereby saddling up a country with only 5,000 inhabitants, with a war debt which is a most frightful handicap to a new people like ourselves. If America had been so burdened in the first days of her independence, she would have been unable to make headway. Germany ought to pay indemnities to the utmost of her ability. Australia shining in proportion to the part she took in the war.

We believe in the League of Nations, but we must not impare the national rights of free government, and though the League would be a valuable instrument to maintain world peace, we must keep our powder dry.

I don't know precisely what freedom of the seas means, but Australia is surrounded by a coast line 12 thousand miles long—as long as the distance from Australia to England—and we are unable to protect this ourselves. Therefore we must depend on the British to oppose any plan taking away her naval supremacy.

NOTES OF THE CAMPAIGN

Headquarters for the Salvation Army Drive will be at the Royal Bank, during the three days of the canvass. The days are Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, of next week.

Don't forget the meeting in the Opera House on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. There will be a good programme, most interesting and profitable. The Band of the Army will make music. The Band of Songsters will sing. Short addresses will be given by Judge Huycke, Captain Widdifield, Adjutant McElhiney and Mr. Jos. Wearing. Altogether a very agreeable and helpful hour will be spent.

Special meeting of teams, captains, members, and all intimately concerned in the work of the campaign will be held at the Patriotic Fund rooms to-night, (Saturday), at eight o'clock. There are a number of lose ends to tie up, matters to arrange, allotment of districts, and gentral completing of organization. It will not take long, but is important.

A leaflet, containing much interesting comment on the objects of the Drive was distributed throughout the city, the committee being indebted to the kindness of the city newspapers, which folded into the evening issue copies, and thus had the matter reach directly the homes of the city. In addition the papers have been most helpful, and have placed at disposal of the Drive the Franchise of the papers, without money and without price. This access to publicity is characteristic of the Peterborough papers, and in this instance only adds to what they have done repeatedly, during the war years.

The teams will be announced on Monday.

THE RED SHIELD DRIVE.

The Salvation Army's Red Shield Fund drive, which will begin in Peterborough on Monday, is a movement that should meet with the fullest support from the City of Peterborough. The money is needed only for a continuance of the Army's splendid work among Canadian soldiers over there, but among those who have suffered as a result of the war over here. No other organization has a better record in war work than the Salvation Army; its work on behalf of the soldiers have been enthusiastically endorsed by the War Veterans' Associations throughout Canada and by returned soldiers generally. And there is surely no need of reminding Peterborough people of the work the Army carries on at home. It speaks for itself. No one is ever turned away from the Salvation Army, there is always a cheery welcome and a helping hand for those who are in distress.

The Salvation Army asks Peterborough for $15,000, to enable it to continue its work among our soldiers and among the dependents at home. This is the Army's first appeal; it is absolutely necessary now that the funds have been exhausted in carrying out the work that has already been accomplished. The Salvation Army Hostels already established in Canada have been a great blessing to returned soldiers; it is proposed to build many more of these in the principal cities of Canada. These homes are in demand, and the finances of the Army have been used to the limit in providing those already in operation. If more money is not provided the extension of this work will have to be dropped, and in view of the appreciation that has been shown of the institutions that have so far been established that would be a calamity.

The Examiner bespeaks on behalf of the canvassers who will begin their work on Monday morning a most cordial reception and a liberal response. Peterborough has never failed when called to support a patriotic movement, and in the appeal of the Salvation Army the people of Peterborough are being asked to support a movement that is worthy of the best that can be done for it. The Red Shield Drive should do what the Canadian troops have never failed to do—reach the objective.

PETERBOROUGH'S OWN BATTALION.

The announcement that Capt. C. R. Widdifield, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, is preparing at the request of officers and men of the unit, to write a history of the Peterborough County Battalion, will be received with approval and interest. The 93rd Battalion was the largest body of soldiers to leave Peterborough at one time for the front, it was largely trained in this city, and it was made up of Peterborough City and County boys, so that the people of this district have a peculiar interest in the battalion, and a history such as is being undertaken by Capt. Widdifield, should be in keen demand. The general public knows but little of the adventures of the 93rd Battalion after it went overseas. People know of course that it was broken up in England, and that the men were drafted into units at the front. They know, also too well that many met death in France, but as to what battalions they were incorporated in on going to the front, and as to their service there, there is but a vague general knowledge.

Captain Widdifield proposes to supply the missing links in the chain. He intends if possible to write the history of the individual members of the battalion, giving their full names, regimental number, the date of their enlistment, the date of discharge, service in England, the name of the unit with which they served in France, and the length of such service. The record will also state whether or not the men were wounded.

Much of this information will have to come from the parents or wives of the soldiers, especially of those who have made the supreme sacrifice. The task is a big one, and it is hoped that the members of the 93rd Battalion who are now in Peterborough, and the relatives of those who are still away, or have been killed, will communicate with Captain Widdifield as soon as possible in order that the necessary information may be secured.

Captain Widdifield, who went overseas as officer-in-command of A Company of the 93rd Battalion, and reverted to the rank of lieutenant to go to France, is well qualified by his conection with the battalion, and in other ways, to carry out the task of carrying such a history to a successful termination. It is not a money-making scheme, but is undertaken in a desire to supply the complete story of the career of the unit of which the people of Peterborough have been so justly proud. Captain Widdifield should receive every assistance in this movement.

WHY FUNDS ARE NEEDED.

As usual when a patriotic campaign is being held, there are complaints from some people, the majority of whom are anxious to find an excuse for not giving, that the work for which support is being asked, is something for which the Government should assume responsibility. Talk of this kind may be expected in connection with the Red Shield Drive of the Salvation Army, and therefore the remarks of Thomas Moore, president of the Dominion Trades and Labour Congress, in this regard, are of much interest. Mr. Moore pointed out that the Salvation Army is asking for funds for four main purposes—hostels for returned soldiers; emergency, receiving and maternity homes for women and children; soldiers' families' home visitation fund, and to maintain overseas comforts until the last soldier is home. Labour, Mr. Moore pointed out, believed that some of these duties rightfully belonged to the Government — they were Government responsibilities. But the labour men realized that Government machinery could not be created in time to take care of the work, and because of that realization they are throwing themselves wholeheartedly behind the campaign of the Salvation Army believing that organization to be better able than any other body to carry it forward.

That is a splendid spirit and should overcome any talk that the campaign should not be supported because the work that is being undertaken should be handled by the Government. The plain facts of the case are that the Government is not ready to assume this work; and could not make the necessary arrangements in time to be of any service if it was decided that the responsibility should be met. Of the necessity of what is being done by the Army there can be no dispute. The drive in Peterborough should be a winner from start to finish.

DOMINION Express Money Orders are on sale in five thousand offices throughout Canada.

THE BANK OF COMMERCE.

At the annual meeting of the shareholders of The Canadian Bank of Commerce, the general manager, Sir John Aird, stated that the year just past has been marked by the jubilees of the President and the Vice-President, in their respective callings. On July 24th, the President, Sir Edmund Walker, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the day on which he entered the service of the bank, and a few weeks earlier, on May 19th, Mr. Z. A. Lash, the Vice-President, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his call to the Bar in Ontario. Both officials still retain vigor and enthusiasm, not only in affairs connected with the bank, but in those of the nation.

The earnings of the bank, to which reference was made at the time the statement was published and which amounted to $2,850,000 or $219,000 more than a year ago, justified the feeling of pride expressed by Sir John Aird in the ability of the directors to maintain the premier place among Canadian banks in this very important respect, in so far as the shareholders are concerned. It may be added that while the aggregate of profits is somewhat larger they have not increased in proportion to the actual volume of service to the public as shown by the comparison of earnings with average assets utilized, the proportion of the former to the latter being seven-tenths of 1 per cent. as compared with 1.27 per cent. in 1913, the last year prior to the war, and 1.37 per cent. ten years ago.

It will be recalled that in 1915, $1,000,000 was set aside to provide for the depreciation of securities, and at that time the hope was expressed that this sum or a part of it might be recovered at the end of the war, and it was naturally a source of satisfaction to the shareholders that this prediction has been fulfilled; consequently the entire sum has been added to profit and loss account and distributed. Sir John pointed out that $1,500,000 had been added to rest account, making that equal to the paid-up capital, and in this a goal was reached which had been aimed at for many a day, but which had called for long years of tireless striving before it could be considered as being fairly won. Among the accomplishments of the year just ended, nothing stands out with greater credit to the bank than the extraordinary result of its efforts on behalf of the Victory Loan of 1918. Of the total amount subscribed, $680,000,000, 15 per cent. came from the bank and its customers or $104,543,000, represented by 150,773 individual subscriptions. In addition to this accomplishment, the bank has assumed its full share in financing the Dominion Government and the Imperial Munitions Board requirements.
